'LOVE IS NEWS!'

"Love Is News" Is Good Movie

Does Not Picture Newspaper Life

By ROY BACUS

"Love Is News" is a good moving picture but very few reporters have the romantic and easy going life pictured for Steve Leyton (Tyrone Power), ace on the staff of the New York Daily Express.

According to the movie, "Love Is News" the reporter appears to spend most of his time trying to get his managing editor Martin J. Canavan, (Don Ameche), to believe his stories that he Leyton, has been made the victim of a joke by Toni Gateson, (Loretta Young), heiress to fabulous fortunes.

After working a ruse he obtains an interview with Toni, who denies that she is not to marry Le Comte de Guyon (George Sanders). Discovering Leyton's hoax, Toni who has been a victim of merciless publicity all of her life, decides upon a scheme of retaliation. She tells other reporters that she is not to marry Guyon but Lyton.

Then the fun starts.

Leyton denies the engagement Toni insists that it is so—that forms the theme of the play.

As we said, it is a good movie, but newspaper life as a rule is not the kind found in "Love Is News". If you believe that reporters do not work hard but get the easy breaks as the movie reporters do, we invite you to visit our office or make the daily "beat" with us and find out differently.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

CHARLES D. CROWLEY

manages the Globe Theatre in Vineland, N. J., for Warner Bros. Charlie has been connected only with his present organization and the Stanley Co. of America, starting in as clerk, bookkeeper, auditor, editor and then manager. If you've been following our pages closely, Crowley, you know how active the Warner men are in our section, so you'd better get in line and send stuff in.

is the assistant manager of the Crewe Theatre in Crewe, Va., a locally owned house. Sam started as doorman, at the age of fourteen, working after school hours, and then learned to operate a machine. Later he was in the advertising department and since that time has also learned how to book pictures. He has never worked for another outfit and is happy in his present work.

is down in Morgantown, N. C. acting as assistant manager at the Alva Theatre, an independent. Morgantown has never been represented in our pages and the job of changing that status is going to rest on your shoulders, Erwin. How about getting out the old typewriter and giving us an account of your recent exploitations at the Alva?

manages the Keystone Theatre, Williamsport, Penna. for the Comerford Circuit. Jim started as usher in 1931 at the Capitol in that city and for the first couple of years worked at everything around the house from usher to sign display work, artist, etc. and then from chief usher to assistant manager still at the same house. Comerford is the only outfit Jim has worked for and was transferred from the Capitol and promoted to his present job.

is the assistant manager of the Midwood Theatre in Brooklyn for the Century Circuit. Well, Battersby, you're close enough to club headquarters to drop in and get personally acquainted next day off, so we'll be expecting you soon. And remember we shall also be looking forward to contributions from the Midwood.

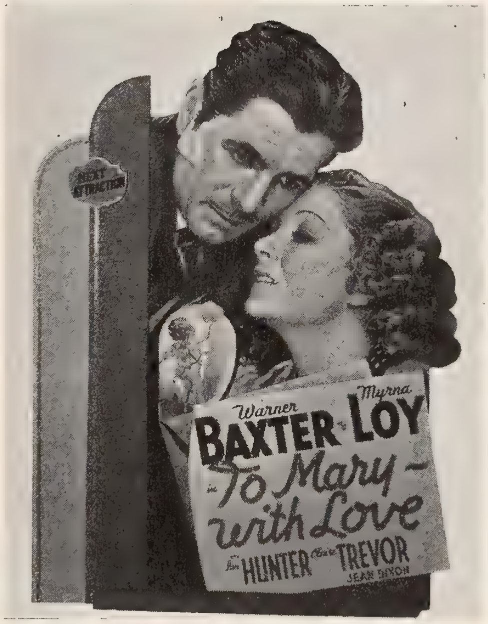
GEORGE J. McCOMBER

at the Lyceum Theatre, Port Arthur, Ont. Can. a Famous Players house, is manager there and since he says he is an avid reader of our book and doesn't miss an issue we'll have to remind him that signing up in the club is the beginning of an obligation. You are expected to keep in touch with us Gordon so that accounts of your activities at the Lyceum may be duly recorded. With George, his assistant GORDON E. CARSON has also sent along his application, so there's certainly no reason why with two members in the house we shouldn't be a'hearing.



Forwarded by C. T. Spencer, Capitol Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Can., was this display done by the art department under the supervision of Ernest Marchell. They report that 90% of the display is a three sheet cutout which was dressed up with board, a spot of tinsel and a little paint.

Well, with as active a member as your boss, John, you certainly must know what makes the wheels of the club go round and we are going to count on you to keep them going.

CROP PROSPECTS CHEER MIDWEST EXHIBITORS

Sound Equipment Houses Report One Out of Ten Theatres Is Installing New Apparatus

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH

in Chicago

Fall days will be happy days, in the opinion of midwestern exhibitors, pointing to the crop prospects for the coming summer as being the best in many a year.

In Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Missouri, Ohio, Indiana and other Middlewest states the prospects for "bumper" crops are very bright. Plenty of rain has brought about much needed moisture and "heavy stands" of corn in the cornbelt make it highly probable that the crop crop this year will be the biggest in the past ten years. And what makes it better is that the prices for corn are higher than anytime in the past fifteen years.

This combination of good crop prospects and increased prices has brought about a note of optimism the past few weeks that has permeated throughout the central states.

All types of businesses in the midwest are gratified. Bankers and merchants have picked up the gay attitude now shown by the farming class and look forward to the return of toilers of the soil as cash buyers instead of "traders" in produce.

Theatremen, most of them exhibitors in the small towns throughout the Middlewest, have noted this change and report that business is already on the increase. The days of playing only westerns on Saturday night are back stronger than ever as the farm folk come to town and take time off from shopping to catch a "picture show."

One middlewestern exhibitor called conditions the best in years.

"I keep some chickens at home," he said, "and now I have to pay $1.10 per bushel for corn. A couple of years ago I paid 26 cents a bushel for corn and it was harder for me to put out that much money then than it is now when corn is much higher. Yes, sir, I look for good times to return here to Iowa and the other midwestern states."

Theatremen who have been just able to keep their theatres operating the last three years are now finding business steadily increasing.

Another sign of the times is the fact that theatremen are spending money for repairs and alterations that they had intended to take care of long ago. New theatres are being built in the smaller towns to replace outmoded houses.

Reports from sound equipment companies disclose that new apparatus, which was greatly needed, is being installed in one out of every ten theatres in the midwest. As for new equipment such as seats, lighting fixtures, new fronts and marquees, many theatres have made these changes. It is reported that more than fifty per cent of the theatres in the Midwest have made improvements in the past year.

And more of this is to come if the prospects for big crops and higher market prices continue. In the Middlewest it is the farmer that sets the pace. If he does well times are better.

Consequently everyone in the cornbelt is hoping for plenty of rain and warm weather so that the corn crop will be of the bumper variety.

Games Resumed By Loew's, RKO In New York

Affiliated circuits in New York have announced that they will resume chance game operation in all their houses because of the continuation of giveaways by independent exhibitors and small circuits.

The RKO, Loew's, Randforce, Skouras and Consolidated circuits will operate Screeno in their metropolitan theatres, starting June 19th. Loew's and RKO dropped the games two months ago and the other circuits reduced their use of them.

As all Bank Night agents and distributors were informed that Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., owner of the game, would hold a two-day convention at the Hotel Broadmore, Colorado Springs, Colo., starting June 25, the Illinois Supreme court this week denied the petition for a rehearing of the Iris theatre of Chicago bank night case. The court held that the game was illegal in a decision handed down last April. Assistant Corporation Counsel William Daly of Chicago, upon hearing of the court's decision, said that the 46 theatres, found guilty of violating the state's anti-lottery laws, will now have to pay fines levied against them by Chicago courts.

On the other hand, the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of Omaha, composed of 29 theatres operating Bank Night, were confident this week that the Nebraska supreme court's action in reserving decision on Attorney General Richard Hunter's petition for a temporary injunction means that gift drawings will not be disturbed until the fall term. Former Attorney General William Wright, appearing for the Omaha exhibitors, contended that the supreme court was without jurisdiction because "adequate remedy" could not be obtained in the district court. He also argued that the tribunal could not issue an injunction because it has not been determined as yet whether Bank Night is a lottery as charged by Mr. Hunter.

The arrest in Elizabeth, N. J., this week of Jack Brothers, Charles H. Traub and Carl Zingele at the Elmora theatre for defrauding Bank Night through a sleight-of-hand trick, revealed that Mr. Brothers had defrauded local theatres of more than $12,000, according to the police. Each of the men was fined $100 and given 90 days in jail.

With a girl accomplice the men visited the Elmora last Wednesday night. The girl wore a flesh-colored ring with a ticket numbered 1697 concealed beneath it. Mr. Traub is said to have run through the lobby register until he came to the number, but found another name written opposite it. He erased this name and wrote his alias, "Charles Davis," over the erasure. The group then separated upon entering the theatre and when the customary volunteer was sought to draw the number, the accomplice of the men stepped up on the stage. As she dipped her right hand into the box, police assert, she used her thumb to loosen the ring from her index finger. At the same instant she secured the ticket beneath it and drew it forth triumphantly. The manager had no sooner read the number when Mr. Traub shouted: "It's mine." He wanted the money immediately but was told to return the next day and be paid by check. The manager inspected the register that night and detected the erasure and notified the poilce.

The Alabama court of appeals has taken under advisement a suit testing the legality of theatre Jack-Pots and Bank Night. The suit came to the court from Tuscaloosa County, where a theatre Jack-Pot was held to be a lottery, and Cecil B. Grimes, operator, was fined $200.

Philadelphia newspapers were notified this week by the postmaster there to eliminate direct or cryptic references in advertising copy to Bank Night and lotteries of all sorts. Some theatres have been using such phrases as "Tonight's the Night," "It Pays to Go to the Blank Theatre," and the like in advertisements to indicate the nights on which the games are held.

43 Chicago Theatres Must Pay Chance Game Fines

Forty-six Chicago theatres will have to pay fines for operating chance games in violation of the law. Last week the Illinois supreme court denied a petition for a rehearing of the Iris theatre banknight case. This makes the fines of $15, including costs, against these theatres, payable to the city.

The Supreme Court upheld a ruling of a lower court that banknight was in violation of the city ordinance regarding chance games. This decision spells the doom of banknight and similar games in this city and also will have a bearing on the operation of such games downstate.

National Decency Legion Classifies Six New Pictures

The National Legion of Decency this week approved, of six pictures reviewed, four for general patronage and two for adults. Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Affairs of Cappy Ricks," "Come On Cowboys," "The Devil Is Driving," "Meet the Missus." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Fly Away Baby," "Parnell."

Hawley Starts Laboratory

General Movie Service has been formed in Detroit to engage in processing and laboratory work by Milo J. Hawley, formerly in charge of the slide film department of the Jam Handy Pictures Service.

Harry Grampp has assumed his new duties as general manager of the A. L. Hanline circuit in central and western Illinois.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Atkinson, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

We drove in here to see our old friend A. G. Miller, who operates the Lyric theatre. That is, he used to operate it until he and Jim Farley went into partnership in the post office business. Since then he has delegated the operation of the theatre to his father, Al Miller.

A. G. is kept pretty busy looking after the customers' mail, since he and Jim have the only post office in Atkinson, and Atkinson gets a lot of mail.

Al Miller used to be pretty busy looking after the patrons of the Lyric until he fell down stairs a few weeks ago and broke one of his hips, since which time he has been on vacation and has formed an intimate acquaintance with the local M. D., but right now we are glad to say that he is much improved and will soon be back on the job.

We went up and called on Al. We found him sitting in a rocking chair with a cigar in his mouth and the MOTION PICTURE HERALD in his hands and the language he was using relative to a certain colyumnist would hardly be proper for use here. He started to tell us about the number and size of the trout he caught in Brush creek and he probably would have caught all the trout in the creek if we hadn't stopped him by telling him that this is the closed season on trout. Then he switched to shooting mallard ducks on "Annie's Puddle." Annie's Puddle is the name given on the map to a small lake in the sandhills south of Atkinson, and it was here that he shot so many ducks that he had to commandeer a government truck and one of the P.W.A. boys to haul them into town. We are convinced that there is no use for any local talent to try and get the belt away from Al.

At O'Neill we stopped to call on Georgia Racely, who operates the O'Neill popular playhouse, but Georgia was not at the theatre. Then we went to her home and she was not there. Our guess is that she was out some place to a bridge party, as these O'Neill folks are pretty strong on bridge. Georgia missed seeing a mighty fine gentleman (one just left as we called), and the next time we go to O'Neill we hope the bridge party will all have gone to the theatre, including Georgia.

The superintendent of our high school is occupying our home and we can't get it until he leaves next Monday. In the meantime we are living at the hotel and there are ten superintendents of that "shelterbelt" living here, or probably they are inspectors. Anyhow they have been sent out here to inspect the trees on the "belts." We judge that none of them is a lieutenant or captain as none of them is wearing spurs. We understand that they are drawing from $140 a month to $300 and all expenses paid.

If we hadn't got a big rain here last night it is likely the town could have got rid of a lot of its dogs, as it has several dozen it could have spared very handily.

We started to drive over to Creighton, Verdigris, Center and Niobrara today and when we got as far as Brunswick we learned that we had to take a detour of five miles on account of some road work on the highway.

This detour was not a subject fit for discussion at the Ladies' Aid Society because it was made up largely of mud holes caused by a big rain the night before. We drove through mud holes for about two miles and became so disgusted that we turned around and came back home.

The town of Niobrara is located close to an Indian reservation and one can see lots of Indians in the town every day and it is on this reservation where the government built a number of cottages for the Indians to live in, but we have been told that instead of living in them they pitch their tepee outside and live in them and stable their ponies in the house. You know that Indians are strong for ponies; they generally have from two to six apiece and they are also 100 per cent for dogs and it is nothing uncommon for a family to have from three to a dozen.

They regard stewed dog as a delicacy and they serve them at all important functions as we do turkey. They tell us that an Indian will trade anything he has for a dog, except one of his ponies, and we have been told that he would even trade his squaw for a fat Newfoundland bulldog. Their affinity for dogs reminds us a whole lot of Uncle Leazer Ziggs back in Indiana. Uncle Leazer had a foxhound that he called "Old Beller," and Old Beller had a habit of sleeping on the kitchen floor and Aunt Polly would stumble over him and then kick him out of the house, but finally her patience became exhausted and she said to Uncle Leazer, "Say, Leazer, I'm getting sick of this old pothound under my feet all the time, you have got to get rid of him." And so one day Uncle Leazer went over to one of the neighbors and when he came back he said to Aunt Polly, "Well, Polly, I sold Old Beller today to Zeb Watkins for fifty dollars." This was good news to Aunt Polly and she said, "Good for you Leazer. Did you get the money for him?" And Uncle Leazer replied, "Yeah; that is, I didn't just exactly get the cash for him but he paid me in pups. He gave me five pups at ten dollars a pup for him."

We can well remember back when we heard the rat-ta-ta-tat of the blacksmith's hammer on the anvil and the jingle of the sleigh bells, but these have given away to the honk of the horn and the agony of the radio jazz orchestras. Speaking of jazz orchestras—but then we'll skip that for now.

On our way home from touring the southern part of the state we stopped at Genoa to call on Henry and Ma Peterson, who operate the Genoa theatre. Of course Ma Peterson does the most of the work around the place while Henry runs a jackrabbit train from Columbus, Nebraska, to several northwestern points. When Henry gets off his run he goes back to Genoa and helps Ma operate the theatre, unless the catfish are biting in the Loupe river, and if they are then the bulk of the work is loaded onto Ma, and Ma, having a somewhat delicate constitution, makes it pretty tough on Ma.

You are no doubt all of you familiar with a district court's decision at Beatrice, Nebraska, declaring Bank Night a lottery and in violation of the state statute and that this decision will stand as an interpretation of the law until it is reversed by the supreme court.

When we were in Omaha recently we were told that the decision only affected those living in that judicial district and that some of the theatres in Omaha would continue to operate Bank Night. Well, maybe they will, and if they do it will be all right with us, but it has always been our understanding that Omaha was still a part of the state of Nebraska.

There was a bill before our legislature requiring a person to pay his personal property taxes before the country treasurer could issue him a license for his automobile. There was some sense to that bill, but it is quite evident that politics got into it and some legislators were afraid of offending some voters.

Vol. 127, No. 12 June 19, 1937

SLAPSTICK WORLD

AN especially rich and nutty flavour is pervading the columns of the daily press these days. In major rank as news was the revelation of Italian government dictation to the press, with detailed instruction on what to print, what not to print, what to say about whom—with no attention to facts indicated. It makes one feel that Mussolini is another Benvenuto Cellini, without the glamour. . . . In New York Mr. Sinclair Lewis and Sidney Howard, invited to supply a German dramatic producer with proof of their Aryan ancestry, solemnly informed him that they were in truth Sinclair Levy and Sidney Horowitz. . . . The biggest attention that the metropolitan press has ever given a flower has gone to the Krubi, a giant tropical specimen in a botanical garden. It got the space because it stank. That's true to the pattern of journalism. There's little space for violets. . . . Speaking of violets, Elaine Jacobs Barrie Barrymore achieved the news columns again through the reported efforts of the Barrymore family to suppress a one-reel picture, said to star the lady, under the title of "How to Undress Before Your Husband." Anyway, the Blythe family can contend they saw the name Barrymore first. . . . Herr Hitler is reported by the United Press to have staged a formal out-throwing of Leni Riefenstahl, once his social favorite and "czarina of German movieland," on the ground she is non-Aryan. That was a device that did not occur to bluff old Henry VIII, another direct action leader. Anyway Miss Riefenstahl is red-headed, so things just couldn't last forever. . . . The American Medical Association in convention heard from a surgeon who removed the frontal lobes of a patient's brain and thereby converted him into a star salesman. This tends to indicate that to be born about half-witted puts one more perfectly in tune with the customers. One might, on this scientific authority, revise Mr. Carl Laemmle's advice of years ago to make it read: "Use only half the brains God gave you."

A COLOR TRIUMPH

THE recording of the coronation of George VI in Technicolor as a documentary feature by Fox Movietone News organization is to be rated the most significant application of the instrument of the motion picture to the world's events since that spectacular and precedent-making picturing of the Durbar at Delhi by Charles Urban, now nearly three decades ago.

Not many of the screen's pioneering and tentative efforts are so promising of public interest and approval as this. There would seem excellent probability that by reason of its special appeals and historic significances, the coronation picture will do more for the general advancement of color acceptance than any other recent effort. This picture offers no fictions of fact or tint.

In this production there can be no quibbling about the essential relation of color to the narrative. The pageantry and ritualism of the crowning of a King of England is made of the tints of flashing jewels, gleaming gold and the ruby and purple of velvet. The march of the pomp of power on paths of glory is not to be recreated in black and white.

SYNTHETIC WAR

SOMEONE not so long ago, and probably it was the esteemed and facile Mr. Merlin H. Aylesworth, coined a soothing phrase anent motion pictures and radio including the words "a wedding of the arts". Sometimes we feel a bit canterbury about that wedding, but wedding is no word for what Bausch & Lomb, of Rochester, N. Y., optical experts to this and many other industries, have just done. By the use of a camera-obscura on the ground and a trigger controlled radio ejaculator on a plane in the air, synthetic target practice is now being conducted by the Army Air Corps bombing units. A radio impulse takes the place of a $750 bomb. It makes synthetic war with poisonous accuracy. Cinema camera men will be entertained by the dimensions of this new Bausch & Lomb lens, with a diameter of 9¼ inches, equivalent focal length of 168 inches and working at f:18.

THE SCREEN'S JOB

A PRESS DISPATCH reporting on the Central Conference of American Rabbis at Columbus, in Ohio, announces the appointment of "a committee to induce Hollywood to produce more movies of a religious nature."

Both the motion picture and society will be better served if the amusement screen devotes itself exclusively to the production of entertainment by standards consistent with common decency and is not concerned with matters that pertain properly to religious institutions.

The theatre can not perform any of the functions which belong to parents, teachers, pastors or guardians. It will be quite enough if the motion picture can properly attend to its own business of purveying entertainment, and entertainment without "message." A great many customers resent messages.

"CELLULOID CAT"

IT was the summer of 1912 when Mr. William A. Brady, in the heat of a drive of the stage against the nascent art of the cinema, proclaimed in the public press: "We have the movies on the run."

Within three years the movies had Mr. Brady on the payroll.

Now, again, the other day in New York, before the first convention of the Legitimate Theatre, sponsored by the American Theatre Council, Mr. Maxwell Anderson shook his mane and roared: "Pictures are too ephemeral in time and material to create an art. The test of an art is endurance. . . . The films have as much chance against the Theatre as a celluloid cat chasing an asbestos rat through Hell."

It is fairly apparent, one would think, that the diehards of the stage have nothing to worry about concerning the status of their medium—which they think is an art. That is why they are holding meetings to curse the screen and combat it.

Dramatists and showmen are not commonly hampered with

much analytical capacity. They are more often successes because they feel than because they think. That is why the defenders of the stage think they are the noble protagonists of an art when really they are trying to save some outmoded machinery. The art involved is the dramatic conveyance and purveyance to the consumers of certain enjoyable emotional stimuli and vicarious experiences. The screen appears to do this so well that the customers prefer it, and find it for various mechanical and social reasons considerably more available.

THE stage and screen alike are merely devices for the recreation or simulation of events. Neither is sacred, or even significant, save as it communicates. The screams of the defenders of the stage remind one of the rather recent wailings of the musicians belittling recorded and radio-transmitted music. Once the weavers of England struck against the power loom. It is within the memory of many a newspaperman that the printers violently demonstrated against the linotype.

Mr. Anderson says, "The test of an art is endurance. . . . " If the stage is enduring so nicely, what is all the shouting about? Also, to some observers it would appear that the screen has been doing some fairly capable enduring for the forty-two years since its founding.

Probably, however, one can render a greater service to American art tradition, not by discussing Mr. Anderson's views, but by correcting his metaphor. The original, orthodox and correct version, contributed to the folk-talk about 1895, was: "A celluloid dog with candle legs, chasing an asbestos cat through Hell." That was, in those days, reckoned a measure of minimum probability. It is painful to have these poetic young dramatists garble the phrase book.

Intimidation

Threats leveled at Hollywood film players for their appearances in pictures which may turn out to be undesirable to Nazi policy, has finally brought action by the State Department, which has obtained an agreement from the Hitler government that no further activities will be undertaken by German consuls in this country.

The climax came after threats to players in Universal's "Road Back." See page 16.

Chance Games Return

Opponents of change games in theatres received a blow in New York last week with the announcements of both the Loew's and RKO circuits that Screeno would be returned to their theatres. The other independent circuits, which had reduced the practice somewhat when the two major circuits discontinued the games some weeks ago, immediately made plans to increase the games as well. Meanwhile, chance game controversies all over the country, especially in Texas, where Bank Nights were declared illegal, attracted attention.

Settlement But

The Hollywood strike, seven weeks old and nearing settlement for the last two weeks, finally ended with painters, scenic artists and makeup men returning to work under a promise of a 100 per cent union shop by July 1st. In other branches of the industry the American Federation of Labor, through the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, turned to intensive organization of unions for exchange and theatre employees.

The Hollywood agreement and reports of the situation nationally are covered in the story on page 13.

"De-Icing"

The new plan of title registration of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., was not presented to the organization's board of directors for ratification this week as expected, and since the board does not meet again until September, action on the proposal was therefore delayed until then. The extension of the protection period on currently registered pictures from 1935 to 1933 is said to have delayed any action before the board.

Details of the new plan are found in the story on page 18.

Munro on Doyle

Hoyt's Theatres was not concerned in the internal fight on the board of Greater Union Theatres which resulted in the retirement of Stuart Doyle as head of the company and as a director of General Theatres under which the two circuits are associated in Australian exhibition, according to Charles E. Munro, Hoyt's executive. Mr. Munro is now in New York discussing a continuation of the General Theatres set-up with his principal, Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox.

The Australian circuit manager's quotations on Mr. Doyle's resignation and his views on various other aspects of the industry in Australia are reported on page 69.

The U.A. Option

Motion Picture Herald has a letter from Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of United Artists Corporation, in which he denies a report that he has been in opposition to the option of purchase granted to Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda.

"The matter of giving an option was the exclusive business of the stockholders of the company. I am not a stockholder. My part in the discussion was merely advisory."

Dr. Giannini says: "Be good enough to quote me as saying that I was in favor of the option."

Conventions' Finis

Next week will mark the end of the motion picture's sales convention season for 1937-'38 product with the meetings of GB Pictures in New York and Columbia Pictures in Hollywood. Meanwhile, Paramount and United Artists met this week as Republic Pictures along with Warners held regional meetings. Principal Pictures, General Pictures, Associated Artists and Major Productions revealed also, this week, plans for the coming season.

Details of the convention plans of GB and Columbia, along with other sales news, are found in the story on page 49.

56 from RKO Radio

RKO Radio Pictures held its annual sales convention this week in Los Angeles, where the management announced a program consisting of 56 features and 198 short subjects, including Pathe News, for 1937-38. S. J. Briskin, production chief, told the salesmen that individual picture budgets would be abandoned in the new season, in order to eliminate whatever production tendencies there may be at the studio toward the gradation of pictures.

RKO's new product lineup is described on page 45.

Culver City "Filmland"

Culver City has changed the direction of its drive to garner part of the fame that is Hollywood's by changing its name to a combination of "Hollywood" and "city," and Culver City voters will be asked to approve "Filmland" as the new name for the town.

That became known when directors of the local chamber of commerce were reported to have compromised in the fight to take the cognomen "Hollywood" for the town, which is outside of Los Angeles and contains within its bounds the studios of MGM, Selznick International (Pathe) and Victory.

With the new name "Filmland" approved, the Culver City boosters will start a drive to beautify the place and erect a sort of museum to store relics of the industry.

Near East Market

More than 475,000,000 persons in the Near East never have seen a motion picture, and Americans eventually would develop a vast market for their own product in those lands if they would cooperate in development of the indigenous, or domestic, production, in the opinion of Del Goodman, Far Eastern sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox.

William F. Crouch, in Chicago, writes of a between-trains interview with Mr. Goodman, who had come from his headquarters in the Orient to receive the Sidney R. Kent sales award at the company's convention in Los Angeles. Story on page 50.

Government Quota

The British Government, through the Board of Trade, disclosed as its proposal for quota provisions of the new Films Act a ratio which would start at 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors, increasing gradually for ten years to 30 and 25 per cent. The official proposal came after the three trade sections failed to agree on stipulations and was received, for the most part, favorably.

Bruce Allan reports the story from London on page 72.

United Artists' 36

United Artists will release 36 features, a minimum of 10 of which will be in color, George J. Schaefer told delegates at the company's eastern sales convention in New York. The announcement, presaged by a release from the coast two weeks ago, lists titles from Samuel Goldwyn, Walter Wanger, David O. Selznick, Charlie Chaplin and Alexander Korda.

A report of the convention appears on page 47.

Centralizing

Brookings Institute this week recommended the centralization of all government motion picture producing agencies under one division, as provided in a bill now before Congress, introduced by William T. Schulte, Representative from Indiana.

Under the legislation, motion pictures would be produced for all branches of the federal government by the Public Printing Office in the same manner as that bureau now cares for printing requirements.

Brookings Institute has been conducting an investigation on the subject for more than a year for Senator Byrd of Virginia, under Senate Resolution No. 217, which created a select committee to investigate the executive agencies of the government with a view to coordination.

Exhibitors Convene

Exhibitor organization activities this week centered around the annual conventions of the MPTO of Virginia, Theatre Owners of Mississippi, the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners and the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association.

Details are reported on page 64.

Admission Tax Stays

Walter Vincent, representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, returned to New York this week from Washington where he attended conferences with representatives of the Treasury Department and said that there probably would be no extension of the present federal admission tax up to 50 cents. Pennsylvania also attracted attention as chain stores began to seek court assistance from the recently signed bill calling for heavy taxation on theatre chains as well as chain stores.

Legislation is discussed on page 52.

Mexican Strike

by JAMES LOCKHART

in Mexico City

As a protest against the expulsion of two labor agitators in the state of Sonora, 250,000 organized workers throughout Mexico went on a one-hour strike Tuesday. The walkout forced theatres to forego their supper show and cost exhibitors about $5,000 in addition to the annoyance of having to rearrange programs.

Testing Sound

Continuing its program for raising sound quality both in projection and production, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences this week started compilation of a test reel of sound dialogue and music from each of the eight large studios, to be sent to exhibitors everywhere for use in checking and maintaining sound quality.

"Bigger" Film Era

Paramount Pictures concluded its annual sales convention this week at the Hotel Ambassador and sent its delegates back to their territories with from 50 to 60 pictures scheduled for next season, 22 of which will be in the "million dollar" class and which, according to Adolph Zukor's address to the meeting, should earn more money than the entire lineup of Paramount for the preceding year.

The convention details are on page 40 and a report of a directors' meeting at which a profit for April of $786,000 was disclosed and a contract with Mr. Zukor approved is on page 37.

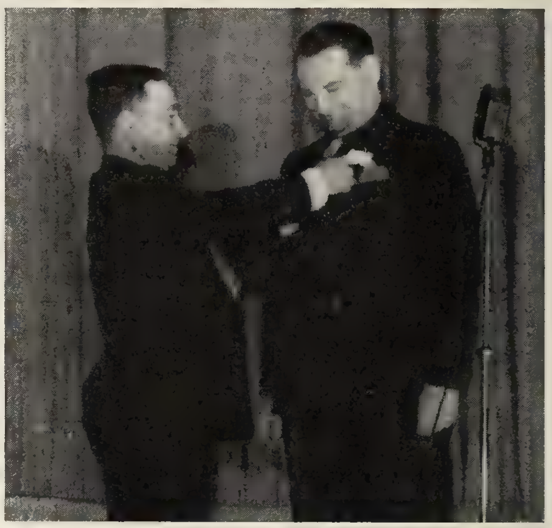
Hazen Elected

At a meeting of the board of directors of Warner Brothers Pictures Tuesday, Joseph H. Hazen was elected a vice-president of the company.

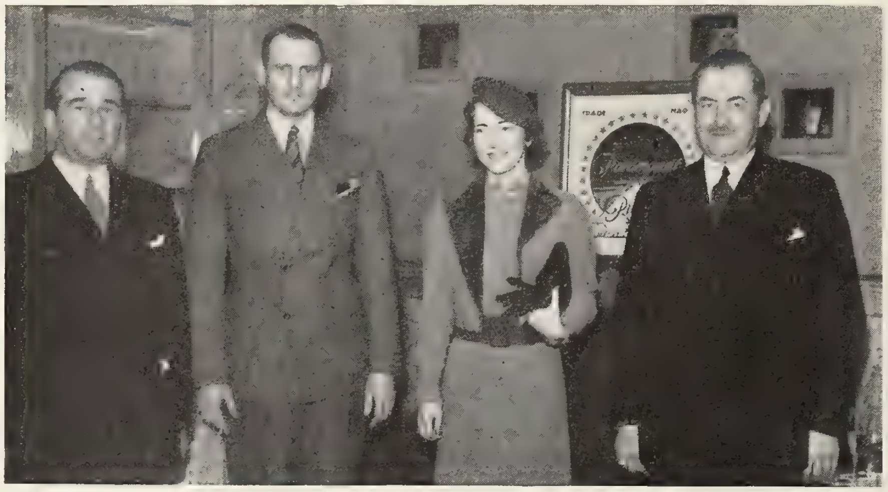
Mr. Hazen, one of the company's younger executives, has been associated with Warner Brothers since 1927 as a legal consultant.

This Week in Pictures

Paramount Pictures announced a program of from 50 to 60 features for release during 1937-'38, at its sales convention in Los Angeles attended by more than 100 delegates. As they left a special train from the east, Neil Agnew, J. J. Unger and C. M. Reagan of the home office were welcomed by William Le Baron, Adolph Zukor (left to right) and a Hollywood microphone.



ED SIEGAL, manager of Lawrence Bolognino's Consolidated Jerome theatre, is Mayor of New York's West Bronx and has a boutonniere given him by Jack Spero, head of that unique organization, New York's Locality Mayors, to prove it. Mr. Siegal won the honor in a contest sponsored by merchants.



A special showing of Paramount's newsreel of the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England was held at the company's office in Copenhagen for Crown Prince Frederick and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark. Shown after the screening are E. Hermann-Sorenson, the Crown Prince and Princess, and Harald Frost, Paramount manager for Denmark.

Herc McIntyre, Universal general manager for Australia, when he sails for his office on the Mariposa next week will carry a gold watch to be given to W. A. Hislop, manager of Mr. McIntyre's New Zealand territory, who won it in the company's sales contest. Gustave Schaefer, Universal export manager, is entrusting the award to Mr. McIntyre for safe transport to its winner.

U.A.'s 50 STAR SALUTE

UNITED ARTISTS home office and sales representatives gathered in New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel this week for discussion of the 36 features from five producers which the company will release during the 1937-'38 season. Nearly 100 eastern delegates attended the three-day meeting which was followed immediately by a similar conclave in Chicago for the west and south. (Story on page 47.)

RESUMPTION OF GAMES CALLED PATRON 'DEMAND'

Broadway, However, Also Hears That Refusal of Independent Owners to Agree to a Ban on Practice Is Another Reason

Opponents of chance games received their biggest setback in months last week with a wholesale reinstatement of the practice by Loew's and RKO circuits in the large metropolitan area of New York.

The reasons advanced by the circuit managements in the wholly unexpected moves was attributed to the "insistent demands" of patrons. Broadway, however, heard that the circuits were also motivated by the refusal of local independent theatres to join in the ban against the systems.

Chance games, elsewhere, continued the subjects of wide controversy. At Hartford, Conn, an appeal is being made against a court ruling; Screeno Amusement Company won an infringement action against the All American Slide Company in Chicago, Ill., when the federal court issued an injunction restraining All American from making slides. Theatres at East St. Louis, Ill., however, continue to use Bank Night in face of the state's supreme court ruling barring the game. The supreme court of Michigan reversed a chance game ruling and chance games are thought to be on their way out in Memphis, Tenn. The Texas court of criminal appeals held Bank Night a lottery and the game was severely attacked at Salt Lake City, Utah.

After a lapse of several months, Loew's and RKO resumed the practice of using chance games in their theatres and following the announcement of the two chains, the Skouras, Century, Randforce and Consolidated circuits, which had reduced the practice to a minimum, renewed contracts with Screeno providing for all their theatres.

Says Patrons Demand Games

Although it was said the move on the part of Loew's and RKO were motivated by the refusal of independents to discontinue the games, the Loew theatres, through Charles C. Moskowitz, said: "Some months ago we eliminated Screeno and Bank Night and other games owing to the length of our performances, and feeling that they had served their purpose as a passing novelty. However, during the past few weeks, we have received thousands of requests from patrons all over the city, asking that they be reinstated. In response to this overwhelming demand, these audience games will be reinstated in those theatres where they enjoyed greatest popularity." Loew's, therefore, will feature Screeno in 44 houses.

The official RKO announcement read as follows: "Screeno, which has recently been very popular in RKO theatres in the metropolitan area, will be resumed starting June 19. Due to the insistent popular demand of RKO patrons the return of this form of entertainment in addition to our regular program was necessary.

"A number of RKO theatres will play Screeno two nights each week and in a number of cases the prize cash amounts will be increased over previous weeks.

"The circuit's neighborhood policy of double features with two changes of programs weekly will not be altered as Screeno will serve as an added attraction."

The RKO theatres at which the game will be renewed are the 58th Street, Colonial, 125th Street, 23d Street, Regent, Alhambra, Empire, Uptown, Shore Road, Greenpoint, Empire, Fordham, Kenmore, Alden, Coliseum, Prospect, Hamilton, Bushwick, Madison, Prospect, Richmond Hill, Strand-Far Rockaway, Chester, Royal, Tilyou, Alden-Jamaica, Empire and Park-Rockaway.

Connecticut Ruling in July

Briefs are being filed in the case of Connecticut against David Magliora, Rialto, Windsor Locks, which was appealed to the supreme court on an agreed statement of facts, and decision is expected in July. Following the suit in the town court, Mr. Magliora was fined and enjoined from using Bank Night in his theatre, on the basis that the "proxy card" system he employed was illegal.

A decision of the Wayne County circuit court at Detroit, Mich., granting United Detroit Theatres, operating the Palms-State, an injunction preventing Jacob Schreiber's Colonial Theatre Enterprises from operating Screeno in its theatres on Woodward Avenue, has been reversed in a decision by the state supreme court and the injunction dissolved.

A death blow to Bank Night in Texas was dealt this week in Austin by the court of criminal appeals, the state's highest tribunal, which held the game to be a lottery.

In rendering its decision, the court upheld the $100 fine assessed to H. S. Cole, Bonham operator, who had been found guilty in the lower court of violating the state's anti-lottery laws. Mr. Cole argued that Bank Night is not a lottery in that a patron had to pay no money to win a prize.

The court, however, held that even if Mr. Cole's contention were correct, his purpose of conducting Bank Nights was to increase business at his theatre.

In San Antonio, the theatre policy on Bank Night was undecided this week following the court's ruling. William O'Donnell, local Interstate director, said he was awaiting instructions from the circuit's headquarters at Dallas before deciding whether to continue the game next week when the local award will amount to $1,600.

Bank Nights in theatres were among the "merchandise lotteries of all types" attacked by J. H. Givvney, executive secretary of the Utah Pharmaceutical Association, meeting at Salt Lake City this week in annual convention.

These methods, he said, are not specifically banned by the recently enacted fair trade legislation, but which "can be and will be eliminated" in Utah. The speaker declared also that the theatre game violates the state's anti-lottery laws.

Hays Appoints Warner, Balaban and Hammons to Study Films for Schools

The motion picture industry's approaching wholesale participation in the field of classroom films was formally furthered this week with the appointment by Will H. Hays of Harry M. Warner, president, Warner Brothers Pictures; E. W. Hammons, president, Educational Films, and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the finance committee of Paramount Pictures, as a committee to officially study further the question of films for use in classroom work in schools to be made under the supervision of educators. Mr. Warner will serve as chairman of the committee.

Following creation of the committee, last Thursday, at the regular quarterly meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in New York, Mr. Warner said: "Since our pioneering in sound, this matter has been a subject of special interest to me, and I am pleased to serve as chairman of the committee to aid in its development."

The following members of the MPPDA board attended Thursday's meeting: Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures; Harry D. Buckley, United Artists; R. H. Cochrane, Universal Pictures; Jack Cohn, Columbia Pictures; Earle W. Hammons, Educational Films; E. B. Hatrick, Cosmopolitan; Will H. Hays, chairman; Frederick L. Herron, treasurer, MPPDA; Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox Film; David Sarnoff, RCA Manufacturing; Nicholas M. Schenck, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Albert Warner, Vitagraph; and Harry M. Warner, Warner Brothers Pictures.

SETTLE HOLLYWOOD STRIKE BUT AUTHORITY IN DISPUTE

Painters, Scenic Artists and Makeup Men Return to Work, Under Promise of Closed Shop; More Exchange Unionization

The Hollywood strike settlement under which painters, scenic artists and makeup men returned to work but which left the matter of union jurisdiction still in dispute turned the newsspotlight from the coast labor situation, a subject of concern for the last seven weeks, to union organization activities in theatres and exchanges and to collective bargaining negotiations in those fields.

Under the terms by which the striking unions returned to work this week a 100 per cent union shop will be granted painters and scenic artists by July 1st; the makeup men, claimed by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, will vote on the question of affiliation, and Federated Motion Picture Crafts will be disbanded and a new form of federation organized.

Unionization in other branches of the industry was most marked in the theatre field where the Theatrical Managers', Agents' and Treasurers' union, an American Federation of Labor affiliate, was conducting a membership drive similar to the one in progress for exchange employees. Major distributing companies continued wage and hour negotiations with new exchange unions in the west and south.

The deadlock in the strike situation, intensified in the last two weeks when the striking unions twice rejected agreements over the heads of their officers, was broken when Dr. Towne Nylander of the Labor Relations Board told George Browne, president of the IATSE, that the makeup men could vote any affiliation they pleased. Arrangements were to be made for balloting after the men returned to work. The makeup men were guaranteed a union shop but a contract and negotiations will be delayed until after the voting.

In the agreements, which were submitted in writing by Pat Casey, producers' representative, no mention was made of the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, each local bargaining individually. Acceptance of the terms which provide, in the case of the scenic artists and painters unions, the start of negotiations for wage scales and working conditions within six days, was virtually unanimous in all three locals.

Strike leaders expressed favor for the agreement but were unwilling at first to make any statement regarding the future of Federated Crafts. It was understood that the federation was held to be unwieldy in form. Later Charles Lessing, chairman of the strike committee, formally announced the disbandment of Federated Crafts.

The settlement was viewed in Hollywood as of negative result in regard to relations between producers and studio employees in spite of the fact that a victory for the strikers seemed apparent on the surface. Painters and scenic artists originally had been offered re-entry into the basic studio agreement plus a 10 per cent wage increase. Now they have a union shop but no assurance of increases. The makeup men had been told to settle their IATSE jurisdictional differences and then discuss working conditions. Now, while they have been given a union shop, the jurisdictional obstacle still has to be surmounted.

MUSICIAN PICKETS MOVE INTO THEATRE

Members of Local 802 of the American Federation of Musicians, picketing New York theatres in their campaign to restore stage shows to Broadway houses, last Saturday traded their signs for sandwiches and moved en masse into the RKO Palace theatre for a sit-in demonstration which they said would last all night. Shortly after 2 A.M. Sunday morning, however, all but 25 of the 400 demonstrators claimed by the union's secretary had left the theatre, and these straggled out later. Tiring after the fourth performance of the two feature pictures the musicians moved into the smoking room where they consumed sandwiches smuggled to them from union headquarters.

The demonstration was orderly and a representative of the theatre management summed up the attitude of the house when he said, "I'm sure that the theatre will be able to last longer than these union men will. They can sit here until Doomsday if they want to just as long as they don't interfere with the show."

Theatre Men Organized

The American Federation of Labor, holding the allegiance of unions being organized in exchanges throughout the country through the IATSE, obtained a clear field for theatre employee organization with the dissolution of the Theatrical Business Representatives Guild and the transfer of its members to the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers' Union. Shortly after its organization by Hal Olver last March the Guild applied for affiliation with the Committee for Industrial Organization but the Guild repudiated this application several weeks ago and began negotiations with Mr. Browne of the IATSE; Theodore Mitchell, president of the managers' union, and Joseph Basson, president of Local 306 of the IATSE.

The Guild, which has been concentrating on the organization of ushers, doormen and cashiers will merge with the nine year old managers' union immediately and will give up its offices, executives and council.

The managers' union has started a wide campaign for organization. An invitation to membership, sent to theatre employees in New Jersey, said in part:

"This is not a revulsive organization. We plan intelligent, sober and conscientious organization with highest type of service and consideration for the employer, but there is a great need for organization in our part of the industry, and the manifold benefits of intelligent organization will raise our craft to the level it should be on."

The organization drive has resulted in IATSE or AFL theatre employees' unions in Philadelphia, Wilmington, Kansas City, St. Louis and Boston and the formation of others in key cities throughout the country is under way.

The American Newspaper Guild at its national convention in St. Louis last week voted to admit theatre and motion picture production and distribution publicity men to its ranks.

Negotiations were to start this week between home office executives of eight major companies and representatives of exchange unions from Cincinnati, Oklahoma City, Charlotte, Indianapolis, and Kansas City. A delegation from Denver may be included in the group.

Also to be discussed this week were further details of pacts previously arranged for the Cleveland and Washington territories.

Most of the present hour scales, providing for a maximum of 40 hours a week are not being disturbed, it was said. The unions include inspectors, and poster and shipping clerks.

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is chairman of the distributor committee which includes four sales executives and home office exchange personnel.

With the exception of Cleveland and Washington, arrangements have been completed for exchange employees in Buffalo, Philadelphia, Boston, New Haven and Pittsburgh.

Academy in Cultural Role

A request from the writers' branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for abrogation of contracts establishing working conditions last week was viewed in Hollywood as an indication that the Academy will be completely removed from the economic side of the industry and will relegate all working condition contracts to the various creative talent groups which have organized or are forming to do their own collective bargaining. Leaders of the Academy were said to feel that the group should function only as a social and educational institution.

Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Screen Actors' Guild, was in New York this week for conferences with Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity on the establishment of a Guild office in the east to supervise the employment of talent by producers.

The Screen Writers' Guild of the Authors' League of America, revived several weeks ago for the avowed purpose of collective bargaining with producers and abrogation of the present Screen Playwrights' code, this week filed a petition with the Labor Relations Board asking that it be declared the sole bargaining agency for film wrters. Dudley Nichols has been elected president of the Guild.

Cartoon Strike Extended

The strike by union groups against the Max Fleischer studios in New York, which began with the walkout of the commercial artists and designers several weeks ago, was extended this week with the decision of Local 306, the projectionists' union, to refuse to run any Fleischer subjects in theatres in which they man the booths. Local 802, the musicians' union, also voted to cease work on the synchronization of the subjects, and cameramen of Local 644 decided to walk out of the studio.

U. S. STOPS NAZIS' INTIMIDATION OF HOLLYWOOD MOTION PICTURE STARS

State Department Acts After Actors in Universal's "Road Back" Receive Warnings They Will Be "Blacklisted"

The United States Government was finally compelled this week to act officially against Nazi attempts to influence production in Hollywood, lodging strong protests with Adolph Hitler's government in Germany, and securing therefrom an agreement that Germany's diplomatic officers in the United States will no longer harass with threats of "blacklist" any Hollywood actors or producers who engage in the production of motion pictures which may turn out to be undesirable under Nazi policy.

Actuated by strenuous protests from the State Department in Washington, the German government in Berlin approved instructions of rebuke sent by the German Ambassador Dieckhoff to Dr. George Gyssling, German consul at Los Angeles, and ordering Gyssling to desist from sending threatening letters to Hollywood players, as he did in the case of the cast appearing in Universal Pictures' "The Road Back" which opened Thursday in New York.

The Hollywood Anti-Nazi League and the Screen Actors' Guild also participated, individually, in the protest to Washington.

Robert Montgomery, president of the Guild, likened the attempted penalization to the penalization of the press.

United Press reported from Los Angeles that Consul Gyssling said he had received no orders up to Tuesday afternoon, and if they were as described they did not constitute a rebuke from his superiors.

He admitted he "did just what I was advised to do in an order originating in Berlin."

Ban on Company Reported

Nazi Germany, through Consul Gyssling—a frequent writer of "threats" to Hollywood actors—warned 12 of "The Road Back" players that their future work will be barred from the Reich, because they had ignored previous warnings that their appearance in "The Road Back" would be considered unfriendly to the Hitler Government.

Formal receipt of the notice that their work was to be banned was confirmed on Friday to Scripps-Howard newspapers by John Emery, one of the actors.

Universal Pictures, it was said, also would come under the ban as the producer. (Universal, like virtually all American producers, has practically abandoned attempts to distribute its pictures in Germany, acting some months ago when it became apparent that the Nazis were aiming to eliminate all Hollywood pictures to make room for Hitler-made "cultural" or propaganda films).

Peter Kihss, staff writer for the New York World-Telegram, reporting on the latest Nazi incident in Hollywood, said that each warning to the cast was written on the stationery and bore the seal of Dr. Gyssling.

REICH NOW INTRODUCES PENSIONS FOR ACTORS

Dr. Joseph Goebbels, German Propaganda Minister, announced in Berlin Monday that old-age pensions for all deserving German artists were now being instituted by the National Socialist government, according to the New York Times.

To begin with, he said, 2,000,000 marks had been set aside for this purpose for members of the theatrical profession.

Provisions for retired film artists, poets, musicians, painters, sculptors—in fact, all creative artists—will be made in the course of the next few months, he said. Dr. Goebbels made the announcement at the Monday session of the Reich Theatre Festival Week.

"The Road Back" is an adaptation of Erich Maria Remarque's novel of the same name, and represents the post-war sequel to his "All Quiet on the Western Front," which reputedly sold 3,000,000 copies throughout the world, and which was also produced by Universal, some years ago.

12 Players Get Warnings

Five of the 12 "Road Back" actors and actresses who received the warnings include Barbara Read, Louise Fazenda, John King, Slim Summerville and Andy Devine. Each letter, dated April 9th and, according to the World-Telegram, sent by registered mail, read as follows:

"With reference to the picture, 'The Road Back,' in which you are said to play a part, I have been instructed by my government to issue to you a warning in accordance with Article 15 of the German decree of June 28, 1932, regulating the exhibition of foreign motion picture films.

"Copy and translation of this article are enclosed herewith. You will note that the allocation of permits may be refused for films with which persons are connected who have already participated in the production of pictures detrimental to German prestige in tendency or effect in spite of the warnings issued by the competent German authorities."

Val Paul, studio manager of Universal Pictures in Universal City, is then reputed to have gathered up some of the letters for action at Washington.

John Emery, acting in the picture, also is revealed as having taken the case to Washington, asking the State Department to "advise me whether, as a citizen of the United States, it in future will be incumbent upon me in seeking my livelihood to yield to the pressure which is brought to bear upon me by a foreign consul, acting under his exequatur, and upon the instructions of his government, or whether I can look to the Department of State for protection."

Official Quoted

This is said to have brought the following reply from James Clement Dunn, chief of the division of Western European Affairs, at Washington:

"Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of May 11, 1937, enclosing a copy of a communication dated April 9, 1937, addressed to you by Dr. George Gyssling, German Consul at Los Angeles, Cal., concerning participation in the production of the film, 'The Road Back'.

"Our attention has already been called to similar letters signed by Dr. Gyssling to other participants in the production of the film mentioned and I desire to inform you that we are looking into this matter."

State Department officials this week refused to discuss the matter other than to say that it has been satisfactorily settled.

Complaints against Mr. Gyssling's activities have been received in Washington from time to time over a period of several months.

Despite the refusal now of State Department officials to discuss the subject, there were intimations that the Washington Government deeply resented the interference of foreign diplomats in domestic matters. Apparently a very strong protest was first lodged with the German Embassy, at Washington, since the matter received quick attention in Berlin.

With the instructions to Consul Gyssling from his government to control his letter-writing proclivities, the U.S. Government is understood to feel hopeful that the German government will abate its efforts to control activities in Hollywood. The Gyssling episode, it is said, is but one of a number of occurrences in which complaint has been made of such Nazi activities in this country.

In view of the determination evidenced by the Hitler government to regulate the activities of aliens in Germany, American citizens in whose activities in this country the German government has sought to interfere have repeatedly complained to the State Department, it was said at Washington.

While the State Department has never revealed how frequently it has protested to the German embassy in the matter of the Hollywood case and similar ones, there has been considerable publicity given the protests lodged with the department about the utterances of American citizens discussing Germany publicly.

20th-Fox Expedition Sails for Africa

Headed by Mrs. Osa Johnson and director Otto Brower, a party of 13 representatives of Twentieth Century-Fox sailed from New York Wednesday for England on the first leg of their trip to Africa where they will retrace the route taken by Stanley in his famous quest for Dr. Livingstone. The company will film background and location shots for the picture, "Stanley and Livingstone." Also in the party are F. E. Johnston, production manager; Clark Getts, business manager for Mrs. Johnson; Paul McVey, Jack Byron, Sidney Wagner, cameraman; Sol Halperin, special effects cameraman; Edward Collins and Joseph Farley, assistant cameramen; Sven Hugo Borg, Henry Gerzin and Bruce Hunsaker, technicians.

NAZIS COMPELLED TO USE U.S. FILMS AS HOME PRODUCT SOURCE DRIES UP

Reich Industry Falls Down on Season's Production Commitments, With No Home Product Seen Until the Fall

The Nazis' insistent exclusion of foreign films from German theatres for the benefit of creating full playing time for purely "cultural and propagandistic" product inspired, if not actually created by the Hitler Government, has apparently hit a snag.

Wireless dispatches reaching New York from Berlin this week declared that the Reich-Film industry has fallen down completely on its production commitments and henceforth until Autumn, American films will dominate the German market. And this despite an official Nazi statement, arriving in New York at the same time, which asserted that production in Germany is up 16 per cent, while foreign imports are down 12 per cent.

Referring to the German semi-official "Film Kurier" as the source, word of the German industry's unexpected plight was wirelessed from Berlin by the New York Times, which said that German film companies have released only two-thirds of the films they had contracted to deliver, with the 1936-37 production now virtually ended.

The big Berlin first-run houses have done their utmost to give the public German pictures, it was said, but they surrendered this week. Ufa's own leading house, the Ufa Palast, is running an American film. Next week there will be only one top house in the city not showing an American production. One American premiere has followed another since late April.

Censorship ruined the costly German-Italian feature film "Condottiere," which was to have been the sensation of the late season, the Times reported. It was held at first-run Berlin houses for just one week before retiring to the obscurity of the side streets. After the Pope's recent encyclical on Germany, all religious scenes were cut, and the resulting film no longer made sense, according to the dispatch.

The situation has resulted in an open feud between the exhibitors and the producers. The former contend that the producers have cut down production purposely to get more profit from less outlay, since the exhibitors have to show something, according to the news dispatch.

The producers complain that their films have not been run long enough, so that the supply has been used up before they expected, to which the exhibitors reply that the films are run just as long as they draw patrons.

Thus ends ignominiously the German film industry's final season in private hands. In the future Dr. Joseph Goebbels, the Propaganda Minister, will bear full responsibility. Whether a consortium, the National Socialist Franz Eher publishing house, or the National Socialist party now owns the film industry is difficult to say, but it has passed into what amounts to complete State control.

The new arrangement places the industry firmly on its financial feet, with the State ready to subsidize it if necessary. It does not solve the problem, however, which led to this and previous years' failures to deliver films contracted.

$1,000,000 OFFER FOR DISNEY FILM REPORTED

A $1,000,000 offer for the English roadshow rights to "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", feature length cartoon film, has been made to Walt Disney Productions by an English theatre circuit, according to William Morris, Jr.

The offer, however, will be refused as RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., recently was appointed distributor for all Disney productions.

"The German film industry cannot live from the German market alone, and since the Nazi Government came to power there has been virtually no foreign demand for German films," declared the Times.

The official Nazi statement received in New York this week from the government propaganda offices of Dr. Fritz Olinsky, said that figures published by the German Institute for Business Research, indicated 1,507 films with a total length of 713,000 metres were produced in Germany in 1936. This means an increase of approximately 16 per cent over 1935. The statement added that, "This quantitative gain is accompanied by an increase in value; the value of the long picture-plays alone rose from 36,000,000 marks in 1935 to approximately 52,000,000 marks in 1936."

While 17 per cent of all films released in Germany in 1932 were reported by the statement to be of foreign origin, this share was reduced in 1936 to nine per cent, "so that Germany has been providing its film market to an increasing extent from its own production."

Calculated in terms of metres of film, the proportion of foreign films offered in 1932 was said to have been about 27 per cent, and in 1936, 22 per cent. This decrease consisted principally of films used in supplementary programmes since the supplying of short picture-plays as well as films without dramatic action (instructional, advertising, and cultural films) is being dominated more and more by German domestic production.

Nevertheless, 61 per cent of the full-length films offered in 1936 were reputedly produced by German firms, as against 48 per cent in 1935. From 1933 to 1935 an average of 203 full-length films were placed on the market, of which 112 were German and 91 foreign. In 1936 the total was 183, including 111 German and 72 foreign.

"The favorable economic prerequisites for a better development of German film production may be seen from the steadily increasing attendance at cinema theatres," it was said. "In the 1935-36 season 308,000,000 attendances were recorded, while the figure has risen in the 1936-37 season to approximately 359,000,000. This is a new record, even exceeding the previous high of 352,000,000 in 1928-29, hitherto the best year for the German films," according to the statement.

The following survey shows the countries of origin of the full-length picture-plays exhibited in Germany in the years 1935 and 1936, based on the Nazis' report of this week:

"The boom in the German cinema, prepared and achieved by the measures of Reichminister Dr. Goebbels, is clearly reflected in the statistics of attendance at the theatres," said the government report, which added: "Theatres of the German capital have been benefited by this boom in 1936. The 'Fédération Internationale des Associations de Cinémas' publishes in its communications a table showing the attendance, box-office receipts, etc., of the Berlin theatres from 1924 to 1936. It must be observed in this connection that in 1924 there were 317 cinema theatres in Berlin with a total seating capacity of 123,000, while in 1936 there were 399 theatres with 200,000 seats. The table shows clearly the economic depression beginning in 1930 and the marked improvement since 1933":

And from Paris came word this week that Nazi influence in Central Europe is said to be responsible for the banning in Yugoslavia of five French films. Two of them, already completed, "L'Homme a Abattre" and "Les Loups Pere Eux," relate to the French-German secret service, and a third, also completed, is a story by Marthe Richard of a woman spy in the World War.

The other two which have been banned are in production. "Le Grand Illusion" is a story of the escape of French prisoners from Germany during the World War, and "Soeurs D'Armes" tells of the French heroine, Louise de Bettignies, in northern France during the invasion of 1914-18.

Threats were heard in Paris of an attempt by Germany to extend to other countries of Central Europe and probably to Italy a ban on French pictures.

TITLE "DE-FREEZING" TO BE RATIFIED IN FALL

Only One Point, Extension of Period of Protection Back to 1933, Reported Unsettled

Changes in the provisions governing title registrations of members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., will probably be made in September. The delay is a result of the failure this week of the MPPDA registration committee to present new proposals for ratification, as planned, to the quarterly meeting of the association's board of directors in New York. All changes in the present provisions must be ratified by the board before they can be placed in operation and the board is not scheduled to meet again before fall. It is intended to effect a "de-freezing" process by which many thousands of registered titles will be made available.

Although various plans of the title registration committee have been reported recently for "de-freezing", it was learned this week that only one point, that of extending the period of protection for producers on a title back from June, 1935, to June, 1933, for four years instead of two, is delaying the presentation of the plan.

The member companies of the MPPDA had unlimited protection on all titles until the two-year rule was inaugurated in 1935. At that time, however, titles registered previous to 1935 were continued in registration. It is now proposed to release the titles registered prior to 1933. It is because the representatives of the member companies are now asking that they be allowed to hold titles registered back as far as 1933 and "de-freeze" all previous titles that the general "de-freezing" plan is being delayed.

At the present time the office of the MPPDA has approximately 10,000 used and unused titles in its files. Half of these are "frozen," and despite the fact that the companies which registered them have no intention of ever using them, they still remain unavailable to other producers. Under the new plan, these, and all titles "frozen" up to 1933, will be placed on the open market and made available to other producers.

All of these "de-frozen" titles may then be claimed and registered by another company, provided, of course, it is first with its registration. The new registrant will then be allowed to hold the registered title for one year. If, at the end of that time the picture intended for the title has not gone into production, the company must seek a six-months extension on the name. Then, if at the end of that additional period the picture is still not in production, the registrant loses his claim and anyone else may re-register the same title.

At the same time, no one company will be allowed to have more than 100 features and 200 short subject titles on registration. If those numbers are exceeded, deletions must be made from somewhere on the list. The number of registered released pictures, of course, can be unlimited.

All titles of pictures such as "Broadway Melody of 1936," "The Big Broadcast of 1937," "Golddigggers of 1937" and "Vogues of 1938," are considered as members of series whose title re-registration is automatic. This, obviously, is done to protect the producer and to eliminate the details of registration.

All of the titles now on file at the MPPDA office will not be open for re-registration, it was pointed out, because some of them, while acceptable in former years, do not meet current standards set up by the organization itself and its Production Code Administration.

TITLE REGISTRATION OFFICE ALWAYS BUSY

Since its formation in 1923, not one single day has passed in the history of the title registration office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., when at least one title was not sent in for registration. The heaviest day was recently when the registration of 50 titles was requested by the combined member companies. The office usually finds that when an important event takes place somewhere in the world, such as the siege of the Alcazar in Spain, and the newspapers feature it, the motion picture companies all hasten to capitalize on the free publicity and rush in titles connected with the event.

Universal Directors Hold Board Meeting

A meeting of the Universal board of directors was held Monday in New York following the arrival of Charles R. Rogers, executive vice-president and production head, from the coast. The meeting was "routine," according to company officials, and was attended by Harold S. Brewster, recently appointed Universal studio comptroller, who met some of the directors for the first time at the meeting.

J. Cheever Cowdin, Universal board chairman, left Wednesday on the Normandie for a month's trip abroad in connection with the company's foreign business. He was accompanied by Gus Schaefer, Universal export manager, and the two will confer while abroad with George R. Canty, newly appointed continental sales manager, who is now in Paris. Mr. Schaefer expects to visit all European capitals and will be gone about four months.

Mr. Rogers was accompanied to New York by James P. Normanly, general manager. The two stayed for the Broadway premiere, Thursday, of "The Road Back." Mr. Brewster, who has been vacationing prior to starting his new studio assignment, plans to accompany them on their return trip to the coast.

Music Publishers, Songwriters Agree

Members of the Songwriters Protective Association and of the Music Publishers Protective Association have received copies of a tentative agreement providing for a 50 per cent division of synchronization and recording fees on all music turned over to publishers by members of the songwriters' group.

The songwriters' group three weeks ago announced that after June 1st it would retain and administer synchronization and recording rights to all music transferred by its members to the publishers. The Music Publishers Protective Association immediately announced that its members would reject music for publication unless these rights were left in their hands. A compromise, reached at a meeting of committees representing the two groups and providing that the songwriters should retain 50 per cent of the rights on classical music and 40 per cent of the rights on popular songs was rejected by the writers. The second agreement, allowing an even division, was to be presented to the membership for ratification this week.

F. & M. and Ansells Combine in St. Louis

Through an exchange of stock Fanchon & Marco and Ansell Brothers, operators of several theatres in the St. Louis area, have combined their interests. The Fox, Ambassador and Missouri Theatres, first run houses, and the St. Louis Amusement Company with about 22 neighborhood houses are operated by F & M while the Ansells have the Empress, Ritz and Variety in St. Louis.

Denial Entered In Playdate Case

The State of Ohio, in a brief filed in U. S. District Court at Columbus, has denied all unconstitutionality allegations made by the RKO Distributing Corporation in its action to test the validity of Ohio's preferred playdate law. The state is the defendant in the case and is represented by Rocker and Schwartz, Cleveland attorneys, who contend the law provides for a valid exercise of police power. Decision has been reserved.

Crypt for Jean Harlow

William Powell, this week, purchased a crypt in Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Lawndale, Hollywood, in which Jean Harlow will lie. Before the purchase of the crypt by Mr. Powell became known, Miss Harlow's family had announced that she would be buried in Forest Lawn Memorial Park. This had been decided after Mr. Powell conferred with Mrs. Marino Bello and Mr. Mont Clair Carpenter, parents of the actress.

Censor Appointed

Mrs. J. Wilson Ryon, Hyattsville, Md., has been named to succeed Mrs. Harry T. Phoebus as a member of the Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors. Mrs. Phoebus resigned after being injured in an automobile mishap.

IT'S BEEN A GREAT RECORD BUT WE'RE NOT SATISFIED!

We could stand on that record, but we won't. In this business yesterday doesn't count. We're looking ahead! We know we have not yet begun to tap the full resources of our studio, the full abilities of our production brains. For the coming season, 20th Century-Fox, the Studio of Ideas, will give you not just a program of pictures, but a program of progress!

20th CENTURY FOX

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

FOR 1937 • 1938

You know this business!

You know that there are just two things that matter:

(1) Good pictures.
(2) A fair sales policy.

You know that no company has fulfilled these requirements more faithfully and effectively than 20th Century-Fox.

No one knows better than you what we did in 1936-37 . . . hit after hit . . . new personalities developed — Sonja Henie, Simone Simon, Tyrone Power, Winchell and Bernie, the Ritz Brothers. New showmanship ideas . . . out-of-the-beaten-track entertainment. Unusual story angles and fresh themes . . . the most daring and profitable run of musicals ever made by any one. You know, too, how these successes have rehabilitated many theatres and brought new prosperity to every theatre playing 20th Century-Fox pictures.

We don't have to tell you that those 1936-37 accomplishments will go doubled in spades for 1937-38.

You can rest content only when studio brains are restless . . . and the studio minds at 20th Century-Fox are always striking into unexplored story fields, always alert to the public's newest entertainment moods, always awake to modern show trends. They are never satisfied to follow, but enthusiastically assume the responsibility of leadership.

Now look at the following pages, outlining 20th's first-quarter releases for the new season. And remember that, thrilling as the line-up is, it represents only the beginning of 20th's greatest year!

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Second Wind

Judging by the number of new pictures started during the first week of June, Hollywood's production mill paused to get its second wind before embarking on the manufacture of its 1937-38 program. Setting a new low record for the calendar year, but three films were started. Slackness is noted also on the other end of the line as but seven productions were completed.

Only MGM, RKO Radio and Twentieth Century-Fox found it convenient to embark upon new work. At the Culver City studio "The Bride Wore Red" was sent on its way. Even with this starter, the routine of the studio was uninterrupted inasmuch as the company immediately went on a location trip in the Sierra Mountains. The film will present Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Billy Burrud, Lynne Carver, Reginald Owen, George Zucco, Dickie Moore and Paul Porcasi in the principal roles. Dorothy Arzner is directing.

With Jesse Lasky producing, RKO Radio started "Music For Madame." Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine, Barbara Pepper, Erick Rhodes, Frank M. Thomas and Billy Gilbert will be featured. John Blystone was assigned to direct.

At Twentieth Centutry-Fox, under the guidance of Eugene Forde, "Charlie Chan on Broadway" went before the cameras. Warner Oland again plays the title role supported by Joan Marsh, Thomas Beck, Keye Luke and J. Edward Bromberg.

Paramount is credited with three of the finished pictures. "Artists and Models" is the most important of the lot. An elaborately produced film, it will present Jack Benny, Gail Patrick, Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino, Ben Blue, Cecil Cunningham, Judy Canova, Hedda Hopper, Yacht Club Boys, Andre Kostelanetz and orchestra, Martha Raye, Connie Boswell, Louis Armstrong and orchestra in addition to several more specialty performers. Raoul Walsh directed. In "Exclusive," which Alexander Hall directed, Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer, Charlie Ruggles, Lloyd Nolan, Fay Holden, Edward H. Robins, Gaylord Pendleton, Harlan Briggs, William Mansell and Horace MacMahon will be seen. The third picture, "She's No Lady," B. P. Schulberg production, has Ann Dvorak, John Trent, Harry Beresford, Guinn Williams, Aileen Pringle and Arthur Hoyt as the important players. Charles Vidor directed.

Warners checked two pictures off the active list. Bette Davis, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Haviland and Patric Knowles head the cast of "It's Love I'm After." The support lists Eric Blore, George Barbier, Bonita Granville, Spring Byington, E. E. Clive, Georgia Cane, Mary Treen, Veda Ann Borg, Grace Fields and Harvey Clark. Archie Mayo directed. Kay Francis and Preston Foster are the stars of "First Lady." Others who will be seen are Verree Teasdale, Walter Connolly, Anita Louise, Victor Jory, Marjorie Gateson, Louise Fazenda, Marjorie Rambeau, Eric Stanley, Henry O'Neill, Sara Haden, Harry Davenport and Gregory Gaye. Stanley Logan directed.

MGM finished "General Hospital." George B. Seitz directed and the players featured are Franchot Tone, Virginia Bruce, Maureen O'Sullivan, Leonard Penn, Edward Norris, Grace Ford and June Clayworth.

Last of the completed pictures, "A House In The Country" (tentative title), came from RKO-Radio. For names it will offer Fred Stone, Marjorie Lord, Emma Dunn, William Corson, Tommy Bond, J. Carrol Naish, Ray Mayer, Bradley Page, Dudley Clements, Robert McKenzie, Frank M. Thomas and Paul Guilfoyle. Richard Rosson directed.

Alert Visitors

During a recent visit to Hollywood, a party of touring British theatre owners revealed that they are just as alert and up-to-date as their brother American exhibitors in matters of theatre operation and being conversant with what is going on in the film world.

Headed by Nat Cohen, the party not only was guests of all the major studios where they were made familiar with all the intricacies of the American method of making pictures, but under the guidance of officers of Electrical Research Products visited and talked with managers of the leading theatres in the Los Angeles and Hollywood area. Amazed but not surprised at the flamboyant manner in which big picture premieres and previews are staged. Particularly impressive to the visitors was the scope and extent in which advance publicity campaigns are conducted and the manner in which studio publicity departments are geared to accommodate the most insignificant requests of correspondents and theatre managers for information on forthcoming product.

Cohen who operates six houses including a recently acquired 2000 seater in Kettering, two in Seven Oaks, Kent; one in Stainses and two in the South End District, acknowledged that while British operators were aggressive in going after business, he learned many things from his American confreres that would be invaluable in the future. Similarly Walter Eckert operating houses in Scanthrope, Huddingsford, Workcorp, Castleford, Normanton and Mrs. Louis King who with her sons runs nine theatres in the provinces and is building six more picked up many cues and leads that will be helpful to them.

Also in the party was Mr. H. Lever, chief accountant for the Eckert theatres, his wife and daughter and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Naps.

Bard on the Air

Lusty young radio broadcasting, willing and ready to take a chance, with Columbia Broadcasting System fathering the idea, is preparing to defy the lightning and present Shakespeare.

Mr. William Lewis, CBS program director, who conceived the idea of a series of Shakesperian plays over the air, has long been of the opinion that Shakespeare was a common ordinary sort of fellow who wrote for the masses in a language and with idioms that were the argot of his time. He thinks that one of the reasons why the stage and screen have failed to popularize Shakespeare with the general public is that both have approached the various subjects from a too fancy premise, and that they have taken them away from the masses for whom they were intended and given them to the intelligentsia, legitimate or pseudo.

However, CBS will present its Shakespeare in the way that Mr. Lewis thinks the author intended that the plays should always have been presented. As the originals were produced sans the benefit of elaborate stage technique, so will the broadcasts. There wont be any costumes, neither will there be any stage effects, but there will be a musical accompaniment. If famous stage or screen names are available to interpret the several characters, they will be engaged to feature the sustaining program. Yet if some unknown demonstrates he has the talent and ability to play the part better than a more famous but less capable name, he or she will be engaged.

Scheduled to take the time vacated by the discontinuance of the Lux program, the series will start on July 12th and continue on Monday evenings for eight weeks. Allotted an hour's time and emanating from Hollywood at five o'clock, PST, the plays, as a general rule, will be presented in two acts. A tentative list of plays selected includes: "King Lear," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Hamlet," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Macbeth," "As You Like It," "Henry IV" and "Twelfth Night." In event of casting or other unforeseen difficulties interfering with this program, "Romeo and Juliet," "King John," "Richard II" and "The Merchant of Venice" have been reserved as alternates.

Stated by Mr. Lewis to be the most costly sustaining feature ever attempted by radio broadcasting, the forthcoming Shakesperian series is being considered a radio departure that will place Shakespeare in an entirely new and different light in the public eye. There is no tendency to consider the program as an experiment. Mr. Lewis is confident that public reception to CBS's versions of Shakespeare will not only create a demand for more of his works on the air, but will also prepare the ground for motion pictures again to produce the Bard's works.

Honorary Degree to Van Schmus for His Services to the Sweeneys

. . . "You have actually achieved the impossible in the field of entertainment."

With this citation, the Washington and Jefferson College, of Washington, Pa., conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters on William George Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall theatre in Rockefeller Center, and a showman for less than two years, coming new to the theatre from department stores and advertising agencies, to take over the Music Hall for the Rockefellers after Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation surrendered the house during the dark days of the middle 1930's.

Mr. Van Schmus took on the Music Hall of the glittering, but not so golden, domain that Roxy left, and has been running it ever since at a profit, "serving the better tastes of the public," as he remarked one day in February, 1935, as recorded in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. "And I don't mean the Park Avenue public," he added. "The Sweeneys have better taste than they are credited with — and it's the Sweeneys that make our bread and butter."

The citation for the honorary degree was read to the now-60-year-old Showman Van Schmus by Ralph Cooper Hutchinson, president of the college, at Commencement Day exercises last week. It follows:

> "Mr. Van Schmus, Washington and Jefferson College in honoring you today wishes to recognize a great achievement. For centuries the stage has demonstrated its capacity for good or ill. Civilization has been measured and often menaced by its own products on the stage and in the field of entertainment. In an age of unusual leisure this possibility for good or ill is greatly enhanced.
> "To have greatly served our civilization in this period has been your lot. With cultured taste, with masterful appreciation of the beautiful in music and literature, with refined sensitiveness to the loveliness of color, with a sixth sense for the recognition of genius, you have actually achieved the impossible in the field of entertainment. You have proven that the beautiful, the cultural, the decent can be produced attractively and even with financial success. To combine refined art with income is a major achievement in any age. You have immeasurably increased confidence in the taste and civilization of our people and in the stage. You give us promise of greater artistic achievements in the future.
> "By the authority vested in me, I confer upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, in token of which I hand you this diploma and cause you to be invested with this hood appertaining to that degree."

Mr. Van Schmus was never headed for Broadway. He grew up in Chicago and went to North Central College in Naperville, Illinois. His first job was with the Hill Publishing Company, and subsequently he was for years an executive of Schlesinger & Myers, the concern known today as Chicago's Carson, Pirie, Scott & Company, department store operators. Thence he went to the big May Company, Cleveland department store, and presently appeared in the post of general manager of the George L. Dyer advertising agency in New York. In the Dyer agency he met Louis Lee, brother of the late Ivy Lee, and through the Lees came to know Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Mr. Rockefeller brought Mr. Van Schmus to the Music Hall.

Czechoslovak Films May Total 40 to 50

Czechoslovakian motion picture production may reach between 40 and 50 features during 1937, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Sam E. Woods at Prague. Mr. Woods based his report on statements made at the Association of Cinema Owners in the Province of Moravia (Svaz Kinematografu pro Zemi Moravsko-Slezskou). Producers have announced their intention of making 54 features and a total of 35 is certain.

Motion Picture School Established in Brazil

In connection with "Motion Picture Month," now being celebrated in Brazil, the "Associacao Cinematographica de Productores Brasileiros" (Cinematographic Association of Brazilian Producers) has announced establishment of a motion picture school, according to U. S. Trade Commissioner J. Winsor Ives at Rio de Janeiro. The school will have headquarters in Rio de Janeiro and its purpose will be to locate new talent for domestic productions.

Musicians Union Protests Moves At Encroachment

Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, informed 600 delegates to the organization's annual meeting in Louisville this week that the Committee for Industrial Organization had no right to attack other groups. He declared the musicians' union will have no patience with attempts at encroachment by other labor bodies.

The convention opened Monday and was to be held through Saturday. Among the other topics to be discussed were the question of control of electrical transcriptions and the rights of the musicians engaged in them.

Mr. Weber's talk followed addresses by Governor Chandler of Kentucky and Neville Miller, mayor of Louisville.

In his annual report, Mr. Weber commented that theatre picketing as a means toward restoring employment of musicians had failed. He questioned the wisdom of continuing the picketing.

The report of the executive committee was read. It denied Franko Goldman's request to broadcast on a New York network gratis. Competition between school bands and union musicians was discussed. The New York union's request to limit its members to one year of work at the New York World' Fair was denied.

The important business sessions of the convention started Thursday.

Paul Burger, Writer, Dies in Hollywood

Paul Burger, writer for Twentieth Century-Fox, died in a Hollywood hospital early Wednesday, after a long illness. He was forty-seven years old. Mr. Burger is survived by his widow, Rose, and a daughter, Hope, who recently arrived in Hollywood after attending Wellsley College.

Mr. Burger's last screen work was "Charlie Chan at the Olympics," an original story. Befgore going to Hollywood, he was associated with the home office sales departments of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and United Artists. He was a nephew by marriage of Nicholas and Joseph M. Schenck.

Linton Wells Quits Post

Linton Wells has resigned as eastern publicity representative for Samuel Goldwyn Productions, effective June 30, and will accept a radio offer to dramatize his autobiography, "Blood on the Moon." He also will devote more time to writing a sequel to the book. It will be published next spring and will be entitled "Bits of Life."

$786,000 PARAMOUNT PROFIT IN APRIL; ZUKOR CONTRACT APPROVED

Stockholders Overwhelmingly Approve Three-Year Contract With Adolph Zukor and Elect Keough to Board of Directors

Paramount Pictures' stockholders on Tuesday overwhelmingly voted a new three-year contract for Adolph Zukor as production head, on a profit-sharing arrangement, and heard from Barney Balaban, president, that the company's product has moved from fourth to second place in box office value.

The meeting brought the election of Austin Keough, vice-president and secretary, to the directorate; the reelection of five present board members; and a report on earnings by Barney Balaban, president, disclosing $786,000 net profits for April, against $293,000 one year ago, and $2,012,000 net profits for the first quarter in 1937, compared with $718,000 in the first quarter of 1936. Action was deferred on a vote to increase the capital structure.

Mr. Balaban and Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee, explained and defended Mr. Zukor's new contract to some small stockholders at the meeting who attacked it and other proposals with considerable warmth. Mr. Balaban was also irate over minority stockholders questioning his own salary as Paramount president.

The annual meeting represented more than 17,700 stockholders, controlling some 3,479,000 votes, present either in person or by proxy, in the "Paramount Pep Club" recreation rooms, a home office employees' organization, in the Paramount Building at Times Square, New York.

$2,012,000 for Quarter

Mr. Balaban said in his annual report:

"It is almost a year since the present management was elected to take charge of the operations of this company. Figures for 1936 are undoubtedly familiar to most of you. One year ago there were outstanding $24,967,000 of six per cent debentures. There are outstanding as of this date $12,500,000 of three and one-quarter convertible debentures and $10,390,000 of six per cent debentures, a decrease in principal in the funded debt of approximately $2,100,000, reflecting a decrease in the annual interest charges of $482,000. A year ago, 252,534 shares of first preferred $100 par value six per cent stock; as of this date, 148,700 shares, a decrease in the first preferred stock of $10,380,000, decreasing annual dividend charges $622,800. A year ago 644,140 shares of second preferred $10 par value six per cent stock; as of this date $573,805 shares, a reduction of $703,350 in par value, decreasing annual dividend charges $42,210. Total reduction in interest on funded debt and preferred dividends $1,147,000. A year ago 1,610,456 shares of common stock, and when the books were closed for the purpose of taking a record of stockholders for this meeting, there were 2,389,127 shares, an increase of 778,000 shares. The total decrease in par value of all of the classes of securities ranking ahead of the common shares was $13,183,000. All of the increase in common shares arose from the conversion of first and second preferred stock, and no common was issued for any other purpose.

$30,000,000 A YEAR TO U. S. FROM ENGLAND

An amount "in the region of £6,000,000" ($30,000,000*) is paid to the United States annually for films exhibited in England, Oliver Stanley, new president of the Board of Trade, declared in the House of Commons. The figure referred to* 1936, but Mr. Stanley pointed out that exact totals are not available.

He added that the effect of the Films Act had been to reduce the proportion of theatre receipts accruing to distributors of American films.

"Paramount, during the first six months of 1936, after crediting substantial inventory reserves created the year before, showed a net operating profit of $241,000, and in the last six months of 1936, after crediting negligible inventory reserves, profits were $5,771,000. Earnings the first quarter of 1937 were $2,012,000, against $718,000 in the same period a year ago. These figures do not include $639,000 of Paramount's share of undistributed subsidiary profits in the first quarter of 1937 or earnings from Olympia now out of receivership compared with $489,000 in the same quarter of 1936. During the month of April the parent company earnings, after normal income tax, were $585,000, against $191,000 last year. These earnings do not include Paramount's undistributed share of earnings of partly-owned subsidiaries amounting to $201,000, as compared with $102,000 a year ago.

"Although Paramount's picture productions for a number of years have not satisfactorily appealed to our foreign market, the box office quality of our product has improved considerably for the domestic market, and we now believe we have a program of pictures which will be received enthusiastically not only by our domestic but by our foreign customers as well. Records of Paramount's wholly-owned and subsidiary theatres indicate that Paramount's pictures have moved from fourth to second place in box office value of production during the past year. The picture program for the 1937-38 season, which begins September 1st, has been planned for the highest quality and box office appeal. Our sales departments, both foreign and domestic, are most enthusiastic over the coming program, and we invite those of you who are interested to examine the book featuring that program.

Interest Reduced

"Shortly after taking charge, this management started the work of consolidating, eliminating and reorganizing functions and departments operating out of the home office. The results of these efforts are reflected in annual savings to your company in excess of $750,000. To date the executive payroll, both in the studio and in the home office (including the proposed Zukor contract) is substantially less than the same payroll a year ago, and I believe lower than any similar payroll in any other major company.

"The effect of closer control, which made this company a more desirable credit risk, combined with the improved money market, resulted in a drive to reduce interest charges on funded and mortgage debt of this corporation and wholly-owned subsidiaries, which resulted in annual savings of $842,000. The combined savings resulting from operating economies, reduction of interest charges on funded debts, reduction of interest charges on mortgages and dividends on first and second preferred shares previously referred to amounted to the elimination of prior charges against the common stock of a sum exceeding $2,000,000 annually. A year ago there were $2,850,000 of accumulated dividends on both classes of preferred stock. These have all been paid, and in addition thereto the sum of $1,590,000 in current dividends accruing during the year have been paid. This program of clearing up all preferred dividends was completed a few months ago. I also call your attention to the fact that we have today tendered for cancellation $1,998,000 par value six per cent debentures, all of which were purchased for cash in the open market, this amount being due today under the sinking fund provisions applying to profits for the period ending December 31, 1936. During the year the corporate structure of this company has been further simplified by the consolidation of departments and the eliminating, through merger and otherwise, of over 100 corporations, and it is the policy of this management to continue this program.

"The efforts of the head of your theatre department and the officers of this corporation during the past year have been in the direction of a closer and more permanent relationship with its theatre operating affiliates.

"I have just returned from a five weeks' visit to most of our European offices. Our foreign business has not kept pace with our domestic business. This is primarily due to the fact that our product for the past several years has not had international appeal. We have been aware of this condition, and I firmly believe that the 1937-38 program will materially improve our foreign business.

"On June 4th, the reorganization of Olympia Theatres was completed and from now on earnings of this important subsidiary will be included in our consolidated statements, and it is expected that there will be added to Paramount's earnings approximately $600,000 per year as a result thereof.

"As president of the company I want to pay my most sincere gratitude to all my fellow officers and co-workers. They have worked devotedly and unselfishly both night and day and I am sure no other organization surpasses in loyalty and devotion to duty the spirit of my fellow officers and employees," concluded Mr. Balaban.

Eight Features Ready

Mr. Balaban said that the company now has completed eight feature pictures ready for release, more than at this time in any other year, and made at a total cost of $6,000,000, one of which, "She Met Him in Paris," already released, is an outstanding success, according to Mr. Balaban. Total inventory at present is between $19,000,000 and $20,000,000 against $17,300,000 on December 31, 1936. Cash on hand is nearly $10,000,000.

Higher box office prices are likely in the fall, he said.

In spite of improvements in earnings reported by Mr. Balaban, since its last annual meeting and progress in film production reported by the management, the stockholders gathering this year provided even more dramatic scenes of belligerency than a year ago. Sydney B. Self, reporting at the meeting for the Wall Street Journal, wrote that Mr. Griffis, executive committee chairman, "angered by the charges of a stockholder, offered to take him outside and settle the matter. It was facetiously suggested that the company sell film rights for its next meeting."

The high point in belligerency was reached when the stockholder, Dr. Irving Chestman, a dentist, charged that Securities and Exchange Commission reports had revealed that Mr. Griffis and his firm, Hemphill Noyes and Company, had been short of the common stock. Mr. Griffis walked over to him and offered to "fight it out now with him or take him outside." He said such charges were bitter, outrageous and indecent. Mr. Griffis stated he was the largest individual stockholder. The transaction which consisted of buying preferred, converting it and selling the common was an arbitrage transaction entered into for the purpose of reducing the amount of preferred outstanding by conversion. During the transaction a few hundred shares of common were "short" due to delayed delivery of the preferred.

Balaban Attacked

When this episode ended Saul Rogers, an attorney claiming to represent 10,000 shares of Paramount stock at the meeting, crossed swords with Mr. Balaban, who had just been outlining to the 250 stockholders attending the meeting various economies he said he had inaugurated.

Mr. Rogers interrupted to charge that Mr. Ballaban was "merely juggling figures."

Other stockholders yelled for Mr. Rogers to "sit down and shut up."

"I don't have to take that sort of language from you or anyone," declared Mr. Balaban, leaving the chairman's table in a gesture that seemed to indicate he was abandoning the meeting. Other officials prevailed upon him to return.

Still later, Mr. Rogers questioned Mr. Balaban regarding his salary from Paramount. Paramount pays $156,000 per year to Balaban and Katz, Paramount midwest circuit subsidiary founded by the Balabans for the services of Barney Balaban, Paramount president, but pays no direct salary to Mr. Balaban, he explained to stockholders.

Mr. Balaban said he had no contract with Paramount, that he held a long-term pact with B. and K. and did not disclose at what salary. He said that "97½ per cent of the $156,000 paid by Paramount to B. and K. was returned to the parent company by the subsidiary in the form of dividends."

Mr. Rogers then questioned Mr. Balaban on a reduction in the company's cash position from $10,000,000 to approximately $8,000,000 since the release of the annual report January 2, and on production costs which he charged exceeded budgets in several instances, asserting that while the "president is boasting about economies, there is extravagance at the studio." Later, Mr. Rogers offered an apology to Mr. Balaban for "giving the unintended impression that you were being accused of juggling the figures."

After heated discussion, confined to less than half-a-dozen opposing stockholders, the new contract with Adolplh Zukor, chairman of the board now in charge of film production, was approved.

The contract provides a salary of $3,000 weekly for Mr. Zukor plus a bonus of seven and a half per cent on the first $2,500,000 annual profits from the film production division and five per cent on the next $2,500,000 profits from this division. These profits, however, are figured after the deduction from film operations of $1,400,000 annual interest charges on funded debt and $1,000,000 share of the operating overhead plus provision for income taxes, making a total deduction of over $2,400,000. Mr. Zukor's participation starts after this amount has been provided for out of gross profits from films. Mr. Balaban said that Mr. Zukor's bonus, based on the last five months of last year when he had charge of the studios, would be about $40,000 and his total bonus for the film year ending August 31, 1937, would not be over $100,000.

"PEACE" CONFERENCE ACTION IS DELAYED

W. A. Steffes, chairman of the national defense committee of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, is awaiting answers to invitations sent to heads of large motion picture companies for a "peace conference" between distributors and independent exhibitors.

Distributing company executives have not indicated what action they will take. The conference, authorized at the recent national Allied convention in Milwaukee, is for discussion and possible solution of trade practice problems and of independent exhibitors' opposition to expansion moves by major affiliated circuits.

Profit Sharing Feature

One opponent of the contract estimated, in addressing the meeting, that it could return Mr. Zukor $600,000 a year.

Mr. Balaban, discussing the pact, pointed out that approximately $1,477,000 in expenses and approximately $900,000 in interest were deductible from film earnings before the profits on which Mr. Zukor's participation is based, could be determined. He estimated that Mr. Zukor might realize less than $250,000 annually on the pact, in contrast to the stockholder's estimate of $600,000. Mr. Balaban also asserted that the Paramount board could have given Mr. Zukor a contract for $10,000, "or some such amount," per week in straight salary but that both the board and Mr. Zukor chose to make it a profit participation, knowing that in that form it would have to be submitted to and approved by the stockholders before becoming effective.

The contract was negotiated by Mr. Griffis and recommended for approval by the board, Mr. Balaban said. He paid tribute to Mr. Zukor's achievement at the studio and stated that, even with the new contract, Mr. Zukor would probably be the lowest paid executive in Hollywood occupying a post of equal responsibility.

Stockholder criticism of the pact centered for the most part on the fact that it would permit Mr. Zukor to participate in profits before a dividend has been paid by Paramount on its common stock.

"Mr. Zukor should be able to hobble along, somehow, on his present salary of $430 a day Saturdays, Sundays, holidays and vacation," one stockholder declared. "It will be time enough to vote him a contract of this kind when the company is paying dividends to its stockholders."

"I'm as anxious as anyone to see dividends paid," Mr. Balaban replied. "You're getting nearer every day to one and if business conditions remain about as they are there should be one in the not too distant future."

The stockholders approved the profit-sharing agreement with Adolph Zukor running, retroactively from August 1, 1936, to December 31, 1937, and authorized the board to renew the agreement or to make a new one for the ensuing three years, by a vote of 3,558,061 shares to 12,188. This represented the approval of nearly 60 per cent of the 5,935,708 votes of record for the meeting.

Directors Named

Elected to the company's directorate were Neil F. Agnew, Stephen Callaghan, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, Charles A. McCullock and Austin C. Keough.

Mr. Keough is the sixth management representative on the present board of 16 directors. He succeeded Harry O. King, a representative of Allied Owners Corporation of Brooklyn, which was a large creditor in the Paramount reorganization. The other five directors whose terms expired with Tuesday's meeting were reelected for a one-year term. Other management men on the board in addition to Mr. Keough and Mr. Agnew are Mr. Zukor, chairman; Barney Balaban, president; Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president and theatre head, and E. V. Richards, head of Richards-Saenger Theatres. Mr. Griffis, who has been chairman of the executive committee for the past year, is also a board member.

The meeting also authorized the reduction of the company's authorized and issued stock in accordance with conversions of preferred into common up to May 15 last.

The proposal to increase authorized common stock to 6,000,000 shares of $1 par value from 4,500,000 shares was not voted on since 66 2/3% of the votes of the stock is necessary for approval and only about 60% of the total voting power was represented at the meeting. The meeting was adjourned to June 24 to complete this part of the business.

Mr. Balaban said that all of the present authorized common will be needed for conversion of preferred stock and bonds and to take care of a small amount of remaining creditors' claims. The company has no plans whatever for issuing the new stock, he said, but should have it available in case it was needed to take advantage of some favorable opportunity for expansion or refunding. He pledged that none of the proposed new stock would be issued as bonuses or optioned until common stockholders had received dividends.

Austin Keough, vice-president, said on Wednesday that a suit in equity had been filed by a stockholder in the New York supreme court, asking a permanent injunction against execution of the contract with Mr. Zukor.

Suits naming former officers and directors of Paramount, which were brought by the company's reorganization trustees two years ago in an effort to recover several million dollars allegedly paid in bonuses and realized on stock subscriptions under a Paramount employees' stock purchase plan, have been set for trial on September 7, inquiring stockholders were informed yesterday by Edwin L. Weisl, of counsel for the company.

ZUKOR PREDICTS ERA OF "BIGGER" PICTURES, RUNNING FIVE WEEKS

Paramount Convention Hears Production Chief Explain New Trends in Exhibition, Along Lines of Longer Runs

Paramount Pictures concluded its sales convention in Hollywood last Sunday at the Hotel Ambassador, and immediately sent its forces back into the field to exhibitors with portfolios for a feature program of from 50 to 60 features in 1937-38, 22 of which, they promise, will cost $1,000,000 each.

One of the highlights of the meeting was the address on Friday of Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board and head of production, in his discussion of the coming product, which was outlined in detail in Motion Picture Herald's issue of June 12, on page 41. Mr. Zukor said he expected the coming season to be the greatest for top calibre pictures in many a year because the public is now demanding the highest type of screen entertainment. He expects that by next fall so-called "big" pictures will run five or six weeks where only a year ago they were accorded possibly two weeks and two years ago one week.

Mr. Zukor said that Paramount's 22 "million dollar" features included on the company's new program should do a greater volume of business than did the 60 pictures the company released during the past year. He urged the sales delegates to "educate" exhibitors of the nation to seek their profits in "quality pictures rather than in quantity."

"The charge," Mr. Zukor also said, "can no longer be made that studio people are blind to the requirements and difficulties of the men who are out in the field selling pictures. Frankly, when I came to Hollywood last year, after serving many years in New York, I expected to find a great indifference to the salesmen's problems. I was pleasantly surprised, however, to discover that there is a great deal of interest in the distribution of films, more, in fact, than I was able to satisfy with information at hand."

Urges International Scope

Restoration of the truly international scope of the screen, with the obstacles set up by the introduction of talking pictures now largely overcome, has made desirable the inclusion in Hollywood pictures of outstanding personalities from foreign fields, Mr. Zukor said. "The fact that artistry knows no national boundaries alone makes such a policy sound from the standpoint of showmanship," he added. "So long as motion pictures entertain the entire world it is only reasonable that they should absorb talent from all points of the compass. In addition the fact that filmusicals and important dramatic productions having musical backgrounds are to be greatly increased in number makes the signing of such personalities most practical, for certainly music knows no tongue."

Mr. Zukor announced that the newest of artists from foreign lands to be signed by Paramount include Isa Miranda, one of Italy's feminine stars who as yet has been given no assignment; Georges Rigaud, South American star, born in Argentine, who has appeared in Europe and who probably will appear opposite Dietrich in "Midnight"; also Beatrice Lillie, comedienne of the English theatre, recently starring at the New York Winter Garden, has been signed to appear opposite Bing Crosby in the Emanuel Cohen production "English Derby"; Oscar Homolka, Viennese star on the European stage, is already at work in "Ebb Tide."

MORE THEATRES IN PHILIPPINES

An increase of 10 per cent in the number of theatres licensed to operate in the Philippine Islands during the first quarter of 1937 as compared with the same period in 1936 was reported to the Department of Commerce by American Trade Commissioner J. Bartlett Richards, Manila.

The total this year was 223, which did not include nine theatres operated by the American Army and Navy hospitals and post exchanges which do not need licenses.

Franciska Gaal, Hungarian stage and screen star, will make her Hollywood debut in Cecil B. DeMille's "Buccaneer." The company also plans important roles for Olympe Bradna, petite French girl who was a French Casino star. Still another English girl, Sandra Storm, "London's most photographed model," has been given a contract following her appearance in "Artists and Models."

"Blocked Profits" Problem

John Hicks, Jr., foreign distribution manager, in his address, said the fact that the outstanding problems of current distribution in world markets were the practice of "blocked profits" by several foreign countries, necessity for dubbing in foreign languages and meeting constantly changing governmental regulations. Despite the difficulties, however, Mr. Hicks declared the world market is profitable and that even in countries of distressed economic conditions there is plenty of money for good pictures and that prospects for the future are very bright.

Mr. Hicks also announced the renewal of the lease on Paramount's Paris studio for six years. He declared that business in England is good and that many foreign countries, notably Japan and Italy, are endeavoring to induce Paramount to erect studios.

Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, and Mr. Hicks relayed greetings of Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, to the delegates. Mr. Agnew expressed Mr. Balaban's regret that he was unable to attend the meetings and explained that he was detained by other business in New York.

Business Up 14 Per Cent

Charles M. Reagan, western division sales manager, declared that the company's business for the first 17 weeks of this year was more than 14 per cent above the business for the same period in the best previous year, 1929. He said the company is now servicing more than 91 per cent of its possibilities.

J. J. Unger, eastern division manager, awarded gold watches to 15 members of the 100 Per Cent Club, and Mr. Reagan presented cash prizes to the winners of the Adolph Zukor Silver Jubilee sales drive.

The 100 Per Cent Club winners were E. M. Adams, Charlotte; N. Davidson, Washington; D. C. Elmo, Pittsburgh; J. F. Gubbins, Boston; Irving Lesser, New York; J. C. Rodman, Cincinnati; C. N. Weaver, Dallas; J. S. Young, New Orleans; F. R. Anderson and A. S. Carr, Minneapolis; C. J. Duer, Denver; M. Segel, Seattle; W. A. Wender, St. Louis; H. Wirthwein, Chicago; J. R. Young, Kansas City, and H. L. Pfaff, Toronto. All were presented with gold watches.

William Erb of Boston won first prize among the district managers in the Zukor drive. He received $650 for first place and Milton Kusell, New York, second, received $450. Among the exchanges, New York was first and each man in the office was awarded a bonus equivalent to two week's salary; Boston, second, one and one-half week's salary; New Jersey, third, one week; New Haven, a half week's salary; Montreal, first in the Canadian division, two week's salary.

The branch managers and their awards were: Myron Sattler, New York, $600; Al Kane, Boston, $400; Ed Bell, New Jersey, $300; Edward Ruff, New Haven, $225; Neil East, Seattle, $125. The ad sales managers and their prizes were: George Dewside, Seattle, $200; William Rau, San Antonio, $150; Selby Carr, Minneapolis, $100; Lee Beecher, Albany, $50.

The following salesmen won prizes: Irwin Lesser, New York, $500; Henry Kaufman, New Jersey, $450; Jack Gubbins, Boston, $400; Bernie Brooks, New York, $350; H. A. Germaine, New Haven, $300; George Elmo, Pittsburgh, $250; M. Segal, Seattle, $200; Harry Wirtheim, Chicago, $150; John Harris, Boston, $100; Jack Gardner, Columbus, $50.

Newsreel Issues Lengthened

The public's desire for news has grown phenomenally during the past several years and within the next 18 months newsreel issues will be lengthened to occupy 25 minutes or longer on the average theatre's program, A. J. Richard, Paramount News head, told the delegates as he discussed the newsreel situation before them.

"The important factor to consider," he said, "is the tremendous increase in the value of news itself. It is something that the theatre operator can sell as well as picture personalities.

"This was demonstrated by the recent Hindenburg disaster, which was featured on all marquees and attracted substantial business. All of this is an expression of the public's increasing appetite for news," Mr. Richard added.

Mr. Richard said an extension of the running time of the average news reel was inevitable, therefore, and that it would occur within the next year and a half.

"Paramount News has always been a conservative organization," he concluded, "and we do not fall for current modes in newsreel presentation without serious thought. But we have quietly worked out plans for the coming production battle for longer newsreels, which we think is impending."

The convention closed on Sunday with the early part of the day being devoted to individual sales meetings with district and branch managers of various territories. Luncheon was followed by a visit to the studios by the delegates and a buffet dinner on one of the stages concluded the meeting. The men are expected to be back in their respective territories by the early part of next week.

Hays to Coast

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, has left New York City for the Coast, where he plans to remain for three months.

RKO RADIO LISTS 56 FEATURES AND 198 SHORT SUBJECTS FOR 1937-38

Individual Picture Budgets Are Eliminated; Delegates to Annual Sales Convention Hear of New Studio Policy

RKO Radio Pictures highlighted its convention, from Wednesday to Sunday, in Los Angeles, with announcements of 56 features and 198 short subjects for 1937-38, and the elimination of individual picture budgets in order to avoid the tendency to grade product at the studios on the basis of expenditures.

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, presiding at the convention, at the Ambassador Hotel, said that Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, co-starred in an Irving Berlin musical and in individual starring attractions, Katharine Hepburn, Barbara Stanwyck, Lily Pons, Joe E. Brown, Bobby Breen and Wheeler and Woolsey will continue under the RKO Radio banner, while Irene Dunne returns to the fold, as do Miriam Hopkins and Mitzi Green, now grown up. Newcomers include Nino Martini, Charles Boyer, Bob Burns and Joan Fontaine.

Among the other personalities to appear in RKO Radio products are Herbert Marshall, Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond, Cary Grant, Burgess Meredith, Harriet Hilliard, Joel McCrea, Louis Hayward, Joe Penner, Milton Berle, Anne Shirley, Fred Stone, Margot Grahame, Erik Rhodes, Preston Foster, John Beal, Eduardo Ciannelli, Walter Abel, James Gleason, James Ellison, Onslow Stevens, Eric Blore, Lucille Ball, Thelma Leeds, Ray Mayer and Billy Gilbert.

RKO Radio Debut of Walt Disney

Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," a full-length feature in Technicolor, will highspot this producer's premiere presentation on the RKO Radio schedule which for the first time will have Disney's Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Silly Symphonies.

Play properties to be filmed by RKO include "Stage Door," by George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber; "Having Wonderful Time," the Connolly-Kober comedy, and "Irene," the Tierney-McCarthy musical with a record of "the longest run musical on Broadway."

From England will come a production of "Victoria the Great," produced by Herbert Wilcox and co-starring Anton Walbrook and Anna Neagle.

"New Faces of 1938" will continue the idea of fostering new talent inaugurated with the current season's edition of the musical extravaganza.

Short subjects to the number of 198 to be distributed include news, magazine, sports, musical, novelty and comedy subjects. Edgar Kennedy and Leon Errol are stars of the two-reelers, while talent in short musicals will include name bands and stars like Rita Rio, Pinky Tomlin and Sunnie O'Dea. Pathe News will cover news events and the March of Time will continue its dramatized news presentations.

Staff of Chief Briskin

S. J. Briskin, vice-president, will continue in charge of production at the RKO studios in Hollywood where most of the new season's product will be made. Sol Lesser, George Hirliman, Condor Pictures and Herbert Wilcox will produce at other studios, Mr. Wilcox producing in England.

MERCHANTS PAY FOR FREE SHOW

Ed Ramsey, who operates the Plymouth Theatre at Plymouth, Ohio, has abolished his 9:00 P. M. performance on Wednesday nights and in its stead he presents a free street show for which he is paid by merchants.

The screen is erected on the side of a store building, the projector and sound equipment being mounted on a truck. A different film than the one presented in the theatre is shown.

Heading the list of producers working with Mr. Briskin at the Hollywood studio will be Pandro S. Berman, Jesse Lasky and Edward Small, Maurice Cohen, Edward Kaufman, Al Lewis, Lee Marcus, Cliff Reid, Robert Sisk, William Sistrom and P. J. Wolfson.

Directors scheduled to make RKO Radio features include John Blystone, Christy Cabanne, Edward Cline, Wallace Fox, Howard Hawks, Ben Holmes, Leigh Jason, Edward Killy, Gregory LaCava, Lew Landers, Rowland V. Lee, Joseph Lerner, Reuben Mamoulian, George Nicholls, Jr., Richard Rosson, Mark Sandrich, Alfred Santell, Joseph Santley, William Seiter, George Stevens and Ben Stoloff.

Writers include F. Hugh Herbert, Dudley Nichols, Ernest Pagano, Benny Rubin, Allan Scott, Irwin Shaw, Viola Brothers Shore, Commander Frank Wead, Dorothy Yost.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers once again will have Irving Berlin as their musical associate in an untitled dancing-singing film again produced by Pandro S. Berman.

Astaire will star individually in a second Pandro Berman production, while Ginger Rogers will solo-star in the musical, "Irene," co-star with Katharine Hepburn in "Stage Door" and team with Charles Boyer in "Perfect Harmony."

Katharine Hepburn, in addition to co-starring with Miss Rogers in "Stage Door," will star alone in an untitled Berman production.

Irene Dunne will star in two pictures, the first being "The Joy of Loving," with music, story and lyrics by Jerome Kern, Dorothy Fields and Herbert Fields. Felix Young will produce.

Stars of Radio, Opera and Screen

Barbara Stanwyck will star in two pictures.

Lily Pons will make her third RKO screen appearance in "The Girl in a Cage," musical, to be produced by Jesse L. Lasky. Jack Oakie, who appeared with Miss Pons in "That Girl from Paris," will be in the cast which to date includes Erik Rhodes.

Nino Martini will star in "Music for Madame," in which Joan Fontaine will be his lead. Rudolph Friml will write the music and Gus Kahn the lyrics. Herb Magidson and Allie Wrubel will write additional music. Jesse L. Lasky will produce.

Miriam Hopkins returns for one picture to RKO Radio banner.

Bobby Breen will star in three productions, to be produced by Sol Lesser.

Joe E. Brown will star in "Fit for a King," a David L. Loew production directed by Edward Sedgwick. Helen Mack, Paul Kelly, Halliwell Hobbes, Harry Davenport, Frank Reicher and Charles Lane are in the cast.

Mitzi Greene, famous as a child star and now a grown-up Broadway star, will headline in a Lew Brown and Ray Henderson musical, "Love Below Freezing." Pandro S. Berman will produce.

George O'Brien, in his second year under RKO, will star in six pictures to be produced by Condor Pictures, of which George Hirliman is executive producer.

Wheeler and Woolsey will again co-star in a new feature.

Richard Dix returns to RKO Radio after a year's absence under other auspices in a picture to be produced by George A. Hirliman.

"Victoria the Great" from Wilcox

"Victoria the Great" will be distributed by United Artists. Only recently did the British Government lift restrictions on stories dealing with Queen Victoria. Produced in England by Herbert Wilcox, "Victoria the Great" co-stars Anton Walbrook and Anna Neagle. Mr. Wilcox directed from a script by Miles Malleson. H. B. Warner heads the supporting cast.

"Radio City Revels," a musical revue, will have a cast headed by Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Victor Moore, Lucille Ball, Buster West and Melissa Mason. P. J. Wolfson will produce.

"The Life of the Party," a musical, will be the first of the new season featuring Joe Penner, Parkyakarkus, Victor Moore, Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard, Helen Broderick and Eric Blore. Herb Magidson and Allie Wrubel will provide the music for the Edward Kaufman production which William A. Seiter is directing.

"Having Wonderful Time," to be adapted from the Broadway play, will be a Pandro S. Berman production. The Arthur Kober comedy was produced in New York by Marc Connolly. Jack Oakie has been named for the cast.

Diversity of Short Product

The 198 short subjects will include: 18 Walt Disney "Mickey Mouse" and "Silly Symphony" animated cartoons; 13 issues of the March of Time; two series of single reel musicals, 13 to be produced by Condor Pictures, and six by Atlas Pictures; 13 Bill Corum sports reels produced by Condor; seven issues of Pathe Parade, film novelties produced by Pathe News; 104 editions of Pathe News and 24 two reel comedies released in six series as follows: six Edgar Kennedys; six Leon Errols; three Radio Flashes; three Headliners; three Smart Sets and three Radio Musicals.

Mr. Briskin handed Lee Marcus, at the convention, a producing assignment consisting of almost half of Radio's production output for next year, based upon an annual budget for the entire assignment rather than a group of individual picture budgets.

The principle involved, according to Mr. Briskin, is an attempt to eliminate whatever production tendencies there may be on the lot toward gradation of pictures.

"Several situations have led us to this decision," said Mr. Briskin, "the most important of which are the facts that face us in achievements of this year over last year at this same date. On May 10, 1936, in this group we had completed only about two-thirds of our old program, with no material at hand for the 1937 schedule, while today we have not only entirely completed this group but have at least 20 of the new 1937-38 properties already in production or preparation.

"As to the gradation of pictures in terms of the alphabet, we have had it definitely proven to us that public opinion is the conclusive marker. Our classification of a picture before it is put into production, either through budgeting its cast or by studding its cast with star names, has little bearing so long as it clicks at the box office."

Formal announcement of the appointment of Bernard G. Kranze, who has been a salesman in RKO Radio Pictures' New York City Exchange for six years, as manager of the Albany Exchange was made at the convention by Jules Levy, general sales manager.

Mr. Kranze succeeds C. R. Halligan, resigned, and has already assumed his new duties.

Depinet Heads Eastern Group

One hundred Eastern delegates to RKO Radio's six annual and third international sales convention, departed from the Grand Central Station last Saturday aboard a special train, which stopped en route to pick up delegates from other cities.

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution, and Jules Levy, general sales manager, headed the eastern delegation, and Phil Reisman, foreign sales manager, was in charge of foreign representatives.

The train stopped at Albany, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Little Rock and Dallas to pick up branch managers and salesmen from RKO exchanges. The train was augmented at St. Louis and Dallas with more cars.

At Dallas, Fort Worth, Sweetwater, Texas; El Paso and Tucson, Arizona, the conventionites left the trains for special receptions and entertainment.

Delegates from the west coast offices journeyed direct to Los Angeles.

The home office delegation included C. E. Smith, sales manager for the southern and western division; E. L. McEvoy, eastern sales manager; M. G. Poller, contract liquidation; H. J. Michalson, short subjects sales manager; W. J. McShea, assistant manager of exchange operations; S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity; Rutgers Neilson, publicity manager; Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager; Harry Gittleson, editor of "Flash"; L. H. Miller, contract approval, west and south; Wm. E. Dehler, contract approval, east; Sid Kramer, manager print and negative department; James E. Finey, secretary to Jules Levy; William Mallard, chief counsel; James A. Clark, manager and sales department; Arthur Willi, head of the eastern new talent department; five divisional public relation representatives—F. R. Fielding, east; V. H. Adams, south; W. J. Healy, east central; Fred Marshall, west, and J. M. Joice, midwest; Nate Blumberg, vice-president and general manager of RKO Theatres; J. J. O'Connor, general manager, RKO Film Booking Corporation; Major L. E. Thompson, RKO Theatres executives, and the following traveling home office representatives: W. A. Burke, J. E. Cashman, J. A. Downing, J. J. Schmitzer, R. E. Holmes, and R. A. O'Brien.

A. H. McCausland is attending as a representative of the Irving Trust Company. From the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation are M. Kingsburg, vice-chairman. Kay Kamen and Hal Sloan are on hand from the Walt Disney Enterprises; also F. Ullman, Jr., general manager of Pathe News; and four representatives of the March of Time—Ralph Rolan, A. Sindlinger, C. Findley and John Wood.

Leo Spitz, president of RKO Radio Pictures, and A. A. Schubart, manager of exchange operations, already are in Hollywood.

Condor Productions sent Frank Snell to the convention from the New York office.

Overseas delegates on hand: Harry W. Leasim, general manager in charge of operations in continental Europe; Ralph Hanbury, managing director of Radio Pictures, Ltd., RKO Radio's United Kingdom division; Douglas Lotherington, general sales manager for RKO Radio Pictures (Asia) Ltd.; and Reginald Armour, Far Eastern and Indian sales manager.

Several additions have been made to the physical equipment at the Radio Studios on Gower Street and at the RKO Radio ranch in the San Fernando Valley, the delegates were told. These improvements include a three-story office building, a vault at the Hollywood studio, and a rural New England street and artificial lake at the ranch.

Academy Reports Progress in Television Projection Devices for Larger Screen

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood, through its Research Council's Scientific Committee, this week completed an annual report on the status of television, outlining developments since the first report, issued in May, 1936.

"It is still improbable that television will burst on an unprepared motion picture industry," the report observed, adding the opinion that "many millions of dollars must be invested before a nationwide urban exploitation of television becomes possible in the United States." The start of such a development, it was said, forecast for 1937-38, is confirmed. But, "television service for rural areas is still beyond the calculable figure."

The one change to which the Academy does call attention is that recent improvements in the design of electronic projection devices give promise of a considerable enlargement of television screen areas, "the realization of which would vastly accelerate the evolution of television as a practical art."

The report, which is being distributed particularly for the information of studio production executives and others who may be interested in the possible future effects of television upon the motion picture industry, has been prepared from consideration of the results of a thorough investigation of the present status of television throughout the entire world.

Membership of the committee, which prepared the report, consists of Carl Dreher, Gordon Chambers, L. E. Clark, J. G. Frayne, Barton Kreuzer, Wesley C. Miller, Hollis Moyse, William Mueller, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

In addition, the Council in the report acknowledges the cooperation of the group of members of the Academy Technicians Branch now working in England, and the London representatives of the Hollywood producing companies who have assisted in the correlation of the material upon which the report is based.

"In view of the progress being made in television and the widespread interest throughout the motion picture industry in the subject, the committee in the future will prepare semi-annual reports—the next report being planned for issuance in January of 1938," it was said.

Wisconsin Passes Anti-ASCAP Bill

The Wisconsin legislature has approved the Cashman bill which, if signed by the governor, will make impossible the collection of fees in the state by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The measure provides for a 25 percent franchise tax on the entire gross business done by music brokers in Wisconsin.

It also sets a $25 annual license fee for investigators of copyright music. Violators would be subject to fines of from $200 to $500.

Hearings on a suit brought by Ascap to challenge the constitutionality of a similar law in Washington will be held June 29th before three judges in Federal Court, Seattle. Ascap charges the recently enacted law violates the federal copyright act, is confiscatory and makes it impossible to do business in Washington.

The National Association of Radio Broadcasters has retained Alfred J. Schweppe, partner in the McMicken, Ramsey, Rupp & Schweppe law company of Seattle, as chief counsel in its litigation against Ascap. Mr. Schweppe handled the broadcasters' case in Montana.

New Film Center Leases

Film Center Building Corporation in New York announced this week the leasing of fourth floor space at 630 Ninth Avenue to the Mutual Motion Picture Distributors, Inc., and a film vault on the sixth floor to the American Tobis Corporation.

UNITED ARTISTS ANNOUNCES 36 FOR 1937-38 AT COST OF $26,000,000

George Schaefer Details to Convention Delegates a List of Ten Features in Color for Coming Season

A United Artists release schedule of 36 productions of which a minimum of 10 will be in color was announced for the 1937-38 season by George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager, on Monday as the company's eastern sales convention opened at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York. A second meeting for western and southern representatives opened in Chicago on Thursday.

In an address which preceded the product announcement, Mr. Schaefer deplored the lack of extended runs for good product and urged an increase in admissions. Discussing the company's activities during the last year, he said that the period was the best in United Artists' history and that "more contracts in major situations were sold than ever before".

Percentage terms on approximately 28 of the 36 features planned for release were reported by Mr. Schaefer. The groups range from 25 to 40 per cent with four Samuel Goldwyn films in the top bracket. They include "Hurricane," which will cost about $1,500,000; "The Adventures of Marco Polo," which also is expected to be budgeted at $1,500,000; "The Goldwyn Follies," on which an expenditure of $2,000,000 is expected; "The Cowboy and the Lady," which probably will cost about $1,000,000. The two last-named will be filmed in Technicolor.

In addition to the feature lineup, the company will distribute nine Skippy animated short subjects in Technicolor, the first of which will be "The Dog Catcher."

The delegates from the mid-western states and home office executives flew to Chicago Wednesday for the regional convention after Mr. Schaefer told the New York meeting that ten of the 36 promised for next season were already completed.

Alexander Korda, through Maurice Silverstone and Morris Helprin, presented the delegates with gold pens and pencils.

Field Expense Doubled

United Artists budget for exploitation expenditure in the field will be more than doubled for the coming season, Monroe W. Greenthal, director of advertising and publicity, said at the meeting.

Commenting upon the fact that advertising, publicity and exploitation work commences from the moment the story idea is decided, Mr. Greenthal asserted that work of this nature is an integral part of sales and that the closest cooperation between the two is greatly beneficial to the production.

Results of the experimentation over the past year have convinced United Artists producers and officials that key cities no longer are the only spots that offer revenue large enough to warrant sizable expenditures to help the exhibitor. In a great number of instances, money judiciously spent in smaller situations has built the grosses to many times the anticipated figure, Mr. Greenthal explained.

In view of these results, United Artists has discussed plans for intensive concentration on various methods of advertising, publicity and ate on special drives with circuits and to tie in as closely as possible with the exhibitor through United Artists.

KORDA SEES DEAL NEAR COMPLETION

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

Alexander Korda told reporters on his arrival here from New York that the arrangement for assuming control of United Artists by Samuel Goldwyn and himself had been practically completed. London Films will hold a half interest with Mr. Goldwyn, he said, with the same distribution costs. Both Mr. Goldwyn and Walter Wanger will produce at Denham, he added, with some scenes for "Goldwyn Follies" to be made there.

London Films' output will be increased, Mr. Korda indicated, by about 50 per cent, with budgets set at about $10,000,000 for 28 pictures by the end of 1938.

Saying that big campaigns offer tremendous insurance for hold overs, Mr. Greenthal outlined in detail the projected plans for the campaign on "The Prisoner of Zenda," the recently-completed production of David O. Selznick. As a departure from the usual method, arrangements are being made to present directly to the public the several different selling angles of this picture.

He likewise discussed the campaign for Samuel Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas."

Hal Horne, associate producer for Walter Wanger, gave an account of the production plans of his organization. Supplementing the remarks about the Wanger product made earlier by George Schaefer, Mr. Horne disclosed the various angles of the national exploitation and publicity campaign which have already been definitely set for Wanger's "Vogues of 1938," first release for the new season. Mr. Horne then concentrated upon "52nd Street," Wanger's production now filming.

Contributing to the season's release schedule will be Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Charlie Chaplin and Walter Wanger in Hollywood, and Alexander Korda's London Films in England. The new program will represent an expenditure aggregating $26,000,000 the convention delegates were told.

Producers and titles are:

Samuel Goldwyn

Dead End, stage play now under direction of William Wyler with Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor and Allen Jenkins.

Stella Dallas, which King Vidor directed with Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Ann Shirley and Alan Hale, and which is already in the cutting room.

The Hurricane, by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, now under the direction of John Ford.

The Adventures of Marco Polo, with Gary Cooper and Sigrid Gurie playing the leads, scheduled to reach the cameras the latter part of this month.

The Goldwyn Follies, in Technicolor, with music by George and Ira Gershwin, slated for early July production. The cast includes Helen Jepson, the Ritz Brothers, Phil Baker, Bobby Clark, Virginia Verrill and Charles Kullmann in addition to the famous Balanchine Ballet and Zorina, London dancer.

The Cowboy and the Lady, co-starring vehicle for Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon, a Technicolor production from a screenplay by Frederick Lonsdale.

You Can Be Beautiful, Technicolor feature which will star Merle Oberon in an original screen story by Katharine Brush.

South of Manila, to be filmed in Technicolor, cast to be announced.

David O. Selznick

The Prisoner of Zenda, the adventure classic which John Cromwell directed with a cast including Ronald Colman, Madeline Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and David Niven.

Nothing Sacred, Technicolor feature with Carole Lombard and Frederic March co-starred under William Wellman's direction.

The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, Mark Twain's story, which will star Tommy Kelly, and will be directed by H. C. Potter from John V. A. Weaver's screen-play.

Two other features which are as yet untitled.

Alexander Korda

Knight Without Armor, teaming Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat.

Four Feathers, a new Robert Donat feature.

The Divorce of Lady X, starring Merle Oberon and Robert Donat in a story by Lajos Biro.

Mutiny in the Mountains, a Technicolor special with Sabu, Paul Lukas and Raymond Massey featured.

Hell's Belles, a Technicolor musical from a script by R. C. Sherriff, to be directed by Victor Saville.

The Tempest Within, which will star Merle Oberon in a Technicolor feature based on an original story by G. B. Stern.

Dark Journey, a spy melodrama produced by Victor Saville from the screen-play by Lajos Biro with Conrad Veidt, Vivien Leigh, Joan Gardner, Anthony Bushell and Ursula Jeans in the principal roles.

Farewell Again, an Erich Pommer production based on a story by Clemence Danes, with Leslie Banks, Flora Robson, Sebastian Shaw, Patricia Hilliard and Rene Ray.

Storm in a Teacup, satirical comedy picturized from the stage play by James Bridie, co-directed by Victor Saville and Ian Dalrymple with Vivien Leigh, Rex Harrison and Ursula Jeans featured.

Action for Slander, which will feature Clive Brook, Margaretta Scott and Ann Todd.

The Diamond Trust, from the Edgar Wallace thriller, which William K. Howard will direct with Edmund Lowe, Sebastian Shaw, Tamara Desni and Ann Todd.

The First and the Last, a story by John Galsworthy which Basil Dean will produce with Vivien Leigh and Leslie Banks.

South Riding, a new Victor Saville production.

The Playboy, a musical by Thornton Freeland with Patricia Ellis, Jack Hulbert and Rex Harrison in the leading roles.

In his address to the 100 home office and sales representatives, Mr. Schaefer said:

"A general increase in admission prices must come to take care of mounting costs in production and theatre operation. A sympathetic understanding and study by Washington would go a long way to help solve this problem.

"Good pictures must be played by every theatre to a point of exhaustion regardless of the number of films under contract. Too many good pictures play for only a minimum period.

"It would be much better to take advantage of each picture and build up a reserve for the lean weeks."

Discussing the number of franchises completed for all United Artists pictures Mr. Schaefer said between 8,800 and 9,200 contracts were sold and on some pictures there were as many as 10,000.

A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager followed Mr. Schaefer on the program and awarded prizes for the recent sales drive. Harry Gold, eastern division manager, introduced a number of new men in his division, including Robert Mochrie, David Prince, Joseph Winer and M. Dunn of Atlanta; Tom Spry, Boston; Carl Mock, Oklahoma City; Robert Campbell and Fred Sande, Washington, and M. Nash, Pittsburgh.

Harry D. Buckley, vice-president of corporate affairs, announced that starting August 1st United Artists would adopt a rental plan for ad accessories, similar to Paramount and Warner Brothers. Mr. Buckley said he is now completing arrangements for rebates on returned accessories in good condition.

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign sales, said that international contracts for the company last year broke all records.

Monroe Greenthal, publicity and advertising head, and Hal Horne, associate producer, spoke on Tuesday morning and the remainder of the Tuesday and Wednesday sessions were devoted to discussions regarding the sale of the 1937-38 product in the individual territories.

Home office executives in addition to those named who attended the meetings were Edward C. Raftery, assistant secretary and member of the board of directors; Jack Schlaifer, western division manager; Paul N. Lazarus, in charge of the contract department; N. A. Thompson, comptroller, and Charles Steele, statistical assistant. District managers included Charles Stern, New York; Thomas P. Spry, Boston; Moe Streimer, special representative for the New York exchange; Bert Stearm, Cleveland and Robert Mochrie, Atlanta.

United Artists Circuit Buys 50% Partnership in Robb and Rowley

An agreement under which the United Artists Theatres circuit gets a 50% partnership interest in the Robb and Rowley circuit of approximately 80 houses in Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas was completed this week.

Harold Robb, Edward Rowley and their attorney this week were on the coast conferring with Joseph M. Schenck, president and chairman of the United Artists circuit. Joseph M. Schenck was expected to arrive in New York late this month to present the deal to the circuit's board which includes Harry D. Buckley, A. H. Frisch, Joseph H. Moscowitz, Bertram S. Nayfack, Dennis F. O'Brien, Willard V. King, William P. Philips and Lee Shubert.

H. B. Robb continues as president, E. H. Rowley as secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Schenck said the deal did not involve the four houses in Little Rock, owned by Robb and Rowley in partnership with Paramount.

The United Artists circuit is interested in more than 165 theatres in the country which are operated by Loew's, Paramount, National Theatres, and Metropolitan Playhouses. Approximately 100 are located in the Greater New York area, 50 in the California region and about 15 in Portland, Ore., Baltimore, Detroit, Chicago, Columbus and Louisville. For the year ended August 31, 1936, the circuit reported a net income of $167,845.66.

Radio Regulation Pledged MPTOA By All Companies

Action on assurances by large producers and distributors that efforts will be made to regulate radio broadcasts starring Hollywood actors or featuring motion picture material so as to minimize competition with theatres will be awaited by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners radio committee before further action is planned, according to Walter Vincent, chairman.

Several companies, notably Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox, have announced radio policies drawn up with this in view and others who were represented at meetings with the MPTOA committee have indicated that they would do so. The chief result of several meetings between the committee and company representatives was a decision that there was little hope of developing any definite set of rules to govern all Hollywood broadcasts.

Company officials agreed with the committee on the potential dangers of unregulated broadcasting but no agreement could be reached on any general method of control to be adopted. Pending observation of the manner in which the regulated broadcasts are conducted the MPTOA committee was of the opinion that little more of a definite nature could be accomplished.

Indications that opposition to the broadcasts, particularly during the hours of peak theatre attendance, has not dwindled crystallized in a protest on the Hollywood Hotel program because too much was revealed of the stories dramatized during the hour, by theatre men at the eastern Washington district meeting of the MPTOA of the Northwest in Spokane.

Only musical pictures or important productions are not affected by the radio dramatizations, it was said. Members of the group agreed that broadcasting of motion pictures is valuable advertising when it serves as a 'teaser," giving the highlights of a film story, not the entire plot and identical dialogue.

Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox have taken steps toward a solution of the problem of regulation by the appointment of studio officials to supervise all broadcast material and appearances of their stars. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will follow a similar policy with a program, details of which are to be announced soon, for which a sponsor will have access to all MGM stars and story material for broadcasts. Louis K. Sidney, managing director of WHN in New York, will supervise the show.

Exploitation of new pictures by producing companies continues unabated. Through cooperation with the Twentieth Century-Fox studios the Mutual network will broadcast the world premiere of "Wee Willie Winkie" at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, June 25th. Although Shirley Temple has never been on the air, she is expected to broadcast greetings.

Opening of "I Met Him in Paris" at the Michigan theatre, Detroit, early this month benefited by a half hour radio preview over every station in the city.

GB AND COLUMBIA CONVENTIONS NEXT WEEK END SALES SESSIONS

Republic Holds More Regionals; Sol Lesser, General Pictures, Associated Artists, Schulberg and Others Set 1937-'38 Plans

The motion picture sales convention season for 1937-38 product selling comes to an end next week with the conventions of GB Pictures, June 25th, in New York, and Columbia Pictures, June 27th, Los Angeles.

Conventions were held this week by Paramount (see page 40); RKO Radio (see page 45), and by United Artists (see page 47).

Republic Pictures held additional regional conventions during the week, in New York and New Orleans.

New season's product plans were completed by Sol Lesser's Principal Pictures, Fenn Kimball's General Pictures, Dudley Murphy's Associated Artists, and by B. P. Schulberg's Major Pictures. Imperial Pictures closed several additional franchise deals with independent exchanges in the field, and Warner Brothers held the second in a series of regional meetings of exchange bookers and advertising and accessory salesmen, on policies for the new season.

With the 56 features announced this week by RKO Radio and Paramount's and United Artists' announcements of 50-to-60 and 36, respectively, the 12 large distributors are down for commitments for some 653 pictures, an increase of 87 over last season's 566.

GB Convenes June 25

George W. Weeks, GB general sales manager, returned to New York from a Hollywood vacation this week to complete final preparations for the company's annual sales convention. The three-day meeting starting June 25th, will be held at the St. Moritz hotel, New York.

Home office executives who will attend include Arthur A. Lee, vice-president; Mr. Weeks; Clinton M. White, assistant general sales manager; Albert Margolies, publicity director; Al Selig, advertising manager; Arthur Greenblatt, in charge of circuit sales; Reg Wilson, Kenneth Hodkinson and William Berry, special sales representatives; Claude Macgowan, comptroller; C. E. Schwengeler, head of the print and negative department. H. William Fitelson, counsel for the company, will also attend the sessions.

From the GB exchanges, the following men will attend: New York Irving Gumberg, Irving Landes, Rudolph Bach, Sol Kravitz; Philadelphia: W. A. V. Mack, Herbert Given, John Schaeffer; Washington: Joseph Kalaski, Milton Caplon; Boston: Marcel Mekelburg, Sam Levine; New Haven: Carl Goe; Buffalo: George Rosenbaum; Cincinnati: Herman L. Booth; Pittsburgh: Mark Goldman, George Wheeler; Cleveland: Joseph E. Loeffler; Detroit: M. Harlan Starr; Indianapolis: Fred Wagoner; Chicago: Max Majur, A. H. Fischer; Milwaukee: W. R. Marshall; Minneapolis: Fred Abelson; St. Louis: Al Kent; Des Moines: Lester Rosenthal; Kansas City, Mo.: Ray Halpern; Dallas: J. L. Franconi; Oklahoma City; W. W. Rucker; Atlanta: Scott E. Chesnutt, J. R. Kitchens; Charlotte: F. E. Dyer; New Orleans: William G. Minder; Denver: R. W. Selig; Salt Lake City: C. F. Rose; Portland, Ore.: Walter Wessling, Archie Holt; Los Angeles: Paul de Outo; San Francisco: Jack Erickson; Seattle: Jean Spear.

GB will release from six to eight British International Pictures in the United States next season, it was reported in New York. The company handled five BIP films this year.

SEEKS TO ADD WORD "HORRIFIC"

A new designation, that of "horrific" films, will be gained by the censor boards of the nine Canadian provinces if Mrs. H. S. Angus of Toronto is successful in her campaign. At the annual convention of the Daughters of the Empire, Mrs. Angus urged the adoption of the new classification as a method of labeling "terrifying" pictures in order to guard sensitive children.

Columbia's Foreign Men Arrive

Headed by Joseph Friedman, managing director of Columbia Pictures' English offices, foreign executives from various parts of the world were arriving almost daily this week to attend the company's annual convention, to be held in Los Angeles, starting June 27th.

Mr. Friedman arrived from England on the S. S. Normandie on Monday. Ramirez Torres, general manager of the Medal Film Exchange, San Juan, Columbia's distributing agency in Puerto Rico, is scheduled to be here within the next few days, and Cecil Mason, general manager, Columbia Pictures, Proprietary, Ltd., of Sydney, Australia, is due to reach San Francisco Tuesday and go directly to Los Angeles.

A number of home office conferences with Jack Cohn have been planned by foreign manager J. H. Seidelman, who returned to New York last Friday from Columbia Studios, where he stopped off on his way East, from his recent trip to the Orient. Mr. Seidelman, accompanied by the foreign visitors, will return to the coast in time for the opening of the convention.

Republic's New Orleans Gathering

Republic's regional convention of franchise holders Friday in New Orleans at the Hotel Jung heard predictions of bigger and better films during the coming year.

Among those present from the New York office were: J. J. Milstein, general sales manager; Sam Hacker, contract department, and H. H. Everett, southern district manager.

Other areas represented included: Atlanta, Ga., A. C. Bromberg, franchise holder; Carl Floyd, manager; George Jones, R. B. Wilbouks and A. E. Rook; Charlotte, N. C., J. H. Dillon, manager; R. H. Bradley, Jack London and Marsh Funderburk; Tampa, Fla., Harry Glover, manager, and H. G. Moore; Memphis, W. M. Snelson, manager, and Lloyd Miller; New Orleans, L. V. Seicshnaydre, manager; J. A. Duffy, C. Y. Harrell, Jr., and George C. Nungesser; Dallas, W. G. Underwood, franchise holder; C. C. Ezell, franchise holder; Lloyd Rust, manager; H. R. Bisby, Grover McDonnell and Roy Starling; Little Rock, B. F. Busby, manager; Fred Lawrence and G. W. Jones; Oklahoma City, Sol Davis, manager; F. R. Moran, G. A. Alt and Eddie Greggs.

Mr. Seicshnaydre was host Friday at a dinner and entertainment for the delegates.

Republic's eastern division sales convention was held in New York Monday at the St. Moritz with 60 home office and eastern branch delegates in attendance.

This convention was the last of four regional meetings held throughout the country under the direction of Mr. Milstein, following the initial meeting of Republic franchise holders on the coast last month. Edward M. Schnitzer, eastern sales head, presided.

Mr. Milstein and Sam Hacker, home office circuit contact, returned Sunday from New Orleans. H. J. Yates, now at the Republic studio, was unable to attend the eastern meeting. Those who were at today's meeting from the home office in addition to Mr. Milstein, Mr. Schnitzer and Mr. Hacker are G. C. Schaefer, William Saal, Al Adams, L. H. Sills and A. L. Pindat. The following attended from the eastern division exchanges:

New York—Herman Gluckman, D. M. Sohmer, Jack Bellman, Robert Fannon, Dave Black, Martin Harra, Sidney Picker and Tony Ricci; Buffalo—Jack Berkowitz, N. R. Sodikman and Howard McPherson; Boston—Herman Rifkin, M. E. Morey, Al Fecke, Jack Davis, Sol Seletsky and C. D. Wilson; New Haven—Robert Cobe; Albany—W. A. Ryan, S. Milberg, B. H. Mills, Mary Hawkins; Philadelphia—Harry A. Lavine, W. C. Karrar, Jerome Lewis, Frank Hammerman; Pittsburgh—J. H. Alexander, Sam Fineberg, George Collins, Hymie Wheeler, Louis E. Hanna; Washington—Sam Flax, Jake Flax, M. R. Oletsky; Detroit—Sam Seplowin, Harry Berman, Fred Strubank, Fred Sturgess; Cleveland—Nat J. Lefton, J. S. Jossey, S. P. Gorrel, F. E. Belles, R. O. Flemm, M. J. Glick, Rudy Norton, L. M. Mishkind; Cincinnati—Max Margolis, George Kirby, Rudy Knoepfle, Robert Drew.

$3,500,000 Sol Lesser Budget

Sol Lesser said he will have a budget for $3,500,000 for the 10 pictures he has set on his 1937-38 schedule. They are three Bobby Breen features, two Tarzan pictures starring Glen Morris, four outdoor action one with Smith Ballew, and one from the series of Edgar Rice Burroughs novels for which Mr. Lesser has placed an option. Mr. Lesser is also reviving plans for the production of "Celluloid," Rupert Hughes' story of the industry. He has also already signed with Twentieth Century-Fox for the distribution of the two of the Tarzan series.

Fenn Kimball this week announced that General Pictures would produce for the 1937-38 season a program embracing eight action features, four westerns and two outdoor color musicals. The titles are as follows:

"Night Edition," by Ray Doyle.
"Circus Queen," by Gertrude Orr.
"The Rockabye Kid," by Edward Sinclair.
"Prison Ship," by Alex Graham.
"Genius Murder Case," by Roy Evans.
"Roaring Wheels," by Charles Dryden.
"Murder in the Air," by Edward Lansing.
"Substitute Prisoner," by Max Marcin.
"The Bandit King," to be done in color.
"The Enchanted Mesa," to be done in color.
"Whippersnapper."
"Master Dynamite."
"Three Feet of Luck."
"Billy the Kid, Jr."

Associated Artists will make four pictures during its first year, including one in England, and the first will go into production in Hollywood towards the end of July, according to Dudley Murphy. The first picture may star Edward G. Robinson in a picturization of the Irving Stone novel, "Lust for Life," or Leslie Howard in "Bonnie Prince Charlie." The company also owns a Dashiell Hammett story.

Eight pictures, the same number as was scheduled for this year, are planned by B. P.

475 Millions Waiting to See Their First Motion Picture

Help for Far East Films Would Aid Americans, Says Del Goodman

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

More than 475,000,000 persons in the Far East have never seen a motion picture. This mass of humanity is, in the main, comprised of the natives of China, the Philippines, Japan and India.

To reach these peoples and make them motion picture conscious there is a great need for development of indigenous film production, in the opinion of Del Goodman, Far Eastern sales manager for Twentieth Century - Fox Films.

Mr. Goodman is now in the United States on a vacation following attendance at the company's sales convention in Los Angeles, where he won highest honors, his territory receiving the Sidney R. Kent award for sales in foreign lands.

According to Mr. Goodman the expansion of production and distribution of indigenous, or domestic films, in the Far Eastern lands, will help to teach enjoyment of motion pictures to the vast numbers who never have seen one. If the natives of these Oriental countries see pictures for the first time, made with players of their own race, speaking their own language they will learn to like films, Mr. Goodman said, and when this takes place the opening of a market for American film product will be greatly enlarged.

All Making Pictures

Practically every country in the Orient is active in film production to some extent. In Japan the number of films produced greatly exceeds the number of pictures made in this country. The Japanese films, however, are quickly and inexpensively produced and for the most part are not successful financially, he said, as in other countries.

Many of the pictures made in Japan, China, India and the Philippines are very good but the production costs have been so high that they have not been financial successes. These plus the poorer pictures have only increased the financial burden and made things difficult for the Oriental producer.

Would Encourage Domestic Films

American film companies would be wise to encourage the production of indigenous pictures, Mr. Goodman believes. The American and Oriental film companies can live side by side, he thinks, and with better domestic films to pave the way the opening of greater markets for American product in the Far East eventually would result.

Another great advantage he sees would be a lightening of such burdens as heavy taxes, quota laws and censorship regulations.

Foreign producers, Mr. Goodman feels, would welcome the advice and interest of American companies and by learning how to cut down on the expense of their productions, developing better means of distributing them and improving their quality, the domestic industry would advance the motion picture into places heretofore undeveloped as a market.

Mr. Goodman, who leaves soon for his home in Shanghai, says that conditions in the Far East have improved considerably during the last three years, though business is still far from the peak in most lines. A number of new theatres have been built and considerable remodeling, and purchasing of new equipment has taken place. Most of the theatres are now wired for sound and use both domestic and American product. American film stars are much preferred, Mr. Goodman says, but a well made domestic picture is most pleasing from the standpoint of sound, as the natives can follow the story more easily.

Approximately half the world's population is located in the territory handled by Mr. Goodman. He travels from one country to another, from China to Japan, the Philippines, Malay Straits and Indo China.

Mr. Goodman says the proper handling of such pictures as "Good Earth" shows the way producers are complying with the demands of the Far East.

Berlin Playing Fewer Features

During the first nine months of the 1936-37 season, 136 long features were shown in Berlin, as compared with 140 in the corresponding period in the previous season, according to a report to the United States Department of Commerce from Assistant Commercial Attache R. M. Stephenson at Berlin.

The nationality of the feature films, however, shows a considerable change, as in the current season the films of German origin numbered 90 as against 79 in 1935-36, an increase from 56.4 to 66.4 per cent.

If, to these German films, are added others actually of foreign origin but in the German language and financed by German distributing concerns, the figure for the first nine months of the season becomes 108 (79.4 per cent of the total), as against 97 (69.2 per cent) in the period a year ago.

The share of the United States in the Berlin market has further declined. In 1935-36, it amounted to 45.8 per cent of all foreign films as compared with 41.3 per cent in 1936-37. The share of other foreign films, especially of European origin, increased.

Top Bid for "Room Service"

Radio Pictures has taken the lead in competitive bidding for the stage play, "Room Service," which is now playing at the Cort Theatre in New York. Warner Brothers were said to have offered $250,000, but Radio topped this by $5,000.

GB and Columbia Meet Next Week

Schulberg Productions for the new season, Ralph Kohn, vice-president and treasurer of the organization, said in New York this week. Mr. Kohn said that releasing arrangements for the new season product have not been closed yet. Mr. Schulberg has two more pictures to make on his current Paramount commitments, one of which is now in work. A new distribution deal is not expected to be signed until September.

Homer Blackwell of Kansas City, Mo., has been granted a five-year Imperial Pictures franchise for the Kansas City territory. H. O. Mugridge of Minneapolis has been given a similar franchise by the company for the Minneapolis territory. Armand Cohen of San Francisco and George Montgomery of Los Angeles signed similar deals and both will distribute Imperial's current product in conjunction with the 1937-38 pictures.

Warner Exchange Men Meet

The second in a series of four meetings of Warner bookers and advertising and accessory salesmen was held last Saturday in Chicago at the Hotel Blackstone with A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges, in charge. Others who attended included: I. F. Dolid, assistant Vitaphone sales manager; Leo Blank, midwest district manager, and T. R. Gilliam, Chicago branch manager, as well as bookers and salesmen in the midwest territory. Two more meetings are scheduled for New York and New Orleans.

Max Littman has been appointed by Max Schach, British producer, to represent his companies in the United States, Canada, Central and South America. Mr. Schach's companies include Trafalgar Films Productions and Capitol Film Corporation. The pictures to be handled by Mr. Littman are as follows:

"Love from a Stranger," starring Ann Harding and Basil Rathbone.

"Dreaming Lips," with Elisabeth Bergner.

"Amateur Gentleman," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

"Accused," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

"When Thief Meets Thief," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Musical Shorts, Inc., with offices in New York, has been formed to produce short subjects for independent release. The first schedule calls for four two-reel productions in June.

The fifth week of the Monogram nine-week sales drive is reported to have shown considerable change in the standings of the various exchanges. With a $1,500,000 quota as its goal, many of the branches have moved up in the race, and $750,000 of the quota already has been realized.

Michael and Clark Sign New Contracts

William C. Michel, executive vice-president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and John D. Clark, vice-president in charge of distribution, have signed new five-year contracts. Mr. Michel, starting November 1st, will receive $1,000 a week, while Mr. Clark's salary will graduate upward, starting at $1,500 a week for the year beginning November 1st. During the second year he will receive $1,600, in the third, $1,700 and in the fourth and fifth, $1,750.

New Offices Taken

New offices at 1600 Broadway, New York City, have been taken by Hungaria Pictures, Inc., importers and distributors of Hungarian films.

Stadium Sale Is Upheld by Court As Plan Is Hit

Refusal to set aside the sale of Orpheum Circuit's assets to Stadium Theatres, and an expression of dissatisfaction with the settlement of Rockefeller Center's claim against the company, were this week's principal court actions in the RKO reorganization.

Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson last Saturday denied the petitions of Isidor J. Kresel and Samuel Zirn, on behalf of Orpheum Circuit stockholders to set aside the sale held last April of Orpheum's assets to Stadium. Mr. Kresel, representing the preferred stockholders of Orpheum, had asked the court to review Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn's order approving the sale to Stadium for $700,000 cash and subordination of $3,450,000 of claims against Orpheum, and the rejection ot the preferred stockholders' bid of $2,000,000 cash for the assets. Mr. Kresel had also requested that Orpheum, now in bankruptcy, be permitted to reorganize under Section 77-B with RKO.

Mr. Zirn, on behalf of other Orpheum stockholders, had asked the court to set aside the sale of the assets and remove Mr. Ehrhorn as referee. Judge Patterson denied the first petition on technical grounds that it was improperly brought and the second on the grounds that no cause for the removal of Mr. Ehrhorn had been shown.

Meanwhile, dissatisfaction with the settlement of the Rockefeller Center claim was expressed by Special Master George W. Alger at the close of last Thursday's hearing on the proposed plan of reorganization of RKO. Mr. Alger's remark was made in answer to a statement by H. C. Rickaby, counsel for the Atlas Corporation, proponents of the plan, that his client and creditors approve the settlement. The hearings were adjourned for one week, after which Mr. Alger is expected to study the date and arguments of counsel.

Mr. Rickaby said that he had obtained consent to the plan from 78 per cent of the secured claims and that $6,655,000 out of $9,497,800 unsecured claims, exclusive of the Rockefeller Center claim, have likewise consented.

Joseph Cohen, representing the independent protective committee for common stockholders, placed Elmer Pearson, general manager of the Pathe Exchange on the stand. Mr. Pearson testified that the last half of the year produces at least 25 per cent more profits than the first half. He said that producers having their own distribution setup abroad can secure 25 to 32 per cent of the gross from foreign distribution, and from seven to 15 per cent if they sell to distributors.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge William Bondy indicated at a hearing on Monday that he would approve a petition by Irving Trust Company, RKO reorganization trustee, for the settlement for $1,250,000 of four claims against RKO totaling $9,300,000.

The claims are for the alleged breach of leases by RKO Southern with Hoblitzelle Realty Corporation, the Hoblitzelle Corporation and the Hoblitzelle Investment Company, and of a lease on the Mayfair from the Broadway and 47th Street Corporation, which was guaranteed by RKO. O. C. Doering of Donovan, Leisure and Newton and Lumbard, counsel for the RKO trustee, told the court that the settlement of the claims would dispose of the largest group of landlords' claims with the exception of those of Rockefeller Center.

Pathe to Replace Topics with Parade

Following in line with its program of changes, Pathe News, for the 1937-38 season, will replace the Pathe Topics series with a new series entitled Pathe Parade. Claude Collins, who resigned as assignment editor of the newsreel after the recent appointment of Frederick Ullman as vice-president of Pathe News in New York, has been replaced by William Pitt, who was associated with Pathe News for three years.

Nick Tronolone, former vice-president and general sales manager of Precision Film Laboratory, has joined Pathe. He will be a liaison officer between the Bound Brook, N. J., plant and the trade. He will also be superintendent in A. Miller's absence.

National Contracts For Columbia Films

Contracts have been signed by National Theatres with Columbia and RKO Radio for their feature pictures during the coming season. Short subjects were not included in the contracts but will be negotiated for later.

Japanese on Visit

Nagamasa Kawakita, president of Towa Shoji G. K. of Tokyo, Japanese distributing company, will arrive on the S. S. Queen Mary June 21st accompanied by Miss Setsuko Hara, Japanese motion picture star. They will have a print of Miss Hara's latest picture, "The New Earth" or "Daughter of Samurai."

French Industry Awaiting Report On Film Affairs

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

The French motion picture industry is anxiously awaiting the publication in the near future in Paris of the reported 600-page report on the results of the investigation of the business conducted by the film commission of the French Parliament.

As a result of the investigation, the Chamber of Deputies is known to be framing a new law calling for the reorganization of the industry. It is understood that it will include a limitation on the number of French film theatres, and the institution of a "cinema state ticket" to be sold by the Government, the purchase of which will be obligatory with all exhibitors as a basis on which admission charges will be figured.

It is reported that there are a number of additional clauses in the proposed law, but it is believed none will constitute a threat to the importation of American films, which is governed by the Franco-American trade treaty of 1936.

The French industry is unwilling to accept Government control. The Confederation of the French Cinema, which now represents all branches of the trade, is preparing an internal organization, with the creation of a French organization similar to the M. P. P. D. A. in the United States. The Confederation has just organized an interprofessional control system and central film fund for all credit and banking operations for the purpose of assisting producers.

A Reader Is Served

¶ I enjoy the Herald, especially the Round Table department, the reviews of current releases, the Release Chart which covers every foot of film produced. I do not know what I would do if I did not have this service.

¶ I guard the copies like I do my money; I never let them get out of my sight. They are meticulously filed, and I have all the copies for about ten years back and, believe me, I use them that far back very often to answer a question or to refresh my own memory of the great parade in celluloid which has been so fast, intense and interesting that my life seems to have slipped away with the speed and changes that have taken place in this industry with fairyland transformations.

¶ I hope that I have kept up with the parade. When I have faltered for the moment, I can catch up by getting out the Herald and dovetailing the missing events which, when put together, become the ninth wonder of the modern procession of bewildering amazements.

NO HOPE FOR REPEAL OF U.S. ADMISSION TAX

Nor Is Any Increase Called Likely in the Exemption, Now 40 Cents, Says Vincent

Following a conference with officials of the United States Treasury Department in Washington, Walter Vincent, representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said in New York this week he was informed that the department could not recommend that the exemption on motion picture theatre tax admissions be raised from 40 to 50 cents even though this would undoubtedly increase the government's revenue from profit taxes, because it would then open the way for demands from other businesses for similar relief.

Meanwhile, other legislative matters pertinent to the industry attracted attention in Connecticut, where the local amusement tax which had been pending in the legislature at Hartford was killed, and in Missouri, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin.

As a result of the Treasury Department's attitude, it is considered unlikely that any action to increase the exemption level on motion picture admissions will be effective at this session of Congress, Mr. Vincent observed. Meanwhile, the House of Representatives has adopted by a vote of 230 to 93 the resolution extending the "nuisance" taxes for another two years, as was anticipated. On Tuesday the Senate finance committee recommended limitation of the extension to one year.

A memorandum was sent last Thursday to every member of the House by Peter J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, setting forth facts which, he states, present an incontrovertible argument in favor of amending the bill to increase the exemption on admissions from 40 to 50 cents. Mr. Wood's memorandum, in part, is as follows:

"More money for the United States Treasury and relief for the independent purveyor of amusements would result.

"There are 18,508 motion picture theatres in operation in the United States and only 110 of these theatres now charge an admission price of 50 cents or 55 cents at any time during the day or evening.

"The motion picture theatres represent an industry that has been unable to restore prices to pre-depression levels; this has resulted in non-profitable operation in many theatres in numerous sections throughout the United States. With a restoration of the 50-cent admission price in first-run theatres, there would result an increased price in all the subsequent run theatres. These latter theatres are operated by individuals and represent their sole means of livelihood. Under present price levels, they are having a difficult struggle to survive.

"A reference to the records of the Bureau of Internal Revenue will disclose the fact that approximately 40 per cent of the money collected from this admission tax, which for the year ending June 30, 1936, amounted to about $15,000,000, came out of the State of New York, and of this 40 per cent a very large percentage came from the high-bracket admissions in the City of New York. An increase of 10 cents in the exemption would not disturb this situation at all.

"A recent survey discloses that in 14 first-run theatres in the State of Ohio during a period of one month there were 931,077 paid admissions; 92.5 per cent of these admissions will be affected by a raise in the price level of from five cents to 10 cents per admission.

"Taking the City of Columbus, Ohio, as an example of the additional revenue that would accrue to the Government if the exemption were raised to 50 cents: The receipts at four theatres charging a 40-cent top were, during the year 1936, $1,270,600. At the 37 theatres charging less than a 40-cent top, the receipts were $1,287,800, a total of $2,560,400. An increase of 10 cents in the top price of 40 cents and an increase of five cents in all other admission rates would raise the total receipts $470,000. Of this sum, an estimated profit tax percentage of not less than 12 per cent would bring to the United States Treasury from the City of Columbus alone approximately $60,000 additional revenue."

Missouri's new two per cent state sales tax law, now in effect, provides for a three per cent rebate to the theatre men, merchants, etc., for collecting the tax provided that the payments reach the state auditor's office within a specified time. This rebate will apply to June collections paid by July 15th. Those who are delinquent in remitting the tax will not only lose the three per cent rebate but must also pay three per cent interest for the period of delinquency. It is anticipated the new tax will raise upwards of $26,000,000 annually. The tax is to end December 31, 1939.

Litigation on Chain Store Tax

Theatre interests in Pennsylvania are watching closely the developments in litigation begun last week by the American Stores Company to test the constitutionality of the new law imposing a tax on theatres and chain stores in the state. The measure was signed earlier in the week by Governor Earle and the equity suit was filed against John B. Kelly, State Secretary of Revenue, in the Dauphin County Court at Harrisburg. The law taxes theatres and chain stores on a graduated scale ranging from $1 for a single theatre up to $500 for each unit when 500 theatres or stores are owned by one organization within the state.

The company claims that it had 1,743 retail stores in more than 450 communities in the state on June 1st and claims that if the tax is sustained it will be compelled to reduce the number of its stores to less than 1,000. The action seeks to enjoin the secretary of revenue from attempting to enforce the act.

American Stores contends that the law violates the uniformity clause of the state constitution and attempts to put a graduated tax upon the same class of property when the only difference is the multiple number of theatres or stores. It is claimed that this is not a proper basis of classification and that by exemption of newsstands from the provisions of the act, the legislation is discriminatory.

A further point made by the company is that the tax is so great in the higher brackets that the act amounts to confiscation and destruction of business. The state has been given 30 days in which to file an answer.

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company has also joined the attack on the tax, filing an action which declared the legislation discriminatory because it is not unform for all stores.

In Madison, Wis., a bill calling for a chain theatre tax of from five cents per seat on from two to five houses to $5 per seat for circuits with more than 500 houses was introduced in the Assembly this week. The seat tax for circuits operating from six to 10 theatres would be 10 cents with the rate increasing at five cents a seat for each group of five theatres.

The Allied divorce bill was still pending in the legislature at Madison and no vote is expected for at least another week.

NEW ST. LOUIS LAW BLOW TO EXHIBITORS

The new St. Louis city ordinance signed by Mayor Bernard F. Dickman governing the operation of theatre projection booths and the handling of film will cost the more than 90 local theatres several hundreds of thousands of dollars, it is estimated, if Director of Public Safety Chadsey insists upon immediate compliance with the law's provisions. The law provides for one operator for each machine and that no one shall be allowed "within the projection room except the owner, manager, business manager of the local union, operators or apprentices as authorized by the local union and agreeable to the management".

In Vancouver, B. C., the danger of fire was advanced as an argument against replacing two experienced projectionists in a booth with one projectionist and an apprentice. Vancouver theatres are seeking a change in the law which governs projection rooms.

National Decency Legion Classifies 11 New Pictures

Of 11 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week eight were approved for general patronage and three were found unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "African Holiday," "Armored Car," "Drei Maederl um Schubert," "Gluekskinder," "Reckless Ranger," "Riding on Air," "Tre Anni Senza Donne," "You Can't Beat Love." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "A Day at the Races," "Last Train from Madrid," "Public Wedding."

Universal Opens "Road Back" on Broadway

The world premiere of Erich Maria Remarque's "The Road Back" takes place Thursday night at the Globe Theatre, on Broadway, before an audience of society leaders, civic officials, army and navy officers and film notables. Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Rogers and J. P. Normanly, Universal executives, have arrived in New York from Universal City to be present.

AND 100 NEW FACES!

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

David O. Selznick has finally found a "Tom Sawyer," after searching the country for nine months, for "a typical American schoolboy" to immortalize on the screen Mark Twain's most beloved character.

Mr. Selznick found the lad, Tommy Kelly, 12 years old, living next to St. Raymond's Cemetery, in New York's East Bronx, only a few feet from where Colonel Lindbergh said he paid that $50,000 ransom to Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Tommy Kelly was reared in poverty, and now Mr. Selznick starts him on a road that may make him as wealthy as young Freddie Bartholomew, who was given a similar beginning by Mr. Selznick as "David Copperfield."

Young Tommy Kelly's father, a WPA relief worker, is named Michael Kelly. His mother's name is Nora Kelly. His forebears are from County Mayo and County Galway, Ireland. So, concludes Mr. Selznick, "There's a streak of Irish in his make-up."

We still feel, however, that Mr. Selznick really had something in our recent recommendation of the Kokomo, Indiana, lad, who in a rural school's dramatic production of "Tom Sawyer," startled the authorities by swinging an honest-to-goodness dead cat instead of a "prop." The part had called for a dead cat, so the boy went out and killed one.

That rugged little individualist probably would have saved Mr. Selznick many a penny in his production of "Tom Sawyer."

"Up in Omaha," cracks Lowell Lawrence, movie critic of Kansas City's Journal-Post, "movie exhibitors are so concerned about censorship that one of them asked the welfare board the other day if it would be all right for him to show a western film titled 'Cherokee Strip.'"

This being the era—or error—of "stripping," the management of the 37 Commonwealth theatres in Kansas and Missouri, has adapted the idea to its normal business operations, in the manner of the Minsky Brothers and Mr. Zanuck's own Gypsy Rose Lee.

In this summer's sales drive for Commonwealth theatre managers, there will be penalties as well as bonuses for those who do not make their box office quotas every week. Managers will enter the contest theoretically dressed in ten pieces of clothing: shirt, trousers, undershirt, shorts, necktie, belt, two shoes and two socks. If the net profit from the house in any one week doesn't equal the quota set up against the manager, he will lose one article of clothing for every week in which business falls below par—much in the manner of "strip-poker." The manager will lose his clothing in this specified order: right shoe, left sock, left shoe, belt, shirt, right sock, undershirt, trousers, necktie and shorts.

Managers will attend the circuit's annual dinner and outing on Lake of the Ozarks, marking the close of the campaign, dressed as they finished in the contest.

We have heard of many cases where theatre owners have lost their shirts, but never a theatre manager.

The Commonwealth management refused to comment on the report that Gypsy Rose Lee would be borrowed from Darryl Zanuck to act as judge, on condition, of course, that Joe Breen gives permission.

Charlie Barron, United Artists exploiteer, returns to Broadway from Buffalo ready to sign an affidavit on the veracity of the experience of Grand National's booking department at the Buffalo exchange, to where an exhibitor from the countryside telephoned to explain that he had been left without a feature for the weekend. Disclosing his identity, the owner inquired as to what film might be on hand. "Nothing available," replied the booker.

And, so help Charlie Barron, the exhibitor, misunderstanding, left the telephone and went out and billed the front of his theatre and marquee with signs advertising:

The newsreels are paying entirely too much attention to Coronations and Dukes' weddings abroad, and not enough to the problems of the man in the street. Here, in New York, only the other day, the Clean Sidewalks Association started its campaign for "shiny" streets, and, with the aid of a crew of chewing-gum picker-uppers, removed 19,000 wads of the stuff on upper Broadway—and there wasn't a motion picture newsreel man in sight. Furthermore, the gum picker-uppers went back the next morning to survey their work, and found 8,000 fresh pieces firmly attached to the concrete.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's press agents are using considerable effort and energy to make us believe that every palpitating female heart in America palpitates only for their handsome Robert Taylor.

A Day at the Races

(MGM - Sam Wood)

Comedy

Comedy is the amusement and exploitation substance of this production. There are also slight suggestions of love interest, traces of burlesqued melodrama, music, both vocal and in solo and chorus and instrumental, an elaborately staged toe dance specialty featuring Vivien Fay (not listed in the cast and high class production detail), which should be found interesting as entertainment as well as valuable for attention creating exploitation.

Nevertheless, odd and eruptive fun, provided in that unique manner which is peculiar to the Marx Brothers, is the primary element in "A Day at the Races," and the picture's sponsors hope managers will recognize that fact and adapt it as the dominating factor whereby the picture will be accepted by the public as desirable screen merchandise.

On the whole, the picture is simply a vehicle which permits the Marx Brothers to exercise their fun-provoking talents. Individually and collectively their opportunities here to make folks laugh permit them to appear to better advantage than in any of their previous films. Introducing many novel tricks, stunts and gags, they keep the show going at a lively pace. The tempo is so fast and so many unexpected things happen that the audience which witnessed the preview in the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, actually was swept off its feet. Very rarely has this reviewer seen genuine enthusiasm so quickly kindled and so fully maintained. Many times the crowd's reaction to one particular funny bit of business wiped out the effect of the piece of nonsense immediately following. If the picture has a fault as comedy production it's the fault of including too many things which cause people to laugh.

Technically the show is nonsensical farce. The slim story calls upon "Dr. Hackenbush" and his confreres (the Marxes) to wheedle a wealthy chronic invalid, played by Margaret Dumont, into putting up the money which will save the mortgage plastered sanitarium of "Judy" (Maureen O'Sullivan), promote a romance between the young lady and "Gil" (Allan Jones), bamboozle the menaces, played by Douglas Dumbrille, Leonard Ceeley, Sig Rumann and Robert Middlemass, and cause "Gil's" steeplechase horse to win a race in a riotous climax. But the continual clowning of "Dr. Hackenbush" (Groucho), the sequence in which "Tony" (Chico) sells him a racing form; the consultation episode in which "Hackenbush" is revealed as a horse doctor, and the telephone episode that confounds the heavies, all of which build into the hilarious finale, plus Chico's piano-wrecking playing and Harpo's reconstruction of the wreckage into a harp, are outstanding among the sequences that had the preview folk in a continual uproar. About the only time there was a change from laughter was during Miss Fay's flashing toe dance number, introduced, as everything else, for no reason at all, and then, in appreciation of her ability, the crowd applauded lustily. Again, when Jones sings his love ballad to Miss O'Sullivan, the hilarity pauses.

Where nonsense, which pointedly has been made as silly and ridiculous as possible, is understood and appreciated, there should be a big field for "A Day at the Races." An all-audience show—Groucho has a few vivid lines but when all is considered they do not affect that classification—any kind of exhibitor, big or little, may accept it as one with which to aim at healthy box office receipts.—GUS MCCARTHY, in Hollywood.

The Go Getter

(Warner Brothers)

Comedy-Drama

Simple and solid are the entertainment values offered in this screen adaptation from the Peter B. Kyne "Cappy Ricks" stories. Ideally made for the family night spot, the production will appeal to everyone in the household from Grandma to little Junior. The comedy is natural and plentiful. The dramatic flow of the plot moves rapidly and interestingly. The performances are expert and enjoyable.

Cast personalities loom large for marquee billing. The leads are assumed by the attractive team of handsome George Brent and lovely Anita Louise. However, Charles Winninger, once the famous Captain Henry of "Show Boat" fame, and now navigating out of the Golden Gate, plays the role of Cappy Ricks with such contagious spirit that his portrayal necessarily wins the audience's attention and acting honors. The title and plot present opportunity for exploitation stunts of the contest variety. Moreover, the large number of "Cappy Ricks" readers indicates another campaign angle.

The introductory scenes start the picture off with a different and exciting beginning. In a dramatic sequence picturing the crash of the dirigible Macon, Brent suffers the loss of a leg. Overcoming this obstacle, he secures a job as a salesman for the Ricks Lumber and Navigation Company. Winning a position with the firm, Brent also wins a place in the affections of Miss Louise, Winninger's daughter. Put through his paces, the new salesman proves his right to the picture's title. The situations involving the test of the quest for the blue vase make for some hilarious and interesting film footage. As a reward for his excellent work, Brent is made Shanghai manager but when he declares his intentions to carry off the fair Miss Louise to that distant spot Winninger's possessive paternal nature tries to prevent the ceremony. After overcoming so many other obstacles, the outwitting of the irate parent is child's play for Brent. The couple sail; Mr. Winninger almost has that stroke of apoplexy which has been threatening him during the picture's run and a lumber strike breaks out. Under such circumstances Winninger melts into a state of rationality and forgiveness and Brent returns in a way that is a little unusual at least to settle the labor situation.

Slave Slip

Melodrama

The title clearly denotes that this is a melodrama. It also indicates that the story development will be marked by considerable brutality. Further it suggests that the picture will contain some startling production effects. One also suspects that in such kind of a picture there will be some impressive acting. Sometimes films which major in savagery attain commercial success. "Mutiny on the Bounty" may be remembered as having done so. It is a matter of record that occasionally theatre goers, adult men and women especially, seem to like to have their sensibilities crushed, twisted and shattered.

"Slave Ship" is that kind of picture. The question it asks exhibitors is: "Is the public again ready to receive entertainment of this character?" If it is, all well and good; the desire to see it will be in the air and it will not be necessary to indulge in much driving and prodding to induce persons to come to theatres where it is playing. If people are not in the mood, the exhibitor has a real job on his hands. Fortunately the tools necessary to draw interest are available.

"Slave Ship" is a combination of appealing romance, shocking melodrama, that kind of rough and tough comedy that is associated with rough and tough men, and unusual production effects.

The Albatross was destined to be a "blood ship." It killed a man while being launched. A sea jinx, it finally becomes a "blackbirder," engaged in transporting slaves from Africa to America. Its captain, "Jim Lovett" (Warner Baxter) falls in love with and marries "Nancy Marlowe" (Elizabeth Allan). The beauty of the romance is marked by savage duplicity, inasmuch as "Lovett" conceals from "Nancy" the fact that he is a slaver. He wants to quit the inhuman traffic, but his crew, headed by mate "Thompson" (Wallace Beery) mutinies and won't let him. Husband and wife made prisoner, the Albatross sails for Africa. With strong melodrama, occasionally contrasted by ribald comedy, trader "Danelo" is cheated and killed. Many blacks also die as the schooner, daring a British blockade, sets sail for America. Outwitting "Thompson" and his unsavory cohorts and winning cabin boy "Swifty" to his side, "Lovett" regains control of the boat, and heads for St. Helena. Building to an emotion trying climax, death again strikes often as the mutineers discover they are in a British port and that hanging from a yard arm is to be their fate. Blacks, fastened to anchor chains, are tossed overboard; before the guns of "Lovett" and "Swifty" the mutineers die like flies until "Lovett" accounts for "Thompson." "Nancy's" plea that the "last slaver" willingly destroyed the slave traffic wins freedom for her husband. With "Swifty" they begin a more peaceful life on a plantation in Jamaica.

A grim story presented in straight-from-the-shoulder manner, which has for its purpose the intent to convince that it authentically portrays the savagery of the slave traffic and the character of the men who made it their business, the film presents Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery, George Sanders and Joseph Schildkraut in letter perfect performances. Audiences may dislike the characters, but it does not seem possible that they will be unappreciative of their efforts. To Mickey Rooney, however, go honors for "stealing the show."

Seconding the importance of name values in selling a show, exploitation that informs patrons that it concerns desperate and dangerous men engaged in a desperate and dangerous calling looks to be the angle most beneficial in stimulating popular interest.

Previewed in Grauman's Chinese Theatre, Hollywood. A great many in the audience seemed to enjoy having their sensibilities pounded. For such a strong picture, there were comparatively few walkouts.—G. M.

They Won't Forget

(Warner-LeRoy)

Melodrama

Anticipating "They Won't Forget" in Motion Picture Herald, May 8, when it bore the title "The Deep South," it was noted that Warner Brothers had been remarkably successful in adapting sensationalism to screen entertainment.

Sensationalism is the essence of "They Won't Forget." In story content and production technique it is that melodramatically bold kind of sensationalism that provokes controversy. As a screen adventure, considered only from the viewpoint of personalities presented, it is also sensational inasmuch as with the sole exception of Claude Rains and Otto Kruger, the principals, Gloria Dickson, Edward Norris, Allyn Joslyn, Lana Turner and Clinton Rosemond, are comparative strangers to theatregoers. Nevertheless, the manner in which they accepted and carried through difficult assignments not only justifies Mr. LeRoy's confidence in them, but also assures exhibitors that they will have new names to talk about.

Because of the nature of its theme and the honest-from-the-shoulder manner in which it is treated and further because of the vividly suggested locale, it is inevitable that the picture will incite furious arguments and debates. Viewed as a separate piece of screen merchandise, it might, on the surface, appear that Mr. LeRoy was quite courageous when he embarked upon the production of "They Won't Forget." But considered in relation to earlier pictures which became the focal points of widespread controversy, it is not to be suspected that Mr. LeRoy was entirely unaware of the great box office values which accrue to pictures about which debates and discussions rage. He has provided plenty of kindling for argumentative bonfires. He undoubtedly will be very disappointed if official and unofficial individuals and organizations do not take it upon themselves to light and fan the flames of controversy.

"They Won't Forget" is a grim and realistic picture. The fact circumstances on which it might have been premised have actually happened many times. The fictional romanticizing and dramatizing to which the seed of the idea has been subjected are merely literary and entertainment license. Both have been intelligently blended.

Somewhere in the South a school girl is murdered. Circumstancial evidence implicates her teacher. Prior to his trial a social system goes mad as it calls for vengeance. Honesty, justice and fair play are submerged in oceans of hatred and bigotry. Newspapers screech fanatically; a ruthless unscrupulous district attorney plans the climb over the body of the accused to further political preferment. The populace gives way to mob hysteria. Despite the efforts of a noted defense attorney and the pleas of a heartbroken wife, the trial is a savage mockery of justice. Reason and logic are throttled and, as the teacher is convicted, a panic-stricken judge decrees life imprisonment rather than the death sentence. But the mob will not be denied. By graphic illusion the lynch law claims another martyr.

A tempestuous thing as entertainment, the film is also a powerful social document. While it is a matter of record that few people attend moving picture shows simply for the educational value that may be derived from them, it may be expected that "They Won't Forget" will exert a powerful mental and moral influence on those who care to see it. Anyone who looks at the show cannot help but stop and think. However, the production's primary purpose is dramatic entertainment. To be that, it could be nothing but realistic and forceful as it seeks to probe the deepest human emotions.

Selling it, whether or not controversy is resorted to as an adjunct to the film's commercial success, merely requires an incisive exposition of the dramatic merits that are provided. Any showman will find unlimited ideas and suggestions, other than names and theme, upon which he may take a firm grip and develop in a manner that should stimulate great popular adult attention. Of course, the film is of the character that no thinking manager would want to offer to his juvenile patrons. But those to whom it is available should leave no stone unturned to assure maximum adult attendance.

Previewed June 8 in Warners' Hollywood Theatre. The theme, spirit and mood of the piece held the audience.—G. M.

Knight Without Armour

(London Films - United Artists)

Romantic Melodrama

With star appeal guaranteed by the names of Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat, this ambitious Alexander Korda production at Denham, directed by Jacques Feyder from a James Hilton novel, looks a good box-office attraction in the States. It has strong story values, suspense, and over and above all action, against a background of Russia in revolution which provides grimly realistic incident and a number of well drawn and well played types.

The human appeal that the leads are presented as fugitives from the Bolsheviks, hiding in the forest, escaping death by convincing hairbreadths, falling in love while death stalks them, is heightened by production which has provided a real picture of Russia in the days when towns were captured one day by the Reds, the next by the Whites, and each victor celebrated the triumph by a machine-gun holocaust. That rat-tat-tat accompaniment, not always off-scene, is a vivid feature of "Knight Without Armour." Also praiseworthy is the gallery of incidental characters, authentic Russian to our eyes at least, who provides incidental humour, and some tragedy, to the play.

Fothergill, an Englishman working in St. Petersburg as a translator, before the War, joins the British secret service in order to escape deportation for an indiscreet newspaper article. Under his Russian name he is sentenced to exile to remote Siberia for harboring a revolutionary who has bombed the carriage of Vladinoff, Czarist minister.

Vladinoff's daughter, Alexandra, makes the marriage of the season when she becomes the wife of Count Adraxine, but war breaks out and widows her.

In Siberia, Fothergill and Azelstein, a fellow prisoner, are released by the Revolution. Axelstein, famous for his achievements as a conspirator, becomes a Commissar by popular choice and protects Fothergill by making him his assistant. The two save the Countess from death at the hands of a mob which invades her chateau and Fothergill is given orders to escort her, a prisoner, to Petrograd. When he hears that the Whites have recaptured the chateau and town, he sends her back and himself takes to the forest.

The Reds again capture the town. Alexandra is put in prison. Fothergill, who has succeeded in masquerading as a Red soldier, obtains by a trick, from a drunken Commissar, authority over the prison and releases her, disguised in uniform. They again take to the forest, escape capture from a searching cordon, and board a refugee train to Kazan. There, suspect, they are sent away under arrest, in the charge of a young Commissar who has fallen in love at sight with Alexandra. He shoots himself in order that they may escape to a barge on the Volga. Alexandra, ill, is taken to a neutral hospital, but Fothergill is condemned to be shot. He escapes and boards the hospital train which is carrying Alexandra to safety.

Paying scant regard to credibility, the story is entertaining from the moment the Countess and the camouflaged Russian first meet. Their escapes are breathless affairs and their love passages, with death at their elbows, are touchingly done. Even so, the outstanding interest of the picture, for many, will be its picture of a continent in anarchy. There is, amid much grim mob stuff, a comic-tragic cameo from Hay Petrie, official in charge of a deserted railway depot, who, driven mad, announces and dispatches non-existent trains. There is a vivid picture of a crowd of refugees stopping a train by laying down in hundreds on the track. There is a brilliant comedy study by Miles Malleson of a drunken Commissar, spouting Marxian economics.

There appears to be plenty to sell here. For the Marlene Dietrich fans, who are given two bathing exhibitions by the star, one of them in a forest pool, it is ready-made. Donat, clear-spoken and restrained, is as good as ever. The verisimilitude of the scenes of White and Red struggles is a big talking point, and a fact. There is exploitation value, also, in the circumstance that pre-War and Revolutionary Russia are both shown, with a glimpse of the Czar in the first and a picture of the underworld organization which paved the way for the collapse of 1916.

The picture was warmly received at a night trade show in London at the Phoenix Theatre. —BRUCE ALLAN, London.

Mountain Music

(Paramount-Glazer)

Comedy-Romance

Looking at this picture is like taking a vacation up in the Ozark Mountain country and associating with hillbilly folk such as at the moment making Barney Google's life exciting. "Mountain Music" probably never will win any prizes for anything, nor will it ever threaten any of the past or present great pictures as an extravagant money getter, but that it will entertain and amuse cannot be denied.

In essence "Mountain Music" is farce comedy romance with music. In lots of ways it violates the Hoyle rudiments of production technique, but all that is provided to make folk laugh is mixed acceptably, if it doesn't make much sense. The picture succeeds in doing what it was intended to do, be amusement that is quite unusual, as well as wholesome and, at times, exciting.

The yarn moves around two persons, Bob Burns and Martha Raye, and their name value undoubtedly is relied upon to make the film attractive. To end a feud, "Bob Burnside" (Burns) is supposed to marry "Lobelia" (Terry Walker), who loves his brother "Ardinger" (John Howard). He gets scared on the wedding day and, after creating a scene, leaves the mountains just ahead of a charge of buckshot. His disappearance leads people to believe that he has been killed, and "Ardinger" is arrested on a murder charge. Adventuring into a foreign land on the other side of the mountains, an accident deprives "Burnside" of his memory. Thinking he is some one else, he falls in love with "Mary Beamish," ambitious entertainer (Martha Raye), who he thinks is the most beautiful girl in the world. A lot of light dramatic and romantic complications ensue, tragic to the leads but amusing to audiences, before "Burnside" is returned to his native heath to save his brother's life and get a fire hose drenching from "Mary" that permanently restores his memory.

To the antics which the principals and support provide must be added the music content, which features Miss Raye in several solo numbers, Rufe Davis in a specialty and several hillbilly choral compositions.

Labeling the picture an all-laugh show and depending upon Burns and Miss Raye, who are rapidly advancing in popularity, looks like the most effective way to bring it to public attention. Managers who go in for stunt exploitation should find plenty of ideas in the production on which to premise bizarre campaigns.

Drums of Destiny

(Crescent - E. B. Derr)

Both entertainment potentialities and showmanship availability have been included in this action picture. As a further number in the little known history inspired dramas in which E. B. Derr has featured Tom Keene, the picture is sufficiently strong in character and interest to earn it a place on the programs of houses which cater to a clientele which likes to see movement in their screen entertainment.

Keene is commander of a platoon of Mississippi militia patroling the Spanish Florida border. An Indian raid on a farmhouse convinces the officer that some one is illegally supplying the redmen with guns. Capture of David Sharpe, a young lieutenant and brother of Keene, who is conveying an ammunition train to the outpost sends the colonial troops into action. As a meager thread of romance centering about Edna Lawrence is introduced, Keene is quickly in conflict with her father, Spanish Governor Carlos de Valdez, and renegade American, Robert Fiske, who dominates the official.

Determined to save Sharpe's life, who has been sentenced to death, and also break up the gun-smuggling gang, Keene invades Spanish territory in violation of orders. Saving the boy in the nick of time and as his troops wipe out the renegade's followers, Keene personally accounts for Fiske in an exciting melle. With de Valdez ridded of the menace of Fiske, peace comes to the frontier country and the hero finds romance with the girl.

Smartly, producer Derr and director Ray Taylor have permitted action to predominate over dialogue. The movement that is part of each situation logically leads into the movement of those that follow. Thus an unique suspense is achieved that has an importance in building the story to its climax. Where the Keene pictures have proved attractive previously, this one can be depended upon fully to meet all requirements. Where the pictures are a novelty, it can be anticipated that "Drums of Destiny" should satisfy.

Mickey's Amateurs

(United Artists)

Splendid Spoofing

Making sport of the current amateur hour craze, the Disney penmen have devised some of the craziest and comic cartoon moments yet to hit the screen. With Mickey Mouse as Master of Ceremonies, the talent parade their particular specialties. Donald Duck recites "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," which is a very coy act for Donald and a good laugh for his audience. The female aspirants are represented by Clara Cluck and Carabelle Cow who offer a song and piano treat. The highlight of the programme and the one who would receive this reviewer's vote is "Bandmaster Goofy and his Fifty-Piece Band." Goofy and his "Rube Goldberg" invention play "The Good Old Summertime" and, then going modern, the pace proves too much for the maestro and his machine. The subject must be seen to be appreciated and enjoyed. The fun it offers defies description. Running time, one reel.

Eliseo Grenet and His Orchestra

(Vitaphone)

Band Act

Different from the usual orchestral exhibitions presented in this series is this Melody Master subject wherein the Maestro is not a suave Broadway leader directing the latest Tin Pan Alley serenade but a Cuban group of musicians rendering some tuneful Cuban native songs. Under the baton of Eliseo Grenet, the Latin American tunes are given attractive and expert treatment. There is a bit of Cuban singing and dancing, particularly a lively sextet of Rhumba dancers. The entire effect is certain to please and entertain the musically minded. Running time, 10 minutes.

HOLLYWOOD BUYS 44 MORE BOOKS AND PLAYS FOR 1937-38 SCHEDULES

Month's Total Purchases Indicate Companies' Libraries Now Are Complete for 1937-'38 Season's Production Plans

Hollywood producers, in the month of April, added further to the number of story properties purchased from the fields of fiction and stage and from contract writers for the 1937-38 season. Activity was not very great, however, with only 44 acquisitions being made by 16 producing organization to set a new monthly low for the past year.

Radio Pictures led the field in April, buying six original stories and two plays.

Warners was next with two originals, two books and two plays.

Twentieth Century-Fox bought a like total, five original stories and one book.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer added one original story, one book and two plays to its library.

Universal acquired two originals and two novels.

Republic followed with two books and one original.

Grand National acquired two original stories.

Paramount bought a similar number of originals.

Major Productions and B. P. Schulberg each purchased one untitled original story, while Imperial bought a novel.

Harold Lloyd, for release through Paramount, got an original story for his next picture.

Richard Dix bought a play which he will produce as a picture.

Marion Gering completed the list with a novel.

Indicates Complete Libraries

The small number of purchases during April is indicative of the complete libraries now in the possession of the various producing organizations, a total of 843 properties having been acquired by the studios in the past 11 months alone.

Prominent among the purchases of April were those made by Universal of two Crime Club mystery novels, "Headed for a Hearse" and "Metropolitan Police." The company also announced the taking of options on three other Club publications, "Black Doll," "Murder in the Surgery" and "The Lady in the Morgue." The Crime Club is now in its 12th year and publishes 48 novels a year. Its circulation figures are not made public but are said to be among the most astounding in the publishing business, the number of books being read through circulating libraries alone running into hundreds of thousands, thus affording Universal a tremendous pre-arranged audience for its picture version of the books.

FOUR STATE UNITS IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Owners Convene from Virginia, Mississippi, Kansas - Missouri, and the Southeastern Group

Ed Kuykendall, president of the National Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, expressed disappointment over the results in negotiation of the MPTOA's 10-point program when he spoke before about 150 members and guests of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia at a meeting in the Cavalier Hotel, Virginia Beach, Monday.

He declared he could see no reason for optimism and then appealed to exhibitors for cooperation, asserting they were their "own worst enemies." Mr. Kuykendall voiced objections to radio broadcasting by stars, to chain tax bills and to outside regulation of the industry. He spoke in favor of theatre divorce bills which have been introduced in several legislatures.

After a program of social events on Sunday, the business session was opened Monday with a talk by Roy Smith, mayor of Virginia Beach.

Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States, spoke in favor of eliminating producers from operating theatres and said he was pleased with the recent Supreme Court ruling upholding the Louisiana chain tax bill. Mr. Meyers then launched into an attack upon what he termed unfair sales policies of distributors and concluded by proposing a Congressional investigation of the industry and by advocating enactment of the Neely block booking bill.

Ways of opposing unfair legislation through organization and friendship were discussed by James B. Fitzgerald of the Washington Film Board of Trade.

Ben Fitts, who operates 17 theatres, read a series of letters from Warner Brothers, to show that the company had refused to give him press books because he does not rent paper from the company.

Other speakers included Jay Emanuel, publisher of the Exhibitor regional publications, Sidney Samuelson, and Col. R. T. Barton, Jr., organization counsel.

William S. Wilder, who succeeded Morton Thalhimer as president, was ill and Charles A. Somma, vice-president, was chairman. Other officers are Samuel Berdheim, Jr., treasurer, and Harold Wood, secretary.

It was decided to hold the mid-winter convention at Richmond.

Tri-State Convention

The ten per cent amusement tax which is levied in Mississippi will head the topics of discussion when the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee holds its annual convention July 18th and 19th at Hotel Buena Vista, Biloxi, Miss. Exchange managers and salesmen from Memphis and New Orleans will attend and the session will be presided over by R. X. Williams, president.

Kansas-Missouri

The Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners will convene in Topeka, Kan., June 22nd and 23rd for its annual convention. Labor and taxes will be discussed in addition to the problem of star broadcasts. John Stapel, president, will have charge of the meetings. Mr. Kuykendall has been invited to speak.

Southeastern Association

Mr. Kuykendall will also address the Southeastern Theatre Owner Association's annual convention at Thomas Jefferson Hotel, Birmingham, Ala., June 27th to 29th.

After registration of guests and members on Sunday, June 27th, a sightseeing trip will be taken through the city. A buffet supper will be held at 8 P.M. on the Thomas Jefferson Terrace with N. C. Moore, association president, presiding. An address of welcome will be delivered by Jimmie Jones, president of the Birmingham city commission, who will be introduced by W. Cooper Green, postmaster at Birmingham.

W. R. Griffin, convention chairman of Collman, Ala., will make general announcements. At 10 A.M. on Monday the general business session will open and after reports are read by the president, secretary and treasurer, Mr. Kuykendall will speak on: "As Theatre Owners Where Are We Headed?"

Thomas E. Orr of Albertville, Ala., will then address the members on the question: "Shall We Sponsor Any Form of Federal Regulation for the Motion Picture Industry?" At 1:30 P.M. there will be a trip through the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company properties and at 2:30 o'clock the qualifying round for the golf tournament will be held at Hillcrest Country Club.

Monday night the Birmingham theatre owners and managers will be hosts at an entertainment at Club Rex.

The general business session will be resumed at 10:30 A.M., Tuesday, to discuss controversial subjects. Among the topics and the discussion leaders will be: "Value and Effect of Exhibitors' Organized Protest Against Unfair Practices," Nat Williams, Thomasville, Ga., and L. J. Duncan, West Point, Ga.; "Cooperation of all Members in an Effort to Break Down Unfair Sales Policies," R. E. Martin, Columbus, Ga., and Louis Bach, Atlanta, Ga.; "Value of Training Competent Young Men to Handle Theatre Business and How the Same Can Be Accomplished," R. M. Kennedy, Birmingham, Ala.

Cooperation Is Topic

Sam Borisky, Chattanooga, Tenn., will then lead a discussion on "Value of Cooperation Between Competitive Exhibitors."

Reports of the standing committees and a nominating committee and then election of officers will conclude the business.

During the hours of the golf tournament at Hillcrest Country Club there will be a ladies party in the clubhouse.

John Temple Graves, II, will speak at the annual banquet Tuesday night on the subject: "Southern Footlights." The convention will come to an end with the awarding of golf trophies.

Goetz Visiting Europe

William Goetz, vice-president and executive assistant to Darryl F. Zanuck at Twentieth Century-Fox, sailed for Europe from New York this week to supervise preparations for the production of "He Was Her Man," starring Gracie Fields, in London. Afterward, he will visit the principal production centers of Europe.

Radio Leads in Story Purchases

SUBMARINE 262, original story by Commander Frank Wead, U. S. N., bought by Warners to star George Brent, Pat O'Brien and Wayne Morris.

SWING YOUR LADY, Broadway play by Kenyon Nicholson and Charles Robinson, acquired by Warners for Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell and Humphrey Bogart.

THIS WAY PLEASE, original story with a theatre background featuring a romance between an usherette and a master-of-ceremonies, bought by Paramount for production as a musical.

THIS WOMAN IS DANGEROUS, original story by Don Byrne, bought by Warners. Bette Davis and George Brent will be featured.

UNTITLED ORIGINAL, by Edward Anderson, playwright, acquired by B. P. Schulberg.

UNTITLED ORIGINAL, by Konrad Bercovici, acquired by Major Productions. The story will deal with the life of Sir Richard Burton of Arabia.

UNTITLED ORIGINAL, by Albert R. Perkins, acquired by Republic. The picture will have a newsreel background.

WILD AND WOOLY, original story acquired by Twentieth Century-Fox for Jane Withers.

WITNESS TO A MURDER, magazine story, bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The author was anonymous.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS, THE, novel by Peter B. Kyne, bought by Warners to star Bette Davis and George Brent. The picture will be done in Technicolor.

Madison Avenue Theatre

The Trans Lux Yorkville Corporation in New York leased property on Madison Avenue and 85th Street to erect a newsreel theatre. The house will contain approximately 600 seats and will be ready for a fall opening.

Warners Withdraw Film

Warners have withdrawn the picture, "The King and the Chorus Girl," from distribution in the United Kingdom despite approval of it by the British censor board, because of protests that its theme was too similar to the romance of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson.

Variety Club Holds Tourney

The annual golf tournament of the Twin Cities Variety Club is being held Friday at the Oak Ridge Club, Minneapolis. Don Woods, Grand National Exchange manager, is chairman of arrangements, which include a dinner at which prizes are to be presented.

Jennings Back in Boston

John Jennings, who resigned from the Grand National office in Boston a few weeks ago when the exchange was managed by Harry Segal, returned this week to work with John Scully, present manager. He will handle the Maine territory.

To Handle Publicity

Artists Management, Inc., has appointed Irving S. Strouse to handle publicity for it and the Paul Whiteman interests. Mr. Strouse recently resigned from the publicity department of the J. P. Muller Advertising Company.

Grossed $1,205,651 in Few Months of Distribution; Current Assets Now Total $1,704,438, Cash $824,308

The first full-year's report of Grand National's progress and corporate and financial procedure was made known this week, disclosing a $636,201 loss for the 12 months ended April 3rd, 1937, which, said the company, resulted principally because of overhead in connection with the setting up of the distribution system constructed out of the old First Division Pictures.

A gross revenue from film rentals of $1,205,651 was reported.

Grand National Pictures lost $638,201 in the first year of its operations, "but now that the groundwork has been laid, the corporation is in a position to look forward to a year of increased business," according to Edward L. Alperson, president, in the first annual report to stockholders.

At the board of directors' meeting, at the home office in New York where publication of the financial report was authorized, it was announced that A. Pam Blumenthal becomes associated with Grand National as a vice president, effective August 1st. Mr. Blumenthal, who has had many years in motion pictures, will become a member of the directorate on June 30th, replacing Charles L. Stillman, whose resignation as a director is to take effect as of that date.

Mr. Alperson told the stockholders at the meeting that the loss for the first year, ending on April 3rd, 1937, resulted after all charges, including organization and other corporate expenses of $74,131. Gross film rentals amounted to $1,205,651 and the gross profit thereon was $437,276, allocated as follows:

	Gross Rentals	Gross Profit
On pictures distributed for other distributors	$495,932.38	$218,737.85
On pictures distributed for outside producers	258,033.43	95,442.49
On owned productions	451,685.21	123,096.27
	$1,205,651.02	$437,276.61

Independently of the company's announcement on its financial operations, word came from Hollywood that Grand National had rescinded its contract which called for the use of the Keller-Dorian color process on two 1937-38 features. Phil Krasne, of the Hollywood executive staff, gave as the reason the fact that Grand National "does not wish to act as the subject of experimentation to establish the commercial feasibility of a color process."

Keller-Dorian assets and equipment were reputedly attached recently by Windsor Pictures in Hollywood because of alleged back payment due for two color workers.

Earnings Are Explained

In connection with Grand National's foregoing explanation of the allocation of gross income and producers' shares in rentals, it was explained by Mr. Alperson that the corporation did not distribute any pictures for outside producers until shortly after EASTMAN'S coöperation with the industry has helped to solve many a problem of motion picture technique. Now it supplies a complete answer to the important duplicating problem. October 1, 1936, and that the corporation's first owned picture was not released for distribution until the early part of December, 1936. With the exception of approximately $42,560, all the above rentals on pictures distributed for outside producers and the entire amount of rentals on owned productions, $451,685, were earned after the first of December, 1936, a period of approximately 17 weeks, during which time all rentals received on owned productions, with the exception of "Great Guy," have been applied to recoupment of costs.

"Since the corporation during its first fiscal year has been establishing itself on a national basis as a motion picture distributor, a loss for the period was to be expected, and while the loss also reflects the above-mentioned conservative policy adopted by the corporation in writing off the cost of pictures already released, it primarily represents the cost of building up an extensive national distributing organization, in advance of the development of a full supply of product," Mr. Alperson said.

Although the corporation had made deliveries of pictures under its foreign distribution agreements, prior to April 3, 1937, the exhibition of such pictures in foreign countries had not commenced at that date. No part of the advance payments received under such agreements prior to that date, aggregating $357,938, has been taken up into income on the statement of profit and loss, and no part of such payments will be taken up into income until after the exhibition of such pictures in the respective foreign countries has commenced.

The balance sheet shows current and working assets of $1,704,438, of which $824,308 was in cash, as against current liabilities of $462,581.

Subsidiary in Canada

The corporation commenced business on April 17, 1936, on which date it took over as liquidating agent the distribution, on a commission basis, of all pictures which First Division Exchanges, Inc. (a subsidiary of Pathe Film Corporation), was then committed to distribute. Shortly thereafter, under a similar arrangement, it took over the distribution of all pictures which Far West Exchanges, Inc., a territorial distributor operating on the Pacific coast, was then committed to distribute. In connection with these arrangements the corporation took over branch offices in 14 of the principal cities of the United States, which form the nucleus of its present national distributing organization, consisting of 29 branch offices.

Arrangements have been made for distribution of the corporation's product in Canada through a Canadian corporation known as Grand National Films, Ltd., in which the corporation has a minority interest (the majority being owned by Canadian interests), and in the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State through Associated British Film Distributors, Ltd. Arrangements for distribution in certain European, South American and other countries are in progress.

The first Grand National picture was released October 4, 1936. From that date until April 3, 1937, the end of the fiscal year, 17 pictures were released.

WRONG AIR GRILLES AS COMMON DEFECT

One of the principal sources of disappointment with the results obtained from a theatre air-conditioning system is the kind of grilles installed, declares J. T. Knight, Jr., eminent theatre engineer, in an article to appear in the June 26th issue of Better Theatres. Although the grilles determine the efficiency of the distribution system, the wrong type is frequently selected, he says in the article, which points out the kinds that should be used to meet the various sets of conditions.

Other features of the June 26th Better Theatres, which will appear with next week's issue of Motion Picture Herald, will be "Practical Considerations in Theatre Reseating" and a discussion of construction factors in the attainment of good acoustical conditions, this being the second article in C. C. Potwin's series, "Theatre Acoustics Today". These features are in addition to descriptions of several new theatres, equipment news and regular departments.

The corporation has leased from Educational Studios, Inc., for a period of five years from April 1, 1937, with the option to renew for an additional five year period, the studio property and equipment located at 7250 Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood. While the lease obtained is terminable by the lessor after the end of two years, such termination gives rise to an option in favor of the corporation to purchase the property. The studio lease is now held by the corporation's wholly-owned subsidiary, Grand National Studios, Inc. The studio has adequate facilities for the production of the corporation's program for the ensuing year, and in addition, it is contemplated that from time to time revenue will be derived from the rental of studio facilities to outside producers, according to Mr. Alperson.

The corporation has outstanding 655,000 shares of common stock. Some 640,000 of these shares were sold for an aggregate of $1,600,000, or an average price of $2.50 per share, and the corporation received payment of this amount in cash and without being required to pay any underwriting fees or commissions in connection with the issue of such stock, although, of course, it paid legal and other incidental expenses. The remaining 15,000 outstanding shares were issued to Mr. Alperson under his employment contract.

At April 3, 1937, the corporation employed approximately 350 persons and had approximately 5,500 stockholders.

Price, Waterhouse and Company, public accountants which certified Grand National's books, in a statement appended to the Alperson report to stockholders, declared that, "Owing to the short period of time the company has been releasing its own pictures, there is not sufficient experience available upon which amortization tables could be based for writing off the costs of pictures over their average earning life proportionately as the income is received week by week, on an average. The company, however, has adopted the policy of applying all income received from the distribution of its own pictures, other than the picture 'Great Guy,' to the recoupment of costs and providing reserves for any costs which appear doubtful of recoupment after the pictures have been released several months, based upon the income received, unplayed contracts on hand and estimates made by the management for expected subsequent rentals. Under this plan no profit is taken into account on owned pictures until the respective cost of each such picture has been fully recovered. In the case of the picture 'Great Guy' inasmuch as the gross income derived from the distribution of this picture to April 3, 1937 exceeded the cost thereof, the company has taken 35% of the gross rentals into income account and has applied 65% of the gross rentals to the recoupment of costs. Based upon unplayed contracts on hand, it appears that the costs of the picture 'Great Guy' carried forward at April 3, 1937 will be recouped from rentals expected after that date," it was said by Price, Waterhouse.

Part of Salaries in Stock

"As noted on the statement of profit and loss and deficit, part of the fixed compensation of certain officers is payable in capital stock at the rate of $2.50 per share. The amount of such compensation amounted to $46,875 for the fiscal year under review, of which $37,500 was paid by the issuance of 15,000 shares of capital stock of a par value of $1.00 each and $9,375 appears as an accrued liability on the attached consolidated balance sheet. The excess of the compensation paid by the issuance of 15,000 shares at $2.50 per share over the par value of $1.00 per share, is included in paid in surplus.

"In the case of advances to outside producers, provision has been made by the company for those advances which appeared doubtful of realization after the respective pictures had been released several months, based upon the producers' shares of income received, unplayed contracts on hand and estimates made by the management for expected subsequent rentals."

Directors of Grand National now include Edward L. Alperson, Timothy F. Murphy, Edward J. Peskay, Kirk Todd, and Mr. Blumenthal when he succeeds Charles Stillman on June 30th.

Officers of the company are: Edward Alperson, president; Edward J. Peskay, vice president; Timothy Murphy, secretary and treasurer; William J. Neary, assistant secretary-treasurer; Philip N. Krasne, assistant secretary-treasurer, and Ann Rosenthal, assistant secretary.

An accumulation of $3.50 on seven per cent preferred stock, payable June 30th to holders of record on June 19th, has been voted by Marcus Loew's Ltd., of Canada.

DOYLE RETIREMENT PART OF TANGLE IN AUSTRALIA OVER CIRCUIT FIGHT

Munro, in New York on Hoyt's and Greater Union Split, Sees Doyle's Resignation as Result of Strife in Union

Retirement of Stuart F. Doyle from participation in the affairs of Greater Union Theatres, major Australian circuit of which he is head, resulted solely from friction within that company and had no connection with present uncertainty over the continuation of the association of Greater Union with the Hoyt's circuit in General Theatres which, through its two members, dominates the exhibition field on the Continent, according to Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyt's.

Mr. Doyle, however, is known to be in active opposition to a continuation of the General Theatres merger, which was brought about by financial interests five years ago, and the extension of which Mr. Munro has been discussing with Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox president, in New York for the last several weeks.

When negotiations began last month between Mr. Munro and officials of Twentieth Century-Fox, which owns a controlling interest in Hoyt's, it was reported that a proposal had been made to continue the General Theatres Association under a 20 year contract. Since that time the Australian circuit manager and home office officials have refused to comment on the discussions.

"My association with Mr. Doyle has always been happy," Mr. Munro said in an interview this week. He pointed out that association of the two circuits has stabilized exhibition in Australia and has been of great advantage to both of them and to distributors because of the facility with which booking schedules and clearances could be arranged. Under the merger, he said, better distribution could be obtained because pictures could be booked into the theatres for which they were best suited. Greater Union operates houses chiefly in the key cities, he explained, while Hoyt's controls houses in both the cities and the smaller, country towns.

Mr. Munro, who during his stay in New York occupied an office in the Twentieth Century-Fox building on West 56th Street, emphasized the point that Australia, as a market for American pictures, pays more per capita to American distributors than does any other country.

The tastes of Australian audiences correspond almost exactly to those of American theatregoers, he said, citing the fact that pictures which are box office hits in this country in general are certain to be popular there. This similarity extends, he added, even to British pictures which, in the main, must depend on merit alone rather than on empire loyalty.

Condemns "Quickies"

In this connection Mr. Munro condemned "quickies," whether American or British made, but chiefly those made in England under quota regulations, as injurious to the industry as a whole as well as useless at the box office. One advantage of the quota laws in operation in New South Wales and Victoria, the only two Australian states which have passed such legislation, he said, is the provision for a commission to review domestic pictures and approve or reject them for exhibition as quota pictures.

QUANTITY DEMANDED BY AUSTRALIANS

Censorship does not constitute a problem in Australia since the Production Code has improved the quality of Hollywood productions, minimum admissions are enforced through distributor-exhibitor agreement, a sincere and partly successful campaign is being waged against giveaways and chance games, but "double bills have been a fixture on the continent for a donkey's years and will continue to be," according to Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyt's Theatres.

"Audiences demand a show of at least three hours' duration," Mr. Munro said, "and single features are possible only when an exceptional picture or one too long to be run with a second film is shown. In New Zealand, however, the people like to be home in bed earlier and are partial to single feature shows."

The federal government and the state legislatures realize, Mr. Munro said, that it is impossible to move Hollywood to Australia and ask only that the American companies cooperate with their intention of building up a native industry. It is important, he added, that all the companies offer such cooperation because the pursuit of a selfish policy by one or two would only antagonize the governments and bring about stricter regulations. He intends to discuss the quota situation with the foreign managers of major distributors before he sails for home.

The importance of Australia as a market for American pictures is even more remarkable, Mr. Munro pointed out, because Sunday shows are not allowed any place on the continent. Theatres in the larger cities operate continuous shows six days a week while the neighborhood houses and those in the smaller towns have six evening performances and one matinee a week.

Free Rein to Managers

Showmanship and exploitation are at a high level, the circuit executive said, adding that the theatre managers are given a free rein in their operation of the houses.

"We have no 'lighthouse keepers'" he said proudly, referring to managers "who confine their activities to seeing whether the lights are lit."

Although Mr. Munro refused to comment on the status of his discussions with Mr. Kent on the General Theatres deal, he said that appointment of a successor to Mr. Doyle on the General board has not been decided and in any case "would be for only six months." The present arrangement terminates December 31st.

The situation, uncertain for several months and further complicated last week by the announcement of Mr. Doyle's retirement to engage in production in England, is expected to be untangled before Mr. Munro sails for home next week.

Leaving with him on the Mariposa next Wednesday will be several executives actively interested in the outcome, among them being Kenneth Asprey, counsel for Mr. Doyle's company, Greater Union; Charles Cheval of Expeditionary Pictures, Australian producing company, and Stanley Crick, Australian manager for Twentieth Century-Fox. Also on board the Mariposa bound for Australia after attending sales conventions and home office conferences will be H. C. McIntyre, Universal manager; Douglas Lotherington of RKO, and Cecil Mason of Columbia.

Mr. Munro's resignation as joint managing director of General Theatres, announced last month, is only a temporary arrangement pending his return to Australia, he said. Maurice Sloman is occupying the post for the time being.

Final Details of Olympia Transfer Are Disclosed

Final details of the sale of the Paramount theatre properties in Connecticut by the receivers of the defunct Olympia Theatre circuit to New England Theatres, Inc., a Paramount subsidiary, at an estimated cost of $378,000 have been reported in a receiver's deed filed in the office of the New Haven, Conn., town clerk.

The sale of two parcels of property owned by Paramount there consummates a five-year receivership during which the old Olympia Theatres, to which Paramount belonged, was sold to New England Theatres at a reported price of $4,000,000. The New Haven deal winds up this reorganization.

New England Theatres, Inc., now becomes the principal holding and operating company for Paramount in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut. It also assumes a $65,000 mortgage at New Haven from the old Olympia Theatre to the New Haven Savings Bank as part of the deal. Authority to sell the entire chain of some 40 theatres in New England was given to Harry L. Sampson and Samuel Pinanski, the receivers, by a decree entered in the courts on May 4. In addition to the theatrical properties in the chain, which has been dissolved, the Olympia Company's assets included a 50 per cent stock interest in Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, Inc., which is operated by J. J. Ford.

CEA Delegates Entertained

Edwin M. Hartley, head of RCA Photophone Division and Van Ness Philip, photophone export manager, were hosts Tuesday night at a farewell party held for a group of British theatre exhibitors who visited the United States as delegates of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association. The party was held at the Downtown Athletic Club. The delegates sailed for England Wednesday.

The National Theatre Supply Dealers Association opened its annual convention at the Medinah Club in Chicago this week with about 75 dealers present. All available exhibition space has been taken by 40 manufacturers.

Comment on DECENCY IN MOTION PICTURES

by

MARTIN QUIGLEY

THE NEW YORK TIMES
Sunday, March 14, 1937

Here, briefly, is the story of the motion pictures' "reform from within," as modestly told by the man who had most to do with giving that reform its effective instrument.

This little book contains much clear information on a subject of wide interest.

KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY
(London) March 25, 1937

Mr. Quigley has throughout the book told his story, explained the Industry's developments, and recorded the tendencies both downward and upward with a creditable dispassionateness, endeavoring to record fairly, and succeeding.

DAILY CINEMA
(London) April 7, 1937

During the week-end I had an opportunity of which I availed myself to run through Martin Quigley's "Decency in Motion Pictures" to which I referred when I received it. It is a very finely written and decent little work, very sincere and indeed constructive.

LA CINEMATOGRAPHIE FRANCAISE
(Paris) March 26, 1937

It would be to the advantage of many French producers to read the book just published in America and written by Mr. Martin Quigley, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher of the Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily, "Decency in Motion Pictures."

MR. JACK WARNER Vice-President
Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

Am sure a book of this kind will do a great deal to enlighten the theatre-going public on the sincere efforts being made by the motion picture industry to make good entertainment.

L'OSSERVATORE ROMANO
(Vatican City) April 11, 1937

The name of Martin Quigley is too well known in the international cine editorial world to be described in connection with his latest publication, "Decency in Motion Pictures."

He deserves instead a word of congratulation for his well-known activity, developed with the intelligent and tenacious work of learned men on behalf of various problems connected with motion pictures and specially those interested in the moral side of the motion picture production.

Already his firm activity was appreciated favorably at the time that the code of ethics was compiled and accepted by all producers of the United States of America. Today in this new publication he tells the precedents that caused the formation of the Legion of Decency of America, and therefore, we can say that he has made an historical document in the field of the cinema across the sea.

MR. W. G. VAN SCHMUS

Managing Director

Radio City Music Hall, New York

Please accept my thanks, which I expressed to you orally the other day, for your very interesting, stimulating book. It is a fair statement of facts, readable and convincing.

I hope you will make further contributions of this sort so that people may have a clearer understanding of the better side of the motion picture industry.

UNIVERSE (London) April 9, 1937

Mr. Quigley surveys conditions that obtained in the cinema before the adoption of the now famous code, discusses the work of the Legion of Decency and finally prints the code in full. It is not a large book but a very important one, remarkable, incidentally, for the modesty of the author, who has effaced himself throughout.

MRS. JAMES LOORAM

National Legion of Decency

New York City

We have read "Decency in Motion Pictures" very carefully with great interest and hasten to congratulate you upon this most informative and impartial treatise on one of the most important accomplishments of history.

For a long time we have felt the need of such a book so that those within and without the industry might have a better understanding of the entire problem of the screen's responsibility. Besides its value to the industry and to all groups sincerely interested in the advancement of the screen, your book furnishes a complete answer to those thousands of students who have selected the topic of Motion Pictures for their Masters Thesis and have desired a well informed and intelligent opinion concerning the morals of the screen. We have already recommended this fine document to many who have written to us for such information and we will be happy to continue to do so.

WORLD FILM NEWS

(London) May, 1937

The author of this book is Martin Quigley, controller of the most powerful section of the American film press, and artificer of many of the great changes which have come over the motion picture industry during the past ten years. In 1925 when still editor of the Exhibitors Herald in Chicago, he was unique among trade journalists and film men in preaching the social responsibility of the cinema.

The book describes the "obligations, functions, standards and responsibilities," and rates the "tardiness of social leadership" in the world of cinema. There is an analysis of why a number of pictures represent wrong ethical standards and there is a publication in detail of the Production Code.

The best thing about this useful book is its indication of the fact that the most progressive forces in cinema have invariably come from within the industry. It is a necessary corrective to the many gratuitous busy bodies who have only recently discovered cinema, to be told that there have been reformers in the industry since 1900.

THE SIGN April, 1937

This book is not merely a case history, neither is it a hysterical condemnation nor a stupid attempt to whitewash blunders and devious schemings. It is a clear narration of cold facts marshalled in splendid form and proving that the motion pictures can perform a social service and provide a cultural uplift "mighty in proportion and far-reaching in effects." It is not a book for popular consumption but rather one for those interested from a professional, historical or ethical standpoint. Mr. Quigley's ability and right to speak authoritatively are apparent from his years spent in official capacity and especially by virtue of his great work in framing the Code of 1930.

THE HON. RICHARD NORTON

Pinewood Studios, Limited

Bucks, England

You know I feel that we in this country owe you a debt of thanks for all your sane work in this direction and all long-sighted people should appreciate it.

SIGHT AND SOUND

(London) May, 1937

The Production Code under which the American film industry has operated since 1930 and to which, therefore, most of the films seen in this country are subject, was accepted by the industry—but not effectively until after the Decency Campaign of Spring 1934—as a means of preventing externally imposed systems of censorship. The Code has been conspicuously successful in obtaining reasonable adjustment of films to right moral standards, we are told, and the screen's "successes have latterly amounted to the outstanding moral accomplishment of the modern world." But agitation for "unworkable and unpractical proposals" still apparently continues and it is in order to counter these and to see that the Code receives the support of public opinion which its success deserves that Mr. Quigley, who was partly responsible for the Code, has written these notes on it and the philosophy which underlies it.

MR. M. NEVILLE KEARNEY

Federation of British Industries, London

The American Film Industry and public are indeed lucky to have so able, unbiased and clear-minded an advocate as yourself in dealing with a matter that is of very high social importance.

FREDERIC M. THRASHER

Associate Professor of Education

New York University

I have read it with interest and shall be pleased to recommend it to my students.

THE TALENT REPORTER

(London) April, 1937

The editors of "The Talent Reporter" whole-heartedly recommend to all those interested in U. S. A. motion picture production codes, a book written by Martin Quigley, entitled "Decency in Motion Pictures." It is a book to read and refer to constantly.

THE BROOKLYN TABLET

March 20, 1937

In "Decency in Motion Pictures" written by Mr. Quigley and published by the Macmillan Company, the reading public is given one of the most complete, lucid, intelligent and altogether unbiased treatises that has been written to date on the subject. Its value to all interested in the subject of motion pictures from either a trade or an audience viewpoint cannot be overestimated. As one of the ablest and most far-sighted executives in the industry the author for many years, in his editorial columns, has warned the industry of the gathering storm clouds and as one who had much to do with the formation and adoption of the Production Code, Mr. Quigley's book bears the stamp of authenticity and of the integrity of the man who is better informed on the subject than perhaps any other man in the industry.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT PROPOSES QUOTA TO START AT 20 PER CENT

First Reactions Favorable to Board of Trade Proposal for Ratio to Increase to 30 Per Cent Within 10 Years

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

General reaction in London to the provisions submitted by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, as the British Government's proposal for quota stipulations in the new Films Act was favorable. The proposal, under which the quota ratio would be 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors, rising gradually over a ten-year period to a high of 30 per cent for distributors and 25 per cent for exhibitors, was seen as especially beneficial to the Kinematograph Renters' Society.

The Film Group of the Federation of British Industries met this week to discuss whether the cost clause of the new Act should operate from the passage of the bill or later and was expected to urge that a reciprocity clause be included as an optional feature.

It is believed that American companies will make big pictures for the world market here as a result of the new Act which will replace the present legislation expiring next year. The present quota is 20 per cent for both distributors and exhibitors.

Mr. Stanley disclosed the long-awaited Government proposals to the joint trade deputation to the Board of Trade last Friday. The deputation represented the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, the Kinematograph Renters' Society (distribuors) and the Film Group of the FBI (producers).

The Government also proposed a minimum cost of £15,000 or £2, 10 shillings per foot, with a film costing £7, 10 shillings per foot, or a total of £45,000, counting double on the quota.

A separate shorts quota is proposed at 10 per cent for distributors and five per cent for exhibitors, rising to 20 per cent and 15 per cent. There is to be no cost basis for shorts, but the Board of Trade would be invested with power to impose such a stipulation.

There will be no quality test as requested originally by the CEA. A reciprocity scheme is being considered, Mr. Stanley said, and may become an optional feature of the act.

A significant feature of the proposals is the fact that the Board of Trade will retain administration of the Films Act, with flexible powers to modify the quota and other details as desirable. The retention of power in the Board of Trade is indicative of the fact there will be no Government film commission or Government arbitration board named with specific jurisdiction over films. An advisory committee will assist in administration.

An extension of the classes of film available for quota purposes will include all but advertising films and newsreels and probably will admit documentary short subjects.

Sections Not Agreed

The confused situation in regard to trade policy towards the new Act became further confused before Mr. Stanley's announcement when the three trade sections of exhibitors, distributors and producers presented to the Board of Trade suggestions for legislation showing fundamental differences of attitude on the key problem of quota. This was after prolonged conferences inspired by an official threat that, failing trade agreement, the Government would take its own course. On June 2, a deputation to the board of Trade from the Film Group of the FBI informally placed before the permanent officials a reciprocity scheme which, it was suggested, would be acceptable to American interests.

QUOTA DISCUSSIONS HELD IN WASHINGTON

Frederick Herron, in charge of the foreign department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was in Washington this week discussing the British quota provisions with officials of the State Department.

Government officials have been in sympathy with the position of American producers, it was said, and are prepared to begin conversations with the British embassy along the lines of the administration's previous policies of reciprocal trade.

The reciprocity proposal placed before the Board of Trade officials by John Maxwell, C. M. Woolf, Basil Dean and M. Neville Kearney was, in principle, on the lines of the "optional reciprocity" plan described in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of May 8th. Essentially, it offers film importers the option of acquiring British films either for internal quota coverage or for export to America. A film bought for America would cancel that footage of quota obligation in England.

No Reciprocity

As a detailed scheme is said to have been submitted, it may be assumed that informal steps have been taken to ascertain, and possibly to meet, the objections of American interests to this scheme as it was originally drafted. These centered on two points: the percentage of negative costs of "expert quota" films to be borne by the Americans and the amount of footage relief granted in England. Nevertheless, it is unsafe to assume that reciprocity, even on an optional basis, has been accepted by the Americans. This is suggested plainly enough by the fact that the same informal deputation is said to have given the Board of Trade details of an alternative form of reciprocity under which U. S. companies would be required to buy British footage for America in a strict ratio to their American footage released in England. This is the old "pistol to the head" plan, certain to be rejected by American companies and, it seems, capable of affecting Anglo-American trade relations in a much wider field than the film. It appears that it is still being used as a threat.

This development left the situation in regard to Films Act revision as follows:

Disagreement on fundamental points between exhibitors, distributors and producers was admitted to the Board of Trade.

Exhibitors, whose deputation was reduced from 11 to 4 by General Council insistence on a quality clause for British films, were to be present on this occasion again as a united body, the circuits having again linked up—probably because they were confident the Board of Trade would not have the quality clause at any price.

Divided on this point, exhibitors were solidly against import restriction. So were distributors.

Reciprocity was tabled as a last minute producer policy because of the fact just stated, and the belief that the BOT also is against import restriction.

The CEA insistence on the quality clause was based entirely on a desire to maintain an adequate supply of films. The circuit dissent from this policy was not due to exhibition considerations; It was caused entirely by the fact that circuits are allied to distribution and production interests. Though the absence of circuit representatives from the recent trade deputation to Dr. Leslie Burgin was commented on by the latter, the independents' anxiety about product, including "B" or even "C" product, must have been officially recognized as a valid criticism of the cost clause and still more of the import restriction scheme.

The General Council meeting of the CEA, after the Burgin reception, was described by many of those present as a "dog fight." Nevertheless, in face of the fact that branch meetings have shown very divided views about the quality clause, several of them expressing a desire for cooperation with the KRS on a cost basis, the Council, however heated it may have become, did not reverse its previous policy. What it did do was to adjourn until after the Board of Trade conference.

In all of these references to the kaleidoscopic British trade situation it is important to remember that for purpose of Films Act controversy the term exhibitor means the independent non-circuit theatre owner, that distributor means American distributor, plus some circuits, and that by producer is indicated, as well as the straight studio-owning concern, those British distributors ordinarily grouped with the KRS, and also some circuit interests.

To Revise Another Act

The second main Act of Parliament governing the film industry, the Cinematograph Act of 1909, is also due for revision. In the House of Commons on June 3rd it was announced that a revision committee would be appointed immediately, composed of three representatives of the London County Council, four each of the County Councils Association, Municipal Corporations, and Scottish Local Government bodies, two of local Justices, one each of the Home Office and Scottish Office and two or three representatives of the general public.

The variety of public bodies by which the licensing of cinema theatres is controlled in the British Isles is illustrated in this list. There is occasionally as much variety in the interpretation of the Act, the first ever passed to control British cinemas and designed in the first instance to bring them under the law entirely from the point of view of public safety.

Since 1909 it has been legally decided that the Act also confers the powers of censorship, and, quite recently, that licensing authorities have the right to forbid new buildings on the ground of redundancy. The Act was, in fact, so loosely drawn, that it has been used as a means of control in directions certainly not contemplated when it was passed. Revision is likely to extend its scope rather than to restrict it. Probably, there will be a determined attempt to extend control to exhibitions of non-inflammable films, which are at present outside the law; this exemption has been used to secure, among other things, the exhibition of "Red" films which would certainly not have passed the censor. From the point of view of the exhibitor the exact form of a new "1909" Act is of even more importance than that of the new Films

Bringing "Victoria"

Herbert Wilcox has finished "Victoria the Great" at Denham, for Imperator, and RKO-Radio release throughout the world, and soon will personally bring a finished print to New York for presentation there, probably at the Radio City Music Hall.

Essentially a study of the earlier years of the Queen's reign, and emphasizing her love story, "Victoria the Great" will also be found an interesting portrait gallery of the celebrities of the sixty-year era bridged by the royal lady's lifetime. Melbourne, Peel, Wellington, Lincoln, Palmerston, Gladstone, Disraeli, Rhodes, Joseph Chamberlain are among the world statesmen introduced.

Besides Anton Walbrook as the Prince Consort, the cast includes H. B. Warner (Melbourne), Walter Rilla (the Consort's brother), Mary Morris (Duchess of Kent), Greta Wegener (Baroness Lehzen), James Dale (Wellington), Charles Carson (Peel), Felix Aylmer (Palmerston), Hugh Miller (Disraeli), Arthur Young (Gladstone), and Percy Parsons (Lincoln).

As a direct sequel, it is said, to the quality of the Technicolor sequence which concludes the Victoria picture by a pageant of the reign, Mr. Wilcox has signed with Mr. Kay Harrison for an all-Technicolor feature as his next production. Anna Neagle will be the star and the title will be "Nippy,"—which is the term used to indicate a London teashop girl. Also starred will be Ralph Reader, as a dance-producer with a chorus of sixty-four "Nippies" in waitress' cap and apron. Ralph Reader, a stage producer by profession, made his first screen appearance in "The Gang Show," which he is putting over in the States. The scenario of "Nippy" is being written by Marjorie Gaffney, who did "Evergreen" and "Head over Heels" for Jessie Matthews.

Hitchcock at Pinewood

Alfred Hitchcock already has done a week's work on the adaptation of the Josephine Tey book, "A Shilling for Candles," at Pinewood. The picture, still to be titled, is one of the four major productions to be made by Gaumont-British for GFD release. Its star is Nova Pilbeam and opposite her is Derrick de Marney. J. H. Roberts figured with the leads in opening sequences. Many exterior sequences are scheduled, including sea scenes at the Cornish coast, a number of village backgrounds and a series of shots of real English country roads of the type which the arterial motor road regrettably is displacing.

"Gangway" (Jessie Matthews) at Pinewood and "Dr. Syn" at Gainsborough studios complete the tale of G-B activity, but "Oh, Mr. Porter" is scheduled for production at Gainsborough and three pictures are waiting London presentation.

Victor Saville starts his fourth production, "South Riding", for London Films at Denham by rehearsing Edna Best, cast as a Yorkshire school teacher in a scene with Joan Ellum, a newcomer rated as a juvenile discovery after her screen tests for the picture.

Buddy Baer for Warner

Buddy Baer, brother of Max, and now being "tipped" by the British experts for early world championship distinction, will have his first screen part in "Transatlantic Trouble," the Max Miller vehicle already on the floor at Teddington. He starts as a champion vanquished by a fluke blow from a novice, but winds up as the victor in a world's championship.

Ross Landon, one of the Warner-British contract players, who comes from repertory in Canada, started in at Teddington this week in a specially written part in "From a Dark Stairway," in which Chili Bouchier and Hugh Williams are starred. It is a murder mystery, with hospital backgrounds.

BIP Season Ends

Walter Mycroft, director of production of Associated British Pictures, is putting on the floor immediately the last three pictures of the current programme of twelve. "Over She Goes," a musical with Stanley Lupino and Laddie Cliff of the original stage cast and Claire Luce, Gina Malo, Sally Grey and Judy Kelly in the leading feminine roles, has already started. From the American angle one of the most interesting features of this film is the appearance of Max Baer. His official description as "the man who didn't know his own strength" indicates the type of robust comedy scheduled for him.

Second feature to go on the floor will be "The Terror," from the Edgar Wallace melodrama. It is the first director's assignment of Richard Bird, who has played a number of screen roles successfully and recently produced the London stage plays "George and Margaret" and "The Constant Wife," with Ruth Chatterton.

Third and last of the ABP list is a specially written vehicle by Douglas Furber for Albert Burdon, which Albert de Courville will direct.

Musicals at Denham

With the Marcel Hellman production for Excelsior-London, a series of musicals will be inaugurated at Denham. Apart from Excelsior's picture, which will be called "The Playboy," and feature Jack Hulbert and Rex Harrison, there will be "Good Bye Honey," "Lovelies of London" and "Coronets," from the R. C. Sheriff story, all produced by Guenther Stapenhorst directly for London Films.

Marcel Hellman also plans to make at last the picture of the Scottish border scheduled by Criterion in the Spring and postponed for weather and other reasons. The shooting date is now, provisionally, August.

OPERATOR ARRANGEMENT IS HINTED

Act; the one severely controls him in his daily activities and the influence of the other is solely commercial.

Studios in Pool

A desire on the part of British producers to maintain rental figures for first class floor space in English studios is understood to be one of the important motivating factors behind the agreements closed and in work for a pooling of facilities on the part of large studios in the country.

Although nothing conclusive has been signed as yet, there is considerable talk of a working arrangement among the operators of the Denham, Pinewood and Amalgamated studios, and official confirmation came recently of the consolidation of production facilities by Alexander Korda and Basil Dean, operating the Denham and Ealing studios, respectively. Herbert Wilcox, who is producing at Korda's Denham plant, is also a participant in the arrangement.

According to reports of the original three-studio deal, the studios would be operated as a service unit from a central office in London. Space would be rented at a uniform rate and in whichever studio happened to have the required space available when requested. The staffs and equipment would be interchangeable.

In addition to the considerable economies which are seen as resulting from such an arrangement, the important fact is that price maintenance could be guaranteed.

The possibility has been voiced in London film circles of the general extension of this type of cooperation. Also seen as important factors in the situation were the hint of Dr. Leslie Burgin, Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade, that the industry should reorganize, and the fact that, due to the slump in production, there appeared a real danger that first class studio space would shortly be available at cut rates to any American company which wanted it.

It was thought likely in some quarters that Sound City, the Warner plant at Teddington, and possibly other plants, might be interested in a larger plan of a similar purpose, the basis of which would be the interchange of faciilties but the object really to standardize service charges.

At the fourth annual meeting of the Association of Cine-Technicians, resolutions were passed asking that the new Films Act should include a cost condition of £2 a foot in British films registered for quota, a "fair wages" clause and prohibition of more than one foreign technician on any British film.

Ralph Bond, chairman, declared that the present crisis in British production was due to mismanagement and incompetence for which technicians had no responsibility and that thorough reorganization is necessary.

In the report there was criticism of the fact that technicians had been asked to take salary cuts in certain studios, whereas "more real and lasting economies could have been made by studios calling conferences of their leading technicians and asking for cooperation in finding economics in working." It was said that 44 permits to foreign technicians had been refused in the year, a greater number than ever before, and that the association's policy was that foreigners should not be allowed if competent British technicians were available. The association claims 100 per cent union membership in many studios and a strong representation in all the 26 British plants.

Anthony Asquith was elected president for 1937, the vice-presidents being S. R. Cole, Ivor Montagu, Thoold Dickinson and Kenneth Gordon.

Film Financing Inquiry

W. C. Crockner, insurance solicitor prominent in the Leopold Harris fire-raising case, is conducting an investigation into British production finance for a group of Lloyds underwriters.

It is believed his report will cover all future insurance advances.

GB Board Acts

The Gaumont British board has sent a circular letter to shareholders replying to the appeal recently made by the Nordon committee of dissentient holders for support for an application to the Board of Trade for an official investigation of the company's affairs.

Disputing the statement that the consolidated balance sheet shows a deficit of £507,742, the official letter claims "a surplus consisting of reserves and profits and loss account balances of £1,130,599."

It comments on the fact that the interests behind the demand for an investigation were concerned in an unsuccessful attempt to upset the G. B. deal with General Theatres Corp. and, referring to the request to shareholders to contribute to a fund for the expenses of the campaign against the board, says: "In the circumstances the directors do not suppose that shareholders will be so willing."

Italians Ban Four American Pictures

The Italian Government's motion picture bureau in Rome Monday ordered four American-made films withdrawn from exhibition in Italy, on the ground that they were British propaganda. They were "The Charge of the Light Brigade," Warners; "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," Paramount; "Lloyds of London," Twentieth Century-Fox, and "Clive of India," United Artists.

Ritter Starts Tour

Heading a company of entertainers, Tex Ritter, singing western star with Grand National, has left on a personal appearance tour which will start in Columbus, O., June 26. With Mr. Ritter are Snub Pollard, comedian; Augie Gomez, trick roper, and Princess White Cloud, Indian entertainer.

Warners to Show 2 Plays in Ohio

Two plays, now showing on Broadway, will be staged in several Warner Brothers theatres in Ohio during the Fall, Nat Wolf, division manager of Cleveland, announced at a regional meeting in Mansfield, O.

Upon completion of the stage runs, the plays, "Tovarich" and "Yes, My Darling Daughter," will be made into pictures with Claudette Colbert and Charles Boyer in "Toravich" and Olivia DeHavilland in the other production.

In addition to Mr. Wolf, those from Cleveland who attended the meeting were Dick Wright, district manager; Syd Dannenberg, publicity director; Sol Bragin, chief in charge of the booking department, and Charles Salbert, his assistant; Lou Weinz, accounting department, and Miss Evelyn Friedel, secretary.

Exhibitors at the session included Frank Harpster, William Dworski, and Wayne Williams, all of Mansfield; Harvey Bodie, Coshocton; I. Soloman, Massillon; Wallace Elliott, Canton, and Harvey Cocks, Akron.

Play Bureau Lists Potential Judges

Judges for the second play contest of the Bureau of New Plays will be selected from a list announced by Theresa Helburn, director. The list follows:

Richard Aldrich, Winthrop Ames, Delos Chappell, Alfred de Liagre, Jr., Max Gordon, Lawrence Langner, Gilbert Miller, Brock Pemberton, Rowland Stebbins, producers.

Ina Claire, Gorge M. Cohan, Lynn Fontaine, Walter Hampden, Helen Hayes, Eva Le Gallienne, Alfred Lunt, actors.

John Gassner, John Hanrahan, Joseph Wood Krutch, Burns Mantle, Ruth Pickering, critics and editors.

Edward Goodman, Harry Wagstaff Gribble, Worthington Miner, Philip Moeller, Antoinette Perry, Lee Strasberg, directors.

A. M. Drummond, of Cornell, Samuel A. Eliot, Jr., of Smith, Sawyer Falk, of Syracuse, Garrett H. Leverton, of Northwestern, E. C. Mable, of the University of Iowa, Allardyce Nicoll, of Yale, Frank Hurburt O'Hara, of the University of Chicago, Arthur Mobson Quinn, of the University of Pennsylvania, Randolph Somerville, of New York University.

Walker Refuses Coal Post

Frank C. Walker, vice-president and general manager of Comerford Theatres, Inc., has no desire to become "czar" of the anthracite industry. Proposed by the Scranton Tribune as the man for leading the hard coal industry out of its difficulties, Mr. Walker, former chairman of the President's Emergency Council, said that under no circumstances could he see his way clear "to assume leadership of so difficult a task."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

First National

BULLETS OR BALLOTS: Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell—A racketeering story well acted by E. G. Robinson and Joan Blondell. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 12-13.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HEARTS DIVIDED: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—Marion Davies and Dick Powell are tops with our audience. Good story, acting and filming that pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 23-24.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

SINGING KID, THE: Al Jolson, Beverly Roberts—Our first Al Jolson picture. A good musical show that pleased. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 9-10.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

TRAILIN' WEST: Dick Foran, Paula Stone—Just another good western from this star. Dick Foran is a favorite with our audience in western pictures. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 26-27.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Gaumont British

LIVING DANGEROUSLY: Otto Kruger, Leonora Corbett—This picture took well and I received as many comments in its favor as I did on the American picture dualed with it. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 22-23.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Grand National

GREAT GUY: James Cagney, Mae Clarke—What this picture did for me was one grand and glorious flop. Haven't got over the shock yet as to why the terrible drop in receipts at box office. The picture itself was grand entertainment, but poor sound. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 28-29.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TROUBLE IN TEXAS: Tex Ritter—This is Ritter's best picture, putting all his previous pictures way back in the background. By all means play this one. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 18.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

LAST OF MRS. CHEYNEY, THE: Joan Crawford, William Powell, Robert Montgomery, Frank Morgan, Jessie Ralph—An excellent picture, interesting story and a fine cast with Frank Morgan and Jessie Ralph furnishing enough comedy to keep them laughing. Struck two rainy nights out of three so the box office took a nose dive but this was no fault of the picture as it is the type that will please. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 28-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE WISE GUYS: Robert Young, Betty Furness—Here is a swell show and we did not take in enough to pay the express. This one night showing is the berries on a title of this kind. We think the title kept them away. Running time, eight reels. Played May 29.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, George Burns and Gracie Allen—Most of our patrons liked this but we fell down flat at the box office. Played May 26-27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—Poor. Failed to please the few who took a chance and tried to watch it.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

DOCTOR'S DIARY, A: John Trent—Good subject. Fair business. Some comments. This new star should go places.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMING: William Boyd, George Hayes, Gail Sheridan, Clara Kimball Young—Better than average Hopalong from Mulford's story. All of these have pleased. Played June 2-3.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

LET'S MAKE A MILLION: Edward Everett Horton—Opinion divided on this; some thought Horton not quite as good as usual. Business normal. Played May 29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

OUTCAST: Warren William, Karen Morley, Lewis Stone—Pleasing program picture of the discredited doctor who makes good in new surroundings. Lewis Stone, as the old attorney, nearly takes the acting honors from the leads. Played May 26-27.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ROSE BOWL: Eleanore Whitney, Tom Brown—Weak subject. Fair business. No comments.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—An enjoyable comedy drama with Hawaiian Island locale. Bing ably supported by Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross. Good music and good fun with the different locale adding a pleasing touch. Played June 6-7.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—Crosby is tops with us. Radio, I believe, did much for him, not forgetting the popular team, Bob Burns and Martha Raye. A small town natural.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—Opinions were widely divergent among our patrons as to the entertainment value of this one, but all agreed that Meredith gave a performance long to be remembered. Pulled well, but would say that on the whole, it was an artistic flop for small town situations. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 19-20.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHARLIE CHAN AT THE CIRCUS: Warner Oland, Keye Luke—Another good Chan picture from Fox. Lots of good, clean comedy in this one. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 2-3.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

DOCTOR BULL (Reissue): Will Rogers, Marian Nixon—Like all Will Rogers, this was highly enjoyed. A success except at the box office. Played May 2-3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FARMER TAKES A WIFE, THE: Henry Fonda, Janet Gaynor—A clever little comedy story well liked by our patrons. Played March 19-20.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Don Ameche, Ann Sothern—A light comedy, not much sense or reason but people liked it. We'd run it on Bank Night if we were to run it again. It's a good Bank Night picture or a little better. Running time, 81 minutes. Played June 6-7.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FIRST BABY, THE: Shirley Deane, Johnny Downs—A clever little comedy that pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 74 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

GENTLE JULIA: Jane Withers, Tom Brown—Another good picture from this star. Pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 63 minutes. Played April 16-17.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

HERE'S TO ROMANCE: Nino Martini, Genevieve Tobin, Anita Louise—A real musical show. Good for any day in the week. Well liked by all who attended. Bad roads and weather, so was rather light at the box office. Played March 5-6.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche—"Very good comedy drama" the verdict of patrons. Played May 30-31.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

NANCY STEELE IS MISSING: June Lang, Victor McLaglen, Peter Lorre—Well produced and well acted drama with McLaglen as the repentant kidnaper. Peter Lorre delivers a perfect performance as the villain. June Lang charming as usual. No particular draw. Played June 4-5.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—A fair show but you expect to see more of the 5 kiddies really, but they just show up for the opening and the finish and the rest of the show is just built in by a good cast, so all is O. K. Running time, eight reels. Played May 30-31.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt—This picture is exceptionally good but failed to break any house records. Not sorry we played it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND: Will Rogers, Anne Shirley—A good Will Rogers picture that pleased 100 per cent. Played May 14-15.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STOWAWAY: Shirley Temple, Robert Young, Alice Faye—Her best so far and enjoyed real good business. After "Dimples," questioned her ability but she's still a real star.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

THIS IS THE LIFE: Jane Withers, John McGuire—Jane Withers is a favorite with our audience and this picture proved no exception. Owing to bad roads and weather we did not do so well at the box office. This, of course, was no fault of the picture. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 19-20.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

TIME OUT FOR ROMANCE: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Clever program picture that pleased our patrons as much as some of the A's they tell us about and charge us accordingly. Played May 28-29.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WILD BRIAN KENT: Ralph Bellamy, Mae Clarke—It seems to me that they did not use much but the title of the book in this one, but it seemed to please the cash customers. Lots of action and that is what they like. Running time, 57 minutes. Played May 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—A nice little picture that didn't draw. People who did come out for it thought it very good and that it was beautiful color. The sound wasn't so good but nothing noticeable. We liked it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 1.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

THESE THREE: Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon, Joel McCrea—A good program picture that pleased our audience. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 12-13.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

FLYING HOSTESS: Judith Barrett, William Hall—Normal business to a satisfied audience. Played May 22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MAN I MARRY, THE: Doris Nolan, Michael Whalen—This is what I call a grand picture. Doris Nolan put it over in a grand way. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 30.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

NOBODY'S FOOL: Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell—A dandy comedy feature and Edward puts it over O. K. Make 'em laugh, Eddy, and you'll be getting the crowds. Running time, seven reels. Played June 2.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—This picture had everything the producer claimed for it. Exhibitors everywhere, anytime can step on this one. A colossal production that pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 136 minutes. Played May 7-8.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Another great picture from Warner Bros. that pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 113 minutes. Played May 21-22.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

AIR EXPRESS
—THAT MEANS RUSH
AIR EXPRESS DIVISION
RAILWAY EXPRESS AGENCY, INC.

Three-mile-a-minute speed is no further away than your telephone. When minutes mean money, call any Railway Express office for the only nation-wide AIR EXPRESS service. It saves time, worry, and money because AIR EXPRESS flies your shipments 2500 miles overnight—offers you day and night service direct to 216 cities in the United States and Canada—and to Honolulu, Guam, Manila and 32 Latin-American countries. If it's RUSH, remember, phone RAILWAY EXPRESS.

COLLEEN: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler—A great dancing and musical show with extraordinary scenery and performance by the two leading stars. Running time, 99 minutes. Played May 21-22.—J. P. Johnson, Sons of Norway Theatre, Ambrose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

Shorts

Educational

ALPINE RENDEZVOUS: Song and Comedy Hits—Very well received.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

AMUSE YOURSELF: Two-Reel Comedies—A good comedy of the laughing kind. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

FARMER AL FALFA IN THE HEALTH FARM: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

FEMININE FORM: Treasure Chest—Interesting. Educational.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

GOING NATIVE: Song and Comedy Hits—Very good single reel with some good dancing. Running time, 11 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MELODY GIRL: Two-Reel Comedies—17 minutes of singing and playing that would have made a good 10 minute short. Too much fooling around. Nothing done. Wasn't well taken. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PUDDY'S CORONATION: Terry-Toons—Cute but don't quite think that the artist did as much as could have with the subject. Running time, seven minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SAILOR'S HOME, THE: Terry-Toons—Fairly good short.—R. J. Schmitt, Star Theatre, Geneva, Ind. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FOOL PROOF: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another "Crime Doesn't Pay" series that has commendable merits in discouraging crimes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SPOOKY HOOKY: Our Gang—Very good Our Gang short. These kids get the laughs. Running time, 11 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TWO LITTLE PUPS: Harman-Ising—A good filler for any program and the color adds to the beauty on the screen. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TWO TOO YOUNG: Our Gang—Another home run for Our Gang. These new series are the answer.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

VIOLETS IN SPRING: Musical Comedies—A very pleasing musical that brought us many comments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

SWING, HUTTON, SWING: Ina Ray Hutton and Her Orchestra—Good music but Hutton distracted from music by too much exposure of one back. Cover her back and your patrons will enjoy the short. Running time, eight minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING STARS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very interesting and timely. Our golfers got quite a bit out of it and people not interested in golf enjoyed it, too. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

TWISKER PITCHER, THE: Popeye the Sailor—One good cartoon. The adults go more out of this than the kids. It's good. The trouble with Popeye here is that the kids will sit through every show just to see him a couple of times. Running time, seven minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BAD MEDICINE: Headliner Series—A very clever musical comedy worth playing. This boy, Gene Austin, has a very pleasing voice.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 10: Same as all the rest but interesting just to a few that read the news. Rest of the folks just don't seem to care for it. Anyhow, they don't come to see it. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

United Artists

PLUTO'S JUDGMENT DAY: Mickey Mouse Series—Very clever Disney that was enjoyed by everyone.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

GOPHER TROUBLE: Oswald Cartoons—Very good cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOUSE OF MAGIC: Meany-Miny-Moe Cartoons—This is a good one and is one of the best Meany-Miny-Moe cartoons we have shown. Running time, seven minutes.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

TEDDY BERGMAN'S INTERNATIONAL REVUE: Mentone Musical Comedies—This comedy is very good with lots of music and dancing. Recording wonderful. High Fidelity process. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

UNDER SOUTHERN STARS: Broadway Brevities—Booked this especially for Memorial Day, but it is the tops for any day. Built around the life of the hero of the Lost Cause, Stonewall Jackson, it has history, thrills, romance and comedy enough to please everyone. I consider this the best series filmed and this is one of the best. Beautiful color. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Serial

Mascot

ADVENTURES OF REX AND RINTY: Rex, King of Wild Horses, Rin Tin Tin, Jr.—Played the third episode. Find the lads giving it a big hand.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MGM To Release Four Roadshows

In addition to "Captains Courageous," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will release four roadshow productions during the summer season. They are "Parnell"; "A Day at the Races"; "The Emperor's Candlesticks"; and "Broadway Melody of 1938." Other summer releases will include "Married Before Breakfast"; "Umbrella Man"; "General Hospital"; and "Topper."

Columbian Club Holds Annual Summer Outing

Dinner, a floor show and dancing climaxed the annual summer outing held at the Berkshire Country Club Saturday by the Columbian Club of Columbia Pictures Corporation. Prizes were awarded the winners of the various golf tournaments which included putting and driving and an 18-hole, low gross and low net tourney.

"Souls" Opening Set

"Souls at Sea" will be shown on a roadshow basis and will open at the Astor theatre on Broadway on June 30, Paramount announced in New York Tuesday. The picture is nearly completion in Hollywood.

Ralph McClellan, formerly in charge of the contract division at the Universal studios, has been appointed sales manager for the Telco Corporation. Mr. McClellan is now in New York contacting producers in regard to Telco color prints.

Samuel Klein and Jack Zamsky have formed Preferred Pictures, Inc., to operate as an independent film exchange in Los Angeles.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

ACADEMY REEL TO TEST SOUND IN U.S. THEATRES

Sample Section of Dialogue And Music from Each Studio To Be Sent to Exhibitors

Producers in Hollywood and the sound equipment manufacturers in New York moved this week to bring further advances in theatre sound quality, in the belief that it will eventually bring better box office returns.

William Koenig, chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences announced that the Council within the next few days will make available to the industry a second test reel for use in checking and maintaining the adjustment of the sound projection systems in theatres.

This test reel, which will contain a sample section of dialogue and music recording from each of the eight large studios, will be similar in make-up to the reel used by the Academy's Theatre Standardization Committee in their tests which are leading to the adoption of the new "Standard Electrical Characteristic," revised specifications for which were also announced this week.

A number of prints of the reel are now being prepared for the sound equipment service companies, studios and theatre circuits. Other exhibitor organizations and individuals concerned with the maintenance of sound quality in the theatre may submit requests for prints of the reel to Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Academy Research Council, at 1217 Taft Building, Hollywood.

As a matter of policy in order that copies of the test reel do not reach the hands of unauthorized individuals or organizations, each of these requests must be approved by the Research Council before prints of the reel will be delivered.

This test reel is the first sound recording test reel ever made available to the theatre, and, according to the Academy, "should be of assistance to sound service men in adjusting the equipment to obtain optimum results from current studio recordings."

Coincident with the announcement of the new test reel, the Research Council announced revision in the "Standard Electrical Characteristic for Two-way Reproducing Systems in Theatres." As a result of tests of new equipment made available to the industry at approximately the time of the issuance of the specifications for the former "Standard Electrical Characteristic," on March 31st, as well as of additional tests and further consideration of existing theatre horn systems equipped with bakelite diaphragms, the Council has revised the standard covering the high frequency end of the characteristic for these bakelite diaphragm equipped systems.

Membership of the Theatre Standardization Committee, which is in charge of this program for the Research Council, under the chairmanship of John Hilliard of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, consists of: John Aalberg, RKO-Radio; Lawrence Aicholtz, Universal; E. A. McClintock, Warner Brothers-First National; Gordon Sawyer, United Artists; William Thayer, Paramount; Ralph Townsend, 20th Century-Fox; S. J. Twining, Columbia; K. F. Morgan, Electrical Research Products, Inc.; Barton Kreuzer, the RCA Manufacturing Company, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

The actual revision is in only the high-frequency end of the characteristic for the non-metallic equipped systems, the characteristic for metal diaphragms remaining unchanged from the specifications of March 31st.

Minskys Obtain Writ in Action To Reopen House

An order directing License Commissioner Paul Moss to show cause why he should not issue a license for the reopening of the Oriental Theatre, 1662 Broadway, New York City, as a motion picture and vaudeville house has been obtained by the Minsky brothers. The theatre, along with other burlesque houses, has been closed since May 1 when an extension of licenses was denied because of alleged "strip teasing."

F. H. LaGuardia, mayor, informed burlesque operators at a conference Monday that he does not wish to put them out of business permanently but that they must clean up their shows if they expect to survive. The possibility of drafting a code of self regulation under which the houses might reopen was discussed at the meeting.

In obtaining the writ from Supreme Court Justice Louis A. Valente, the brothers, Herbert and Morton Minsky, charged Mr. Moss's refusal to grant their application was arbitrary and capricious.

After the order was signed the brothers issued a statement, declaring they had definitely abandoned the burlesque field. Should they obtain the license, they said, they have arranged to show pictures and a Negro revue.

An investment of about $40,000 will be endangered and more than 100 persons will lose jobs, they stated, unless the license is granted. The statement also attacked Mr. Moss for declaring the Minsky brothers had broken previous promises when he refused to license the house as a motion picture theatre June 4th.

"King and Chorus Girl" Withdrawn

Although approved by the British censor board, the film, "The King and the Chorus Girl," has been withdrawn by Warner Brothers from distribution in the United Kingdom. Protests had been made that the theme of the picture was too much like the romance of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

ENHANCED READABILITY

To the majority of our readers, weekly study of the Round Table pages ranks as highly as any other important function of operation. No matter how busily they are occupied in doing a day's work, members tell us that a regular perusal of the Club section is a "must" that cannot be neglected any more than the conduct of the theatre, promotion of profitable tieins and furthering of invaluable goodwill contacts.

However, keeping up with everything that requires doing takes a lot of the day's hours and thus any time-saving device that can be employed to ease the strain under which the manager is forced to operate is of course to be welcomed.

The new layout of your Round Table which follows in this issue is an endeavor on our part to give the pages enhanced readability so that the contents may be absorbed and nothing missed even by those who must "read as they run".

SHALL WE SHOWMANIZE?

There should be a more closely related term to describe showmanship, opines Round Tabler Matt Saunders, in offering the word "showmanize" which he has copyrighted and refers to the membership for further comment. For instance, writes the Bridgeport (Connecticut) Loew-man, by saying, "The campaign was showmanized by——" one would immediately identify the term as applying peculiarly to the putting over of the advertising and exploitation of a picture or whatever the project happened to be.

Saunders' suggestion brings up an interesting bit of history as concerns the usage of the word "exploitation" long adopted by the fraternity to describe what Matt has in mind. From what the dictionary tells us, "to exploit" has an entirely different meaning than that given the term by theatremen, a definition that has little if anything to do with sound showmanship, but through long usage has become a widely used trade term.

Saunders displays high courage in his endeavor to toss the firmly established "exploit" out the window in favor of "showmanize", but whether the membership is willing to discard the old love for the new remains to be seen.

VOTES FOR THE BOXOFFICE

Whatever the occasion, your open-eyed showman sooner or later can be depended upon to get aboard any local movement that may bring patron-attention to his theatre. And this is confirmed again by recent doings in the West Bronx section of New York where Manager Ed Siegal, of Consolidated Circuit's Jerome Theatre, was elected to the honorary post of local "Mayor".

These sectional elections have for long been a colorful part of the New York scene. Local residents get together to ballot for "the people's choice"; the voting is spirited, excitement runs high, newspapers make quite a to-do about it. In Siegal's case, he accepted his honors on the stage of his theatre before a capacity house and in the presence of important borough notables.

The splendid breaks in the metropolitan dailies on Siegal's election of course brought the Jerome Theatre a lot of good publicity in that highly competitive neighborhood. That the manager was chosen for the job by votes of his local businessmen means also that he has built up a mountain of goodwill, now being translated into effective merchant and other profitable cooperations at the boxoffice.

BINSTOCK BOWS IN

It was only in last week's Round Table that your Chairman had the pleasure of praising Ed McBride for his tenacity in going after a Quigley Plaque. And here, glory be, comes Paul Binstock, another long-time striver, who lands up at the top in winning the May Bronze on MGM's "Romeo and Juliet" at the subsequent-run Republic Theatre, in Brooklyn, N. Y. Paul incidentally is the first Randforce Circuit manager to win a Plaque, which of course is gratifying to Sam Rinzler, Louis Frisch and Erwin Gold, his pleased superiors.

What this department had to say about McBride goes as well for Binstock. It goes as well for any other showman who, win-lose-or-draw, keeps boring in and won't stop until he gets to where he is going. A lad who fights as hard as all that for a Quigley Award is the kind of a bird to have around any man's boxoffice.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

The Marines

To sell "Join the Marines," J. Wallerstein, Homan Theatre, Gary, Ind., tied in with Ninth Battalion of the U. S. Marine Corps by setting up a recruiting station in his lobby with pup tent, guns, flags, bayonets, etc. Local marines were on duty in full uniforms during run and ahead, pictures of Corps in action were displayed around the tent and board with standard marine poster planted out front.

Cards were distributed in heart of city by marines in uniform and in addition to regular screen trailer, special trailer was made up stating the requirements for enlistment in the corps. Wallerstein reports tiein of aid to his date and a number of enlistments obtained by the Marines as a direct result.

Second-Run

Tying in leading merchants on the block on which his theatre is situated to impress the importance of his second-run date of "3 Smart Girls," Russ McKibbon, Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Canada, was able to secure sufficient ads for a smart co-op page. Prominence of the street as a shopping center was emphasized by special copy in center of page calling attention to the attractiveness of the merchandise and all ads carried reference to the picture.

McKibbon also arranged to salvage a number of one sheets and standees from the local first run date on the picture and placed these in leading music stores and other prominent spots.

Coverage

Highlight of Joe Di Pesa's "Maytime" campaign at Loew's State, Boston, Mass., was newspaper coverage landed with three full pages in the Boston Evening American, roto layout in the Sunday Globe, plugs in radio sections of all papers and co-op ads were also planted.

Joe further tied in with the national broadcast of Hollywood Hotel featuring Jeannette MacDonald and scenes from Maytime." Immediately following the program station plugged the local date.

Parachute Passes

To publicize as widely as possible tiein to drop theatre passes and gift certificates contributed by merchants in Athens, Ohio, on "Star Is Born," at the Athena Theatre, Wally Allen arranged a co-op page that also carried the details of the stunt. The gift certificates were attached to small parachutes and dropped from a plane at designated time; center of spread was given over to the attraction, theatre and date.

Regularly featured by Allen is a tie-in with local dairy called "milkagrams" in which readers are invited to unscramble words which when corrected make up sentences plugging the milk company's products. Merchant takes large ad to play up the tieup and theatre in exchange for designated number of passes.

TELL WHAT THEY DID BRIEFLY, CONCISELY

On these two pages are presented the highlights of campaigns contributed recently and set down in the form presented for the information of theatremen who would like to know how the other chap did it but does not have much time to read about it. It should take the average reader no more than about 10 minutes to acquaint himself with the contents of the two-page spread.

Safety First

The traffic problem in Bombay, India, is reported as acute as on this side, which situation allowed effective tieup arranged by Frank V. Kennebeck under the auspices of the India Safety First Association for "And Sudden Death." Featured was a four page section of the Bombay Sunday Standard, front page carrying safety traffic message from His Royal Highness the Duke of York, rest of section carrying co-op ads from auto and accessory dealers, publicity on the picture, articles on safe driving. One hundred thousand copies of the supplement were used and an additional number were printed up for distribution to all exhibitors playing the date throughout India.

Mr. Anonymous

Top stunt in Jack Farr's "On the Avenue" campaign at the Strand, Yorktown, Texas, was typed message on telegraph blank with following copy: "Mr. and Mrs. Yorktown: We will meet you on the avenue in front of the Strand Theatre Sunday and Monday. Bring the family. Don't forget, on the avenue in front of the Strand Theatre Sunday and Monday. If we are not standing in front go inside and you will find us sitting next to you." Signed, "Anonymous."

Beauty Matinee

In conjunction with a morning matinee showing of "Cafe Metropole" at regular admission prices, women patrons of the Capitol Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah, were treated to a cosmetic demonstration from the stage by Manager Charlie Pincus on a tieup with Hollywood cosmetician and department store. Latter sponsored the stunt which included lecture by Ola Carroll, Twentieth Century-Fox make-up expert, who illustrated her talk with live model and drawings. Store contributed two 15-minute broadcasts and distributed booklets with theatre ad on front cover.

Cosmetician held daily afternoon conferences in lobby giving make-up charts to interested patrons, store also devoted main window to the tiein and publicized the engagement further with a series of newspaper ads carrying theatre credits.

Coronation

Coronation Week in Kingston, Ontario was distinguished by Thomas McCoy at the Tivoli by a marquee display which took a prize in the civic display contest. Decorations included empire flags hung from the marquee topped by an artistic poster reading "Long may they reign" and a large medallion of Their Majesties. From the roof were also hung flags with thousand-watt spotlights on the roof of the building across the street illuminating the display at night.

On Coronation Day in conjunction with the picture "The Man Who Could Work Miracles," an English production, McCoy distributed elaborate 48-page programs in honor of the occasion. Programs were secured from local Canadian Regent Club and cost was covered by ads of local merchants.

Gaynor Double

Local Muncie, Ind., newspaper was sold the idea of selecting a girl to represent Janet Gaynor in connection with Vic Sicilia's "Star Is Born" opening at the Rivoli Theatre. Prominent industrial leaders acted as judges in the contest, considering charm and personality as well as beauty. Winner, given a week's salary, interviewed patrons to determine whether they preferred the actress in her former roles to her part in the current picture.

Sicilia also staged a "Hollywood Premiere" with aerial bombs, etc., and airplane trailing banner covered the town.

TOP STUNTS OF LATE CAMPAIGNS

Space for Sally

Among the effective tieins accomplished by Arthur Cohn, Queen, Wilmington, Del., to publicize his date of the Sally Rand stage show, outstanding were co-op pages and other ads obtained on personal appearance of Miss Rand in local stores. As guest speaker at weekly Lions Club lunch, the star obtained further publicity and also sponsored a salad contest in local Shopping Guide for additional buildup.

Radio interviews contributed to the unusual amount of space Cohn was able to promote.

The Royal Arms

Date on "Prince and the Pauper" at the Palace, Calgary, Canada, was turned into a special coronation week show coincidental with the ceremonies crowning the new king and queen in London. Pete Egan decorated his theatre front with the royal arms and put out a special program carrying names of popular and patriotic numbers which were included in a community sing program. Photos of their majesties were distributed to the patrons in conjunction.

"Dance" Ballyhoo

The skating sequence in "Shall We Dance" was played up by Arthur Krolick at the Regent Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., in a number of ingenious ways by merchant tieups and street stunts. Store devoted large window to exhibit of skates backed by cutout of the stars in the number from the picture. For street bally Krolick had couple in full evening clothes on skates making the main street of the town carrying back banners.

Playing "A Day with the Quints" on the same program, Art utilized a number of pictures of the famous Dionnes taken from Life magazine and planted these out front on a 40 by 60 poster.

Stuffs Photos

Tieins with McFadden Publications to publicize various attractions are found effective by Bill Brown at the RKO Albee, Providence, R. I., one of the latest reported on "Shall We Dance" being distribution of imprinted Ginger Rogers photos in all local copies of Liberty magazine. In addition Brown arranged for house to house delivery of these photos by some 400 boy carriers.

Brown also planted promoted announcements on the local Packard agency broadcast on the coast to coast program featuring Fred Astaire, and also made use of the skate sequence by putting on contest. Local cycle company placed thousands of skates in window, with prizes going to those guessing nearest to correct number of skates shown.

"ROMEO AND JULIET" NOT FOR SISSIES

Arthur Pekelner manages the Roosevelt Theatre in the heart of the colored section of New York's Harlem and, figuring that his regular patrons would not go for "Romeo and Juliet" if he sold the attraction as a Shakespeare classic, advertised the date as a picture "not for highbrows and sissies" by stressing the many hand-to-hand fights, sword and dagger battles and such like.

Schools Cooperate

For the two a day date of "Lost Horizon" at the Granada, San Bernardino. Dave Martin and Victor Rosen report various slants outstanding being special boxoffice in the foyer for reservations and special operators phoning a preferred list of local big names. To these also were mailed reservation applications and inserts. Announcements were made over pa. system at local college and high school with students permitted to cut classes to attend matinees. Unusual in the regular theatre advertising was posting of 24-sheet in foyer.

Bill Wires Bill

From Milwaukee way to preview "Star Is Born," Bill Exton, Kenosha, Kenosha, wired himself a telegram to the theatre going into a rave about the picture. Copy was run as a three-column display ad on a regular telegraph blank. To explain the idea ad was headed "It got me—got me so hard I sent myself a telegram." Bill claims though the gag certainly sounds screwy it aided in obtaining a tremendous opening.

The house being burglarized during run of "Met Him in Paris," Exton broke out with an ad the day after, copy reading "They knew when to strike after seeing turnaway crowds all day yesterday—they broke into the safe." Title of picture was included.

Milk Tiein

Jonas Perlberg, who excites folks in Miami on behalf of the local Paramount Theatre circuit tied in with chain stores and milk dealers' association to publicize the Lowell Thomas short "Milk Parade." Milk dealers used imprinted grocery bags and marked milk bottle pluggers.

Working with Al Weiss at the Paramount, Perlberg had local paper run shots of elaborate lobby art work and for date on "Prince and the Pauper" at the Olympia arranged high school essay contest with newspapers acting as judges.

Unique Front

Made of beaver board on a wooden frame was the 30-foot high skyscraper cutout used out front on "Top of the Town," by Howard Ralston at the Ritz in San Bernardino, Cal. Frame contained pulley arrangement carrying miniature elevator supported on two guy wires. Extending for eight feet at the top were a line of pegs and at bottom of elevator was a flipper that rubbed on the pegs which were in turn connected by contacts with a large electric bell.

Copy invited passersby to "pull the elevator of happiness at the top of the town and win a free ticket." A pull on the rope brought the elevator down on the line of the pegs and if it stopped on the contacts would ring the bell rewarding the rope puller with a guest ticket. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Building Banner

Sears, Roebuck cooperated with Bert Leighton, Grand, Lancaster, Pa., for his "Top of the Town" date, hanging giant banner on the side of the store building carrying picture title. Sears also devoted special window to radio tieups. Bert also arranged a "Top of the Town" revue at largest night club plugging film's song hits.

Float Wins

With the inauguration of baseball season in Henderson, Ky., city declared a holiday with parade put on to celebrate the occasion. Manager Leon Pickle at the Kraver Theatre was invited to take part in the celebration and he claims that while the theatre float he entered was entered so that the house would be represented, the display was considered good enough to take down one of the prizes.

Burhorn, Binstock Win Quigley Plaques for May

Two new names are added to the list of Quigley Award plaque winners as the judges for May vote the Silver to John Burhorn, Gayety Theatre, Chicago, and the Bronze to Paul Binstock, Republic, Brooklyn, N. Y. Burhorn is the latest of the Indiana-Illinois circuit theatremen to enter the charmed circle, winning on "You Only Live Once"; and Binstock's campaign on "Romeo and Juliet" makes him the first Randforce circuit manager to win plaque honors; and their success is further distinguished by the fact that these are both subsequent-run houses. Both winners have been mentioned before in the Honorable listings. For May, two First Mentions and eighteen Honorables were given, as detailed below.

First Mentions

HERMANN E. FLYNN, Adv. Mgr., and MEL LAWTON, Prince Edward, Sydney, Australia. "Champagne Waltz"

GEORGE LIMERICK, Manager, Yale, Cleburne, Tex. "Romeo and Juliet"

Honorable Mentions

HOWARD BURKHARDT, Manager, Loew's State, Providence, R. I. "A Star Is Born"

LEW CHATHAM, Manager, Sooner, Norman, Okla. "Romeo and Juliet"

ERNEST E. CRABTREE, City Manager, Fischer, Danville, Ill. "Maytime"

SID DANNENBERG, Adv. Mgr., and ED MILLER, Manager, Hippodrome, Cleveland, Ohio. "Prince and Pauper"

GEORGE A. DOWDLE, Manager, Luna, Deming, N. M. "Plainsman"

TANO FAMA, Manager, State, Dunedin, N. Z. "Champagne Waltz"

LOUIS FISHKIN, Manager, Commodore, Brooklyn, N. Y. "Seventh Heaven"

CHARLES GIBSON, Manager, Gibson, Greenville, Mich. "Wake Up and Live"

LEN GROTTE, Manager, Loew's Prospect, Flushing, L. I., N. Y. "Romeo and Juliet"

LLOYD A. HELDMAN, Manager, Burns, Newport, Va. "Shall We Dance?"

JACK NELSON, Manager, Capitol, North Bay, Canada. "Silent Barriers"

LES POLLOCK, Manager, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y. "A Star Is Born"

JACK PURVES, Manager, Tivoli, Hamilton, Canada. "Top of Town"

MORRIS ROSENTHAL, Manager, Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn. "Hit Parade"

CHARLES SCHLAIFER, Publicist, United Artists, San Francisco, Cal. "A Star Is Born"

W. CLYDE SMITH, Manager, Paramount, Hot Springs, Ark. "Shall We Dance?"

JOE STRIBLING, Manager, Kiowa, Hobart, Okla. "Waikiki Wedding"

E. ALLAN TONG, Manager, Regent, Hastings, N. Z. "General Died at Dawn"

Newcomers are again in the majority among the First and Honorable Mentions, and the month was marked by a new record in the number of entries received in May during the life of the Quigley Awards competitions.

Correction

In the ad layout issue of June 5, the "I give up—A Star is Born" ad was erroneously credited to Russ Bovim instead of Ed Levine of Bill Hollander's B & K ad department. Bovim was represented by the display on the same picture at Loew's Ohio, Columbus, his ad taking the form of a mortised halftone showing the crowds in front of the theatre.

Lebreton Sells "Waltz"

Botwick Reports Two Ace Contests

Obtaining his usual fine cooperation from the local papers, Harry Botwick reports a raft of publicity on two contests with "King and Chorus Girl" and "Waikiki Wedding." On the Warner picture, Botwick tied in on the current puzzle craze to aid his date and also the paper's want ad page, the idea worked as follows:

The daily's artist made sketches of five scene stills from the picture, the sketches being run one a day on the classified page in a special box under which was placed a coupon and the rules. Dialogue was included in "balloons" to aid entrants in solving the puzzles and the answers of course had to do with the picture. The paper cooperated further with other publicity calling attention to the contest which in all ran 11 days.

For "Waikiki Wedding," Harry arranged a "Tall Tales" contest based on the Bob Burns syndicated feature running locally in the cooperating sheet with prizes for the best yarns in the Burns manner. Botwick also hooked in the date with tiein ads across the bottom of the Burns column and obtained further publicity and photo with a theatre party to the paper's boy carriers where the guests were also given bazookas.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Educator Groups Invited To "Tomorrow" Screenings

For the opening of "Make Way for Tomorrow" at the New York Criterion, publicist Phil Lauffer mailed special invitation card to selected list of teachers, business men, ministers, etc. Recipient's card carried their names on the back so that they could be addressed later for comment on the picture.

Preview screenings were held for Women's Clubs and educator groups, Postal Telegraph delivered single sheet dodgers with wires two days ahead of opening and dodgers were also handed out at theatre and mailed to selected lists.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Local Girl Named Juliet For Opening of That Date

J. E. Alford, State Theatre, New Orleans, with MGM exploiteer Walt Dunn for "Romeo and Juliet" selected a local girl who bore a close resemblance to Norma Shearer and publicized the stunt in the McComb Daily Enterprise and was the honored guest at the theatre in a pre-release showing of the picture.

Another of this team's stunts was the rechristening of a local street to "Romeo and Juliet" with a follow-up newspaper publicity article offering tickets to the first 20 couples meeting on that renamed thoroughfare.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Blake's "Waltz" Lobby

Ed Blake, Metro Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. constructed an attractive lobby display for "Champagne Waltz." Shadowbox effect was used with cutout figures of Fred MacMurray, Gladys Swarthout and Yolanda and Valez in dancing position. Motor driven from behind, the cutout figures moved.

WARNER WASHINGTON ZONE ADS

The newspaper displays reproduced on this page are credited to Frank LaFalce, advertising and publicity director for the Warner Washington zone theatres, another in the series of Round Table pages confined to the work of individual admen. To be noted in LaFalce's work is the general absence of heavy reverses and discreet use of light bendays in backgrounds and borders. Attention is also called to the theatre slugs below with inclusion of ingenious cool copy.

IN COURTS

Harmon-Ising Sued On Shorts by Metro

MGM Distributing Corporation filed suit last Thursday in Los Angeles for declaratory relief against Harmon-Ising Pictures, Inc., asking the court to interpret the cartoon production contract under which the distributor alleges that Harmon-Ising owes 10 more cartoons up until the end of this season. MGM also asks abrogation of the contract.

The supreme court action alleges that Hugh Harmon, Gordon Wilson and Rudolph Ising, also defendants, discharged a bookkeeper, who, under the terms of the contract, must be approved by MGM. It is also asserted that the cost of the cartoons, which MGM paid in addition to the $200 weekly each to Harmon, Wilson and Ising, have run as high as $20,000 despite the contract stipulation that the maximum cost per short should be $12,500. The suit declares that the contract calls for from 13 to 18 short subjects yearly and that MGM asked for 18 yearly for the last two years, but did not receive them.

Right to Sue Warners Over "Chain Gang" Upheld

The Georgia Court of Appeals at Atlanta this week upheld the right of Prison Commissioner Vivien Stanley to sue Warners and others for $100,000 libel damages arising from "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang." The court ruled the picture advertised as based on "I Am a Fugitive from a Georgia Chain Gang," and hence is linked with the book. Mr. Stanley is thought to have a libel case in the statement made in the book wherein the author claims the commission transferred him from one prison camp to another for refusing to pay a bribe.

Messner Must Testify

Federal Judge Murray Hulbert in New York Monday ordered Julian Messner, president of the Ray Long and R. R. Smith Corporation, to answer some questions before trial in connection with a suit against Twentieth Century-Fox and Irvin S. Cobb for alleged infringement of copyright on two Cobb stories published by the plaintiff, "Down Yonder with Judge Priest and Irvin S. Cobb" and "Bre'er Rabbit" in the picture "Judge Priest."

Columbia Case Postponed

The case of United Theatres against Columbia Pictures in which the circuit sought to restrain the distributor from releasing "Theodora Goes Wild" to other than United houses has been postponed until June 24 at New Orleans. The postponement was at Columbia's request, allowing additional time for disposition.

Delay Moskowitz Quiz

Examination of Charles C. Moskowitz, Loew executive, by attorneys for the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York in connection with a suit on the circuit's split week policy, scheduled for this week, has been postponed until July 15. The request for the delay was made by the counsel for the plaintiffs.

No Changes in Poli Theatres

No changes in the management or operation of the Poli circuit in New England are expected following the death of S. Z. Poli, founder of the circuit. Mr. Poli died at his home near New Haven recently.

Loew's has been operating the theatres for the past two years. The circuit owns a 50 per cent interest in the houses with N. L. Nathanson, president of Famous Players Canadian, holding a 25 per cent interest, and Alfred C. Bluementhal also owning a 25 per cent.

At the time of his death, Mr. Poli held a large block of five per cent bonds in the circuit bearing his name. When the circuit was reorganized Loew's loaned $600,000 to pay for the expenses for rehabilitation. This money has not been paid back, but the circuit draws interest when due. In addition, Loew's spent about $300,000 for alterations.

Since the management changed to Loew's hands, every unit is reported showing a profit. In two instances houses had been in the red side of the ledger for 15 years.

Mr. Poli had not been active in the operation of the circuit since he sold to Fox New England Theatres several years ago.

Columbia Asks Dismissal

Columbia Pictures Corporation of California, Screen Classics and Columbia Pictures petitioned the United States district court in New York this week to dismiss the complaint filed against them by Plain Talk, a magazine, on the ground that it fails to state a cause of action. The complaint charges infringement of the plaintiff's copyrighted story, "Norton the First, Emperor of America," which it claims was made into a picture of the same name. A permanent injunction, accounting of profits and $50 damages for each exhibition of the film are asked.

Dancers' Suit Settled

The suit of Maria Louisa Henrick Reachi of the dance team of Ramon and Rosita against Warner Brothers Pictures was settled out of court, a stipulation filed with the United States district court at New York this week showed. The plaintiff charged that the team of Ramon and Rosita were billed in "Golddiggers of 1935," but another dance team appeared. A permanent injunction and an accounting of profits had been asked.

Defers Play Suit Ruling

Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum this week referred the motion made by RKO Radio Pictures to dismiss the suit of Samuel Shipman and Clara Lipman to Federal Judge John M. Woolsey for a hearing on June 26. The complaint charges infringement of the plaintiff's play, "Depend on the Woman," in the Radio picture, "I Dream Too Much." An injunction and an accounting of profits is asked.

Jacob Mack

Jacob Mack, 72, father of Irving Mack, Chicago film man, died Sunday after a prolonged illness. Funeral services were held Tuesday.

OBITUARIES

Harry M. Dodd, Manager For Lucas-Jenkins, Passes

Captain Harry Melville Dodd, vice-president and manager of the Lucas-Jenkins houses in Savannah, Ga., a city alderman and a former sports editor on the Morning News there, died Sunday morning in a local hospital after a critical illness of some weeks. He was born in Washington, D. C., April 24, 1889.

Mr. Dodd has been vice-president for several years of Savannah Theatres, Inc., coming back to Savannah in 1933. Prior to that he had lived a number of years in Tampa, Fla., where he was interested in a large automobile business in which Arthur Lucas also had an interest.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary Smith Dodd, and five children, four daughters, Patricia, Muriel, Cornelia and Sally Dodd, and one son, Harry M. Dodd, Jr.

Malcolm Williams

Funeral services were held in New York last Friday for Malcolm Williams, character actor, who died the day before of heart disease in the Windsor Hotel. Mr. Williams, husband of Florence Reed, last appeared on the New York stage in 1930, when he played in "Purity." In motion pictures, he supported Gary Cooper and Fay Wray in "The First Kiss."

Al Reddick

Al Reddick, 55, superintendent of the RKO Grand theatre at Cincinnati, died Monday of a heart attack. His mother and three sisters and one brother survive.

William H. Thompson

Former United States Senator William H. Thompson, 83, owner of the Empress theatre at Grand Isle, Neb., was buried there last Friday following services attended by hundreds. The Empress is now under lease to William Youngclaus.

Joseph P. Cook

Joseph P. Cook, 60, former operator at the old Broadway theatre at Shelbyville, Ind., died this week at a sanitarium at Whitehaven, Pa. He had made his home at Athens, Pa., since leaving Shelbyville. His widow, one son and one daughter survive.

Mrs. Florence Couthoui

Mrs. Florence Couthoui, theatre ticket broker in Chicago for 35 years, died there last Thursday at the age of 65. She entered the ticket selling business after the death of her husband, and at one time operated 23 agencies. In 1920 she was acquitted of scalping charges. She always insisted that her real business was cigar stands and that ticket selling was merely an accommodation for her customers.

Elmer Kaliebe

Elmer W. Kaliebe, 32, for the past eight years technical engineer in charge of RCA Photophone installations in the Milwaukee, died there Monday. His widow and one son survive.

The Bluebook School

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Bluebook School Question No. 72 was: (A) Why is the phenomenon of voltage drop useful in studying the wiring of amplifiers? (B) What represents good maintenance practice with respect to selecting parts and supplies? (C) Does a magnetic speaker have a field coil? (D) Name four methods of controlling motor speed.

The following made acceptable replies: C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; H. Edwards; C. Oldham; W. C. Brown; L. Cimikoski; W. Limmroth; J. R. Prater; T. F. Bochert; C. L. Loft; L. F. Hayes; W. H. Edmonds; C. Lonie; C. Champney; J. A. Zachritz; O. H. Schmidt; H. B. Smith; A. L. Cooper; M. and J. Devoy; D. Smith; T. W. Redhouse; P. and L. Felt; D. and W. Porter; H. Bunker; J. H. Morton: T. N. Brown; C. Caldwell; B. and M. Walker; H. T. Randolph; K. N. Alberts; O. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; E. L. Sanford; T. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; M. L. Grahame; W. L. Morehouse; R. S. Welch; S. N. Lockard.

H. Edwards answers Section A concisely—very much so, though in my judgment, rather accurately—as follows:

"Because of the fact that voltage drop is an absolutely accurate indication of current flow as measured in amperes, and with this basic information in hand almost anything may be calculated."

O. H. Schmidt says, "It is useful for the reason that voltage drop values indicate whether or not a particular part, a stage, or for that matter, a complete amplifier is functioning normally or abnormally. It is the way one interprets these values that determines his ability to quickly diagnose the condition of an amplifier and its various parts. If the projectionist has thorough understanding of what these values indicate, then in almost all cases he can quickly trace the path leading to the root of whatever trouble may exist."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 78

(A) What is the best evidence that a commutator is in good condition?

(B) If scale measurements show that brush pull varies, what condition is indicated and how can it be corrected?

(C) How may brush pressure be measured by means of a rubber band?

ROCKEFELLER CENTER NEW YORK

(B) F. H. S. and P. Dalbey answer, "It always is wise to follow the recommendations of manufacturer of any equipment in the selection and purchase of repair parts for that equipment. As 'Dad' has so often told us, while manufacturers of parts for equipments other than the manufacturer of the equipment involved have no interest in the performance of the equipment as a whole, the manufacturer of the equipment itself has much interest and, knowing that one imperfect repair part may operate to reduce the performance of the entire machine, naturally he has a vital interest in supplying only perfect replacement parts. It is not good practice to reduce, or even to take a chance of reducing, the performance of a whole equipment just to secure a single part a little cheaper—or is it 'cheaper' when the story is all told?"

D. Danielson presents another viewpoint, as follows, "A careful record should be kept as to the life, quality or performance, price and dependability of various equipment parts, and of equipments as a whole. New manufacturers' products should be carefully studied and, as opportunity affords the chance, be given a fair test for comparison. The one giving the best service, everything considered, should of course be used until something else superior appears."

(C) C. Oldham says, "Magnetic type speakers as now used consist of a cone that is connected to a small lever at the end of a small armature located between the ends of, but not in contact with a permanent magnet of the horseshoe type. This armature is pivoted at its opposite end so that it can move freely. There is a voice coil but no field coil, and the magnetic field produced by the speech current flowing through these coils aids or opposes the steady field produced by the permanent magnet.

"In operation, when a. c. speech current flows through the coils in such direction as will produce magnetic poles similiar to those of the permanent magnet, it tends to strengthen the field of the permanent magnet, thus supplying added power to move the aforesaid cone in one direction. But when the current reverses, the magnetic field also reverses and tends to oppose the magnetic field of the permanent magnet, with result that, the field being weakened, the cone moves in the opposite direction, thus creating sound waves in the air."

(D) W. C. Brown says, "Four methods of controlling motor speed are (a) by using a synchronous motor, (b) by using a vacuum tube circuit type control, (c) by using a centrifugal governor, (d) by using a tubeless circuit by means of which field current in a shunt motor is varied to increase or decrease speed."

Develops New Timing Device

The AGFA (I. G. Farben concern) has developed a new photographic method for use in judging sporting contests, according to a report from Assistant Commercial Attaches R. M. Stephenson, in Berlin, to the United States Department of Commerce.

Two slow motion cameras are combined to make stereoscopic shots of the events at the goal at the rate of 100 pairs a second. The time is also indicated on the film. By this method, it is possible to fix time differences up to one-thousandth of a second. By a special process, the films can be developed within 10 minutes after taking.

Dubbing Experiment Results Heard

Results of a dubbing test, designed to give sound directors information on the equipment and technique of other studios, were heard in Hollywood the other night. The test was conducted during the last two months by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. One reel of a completed production was dubbed on the equipment in each of the studios.

Studio Under Construction

Construction of a new studio for Industrial Pictures, Inc., has been started at 4925 Cadieux Road, Detroit. The architect is Harry Stanton.

A house warming at the new offices of Mercury Film Laboratory on the 11th floor of 723 7th Avenue, New York City, was held Saturday afternoon.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Vertigre, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

This town of Vertigre is on the west bank of the Vertigre creek. Whether the town gets its name from the creek or the creek gets its name from the town we don't know; we are presuming, however, that the town got its name from the creek, as the creek was there before the town got there.

To get into the town from either direction it would be well to put your car in low gear and to get out it would also be well to step on the gas. We presume the census taker would rate the town at about twelve hundred, all Americans with about ninety per cent of Bohemish ancestry, and Bohemians are good patrons of amusement places and that's why Leonard Jecminek opened the Empress theatre, and it is at the Empress where the amusement loving public gather to see a good show.

Mr. Jecminek is not only a good theatreman but he is also an enthusiastic and ardent reader of the HERALD, and when you combine these two characteristics in one man you have something to write home about.

Farther down the creek, near where it empties into the Missouri river, we found the town of Niobrara. Niobrara is on the east bank of the Niobrara river and not so very far from the south bank of the Missouri (both streams are said to be full of catfish), and Niobrara is about the oldest, if not the oldest, town in north Nebraska. It has a population of about fifteen hundred Niobrara folks, all orderly and sober and pretty generally prosperous, and as a result of this condition W. C. Kroll is enjoying fairly good business at his Koster theatre.

W. C. finds time from his duties at the theatre, the Ford garage and machine shop and filling station to read the HERALD, and this, you will agree, makes W. C. a pretty busy man.

Niobrara is partly surrounded by the Indian reservation, and when W. C. plays a "Western" he can always count on a full house, because "Johnnie-Long-Dog, High-Hawk, Screaming-Eagle and their squaws and papooses and other friends like to see 'em heap-ride-'em-cowboy."

Close to Niobrara is a state park. It is an island in the Niobrara river and comprises something like 300 acres, and it is a fine location for campers and those who like to fish. Being close to Niobrara, where they can find amusement at the Koster theatre, makes this camping place an ideal place to spend a vacation.

We read in the morning paper a statement by some writer that the land is so wet and so soaked with water that the farmers in western Nebraska are unable to get in the fields, and the article winds up by saying that "they are experiencing the worst dust storm in the history of the country." This one ought to go to Ripley's "Believe It or Not" column. If you can believe this, how about this one? While we were fishing in the gulf last winter with J. C. Fanning of Brownsville a dust storm came in from the gulf that was so dense that we couldn't see the shore for the fog. Ask J. C. about this; he will vouch for it. In fact, he will vouch for almost anything.

Then we read another article, presumably by someone connected with that "shelterbelt," asking, "How many trees does it take to make a forest?" This question probably comes from someone at a desk in some alphabetical bureau down in Washington. The next thing we know someone connected with some water conservation project will be inquiring how many drops of water it takes to make an ocean. If it weren't for these "experts" how in the world could this country survive?

But speaking of "shelterbelts." We saw one yesterday that would make a good place for the government to try out its dogs.

The next town we came to was Center. Center is the county seats of Knox county, and the county seat was located there because the voters wouldn't consent to locate the county seat in Bloomfield, Creighton or Niobrara.

When you go to Center look out for the traffic signals and street cars, although there are none there. And as you go into the town a sign board will advise you that it has a population of something like 145 persons. Center has a court house built largely through the assistance of Uncle Sam, although Sam didn't do any of the heavy work on the building.

Then we came to Bazille. Bazille at one time had visions of being the metropolis of the west but now it is but a faint memory in the minds of the oldest inhabitants. About 35 people, including one filling station, constitute the gross population of the city.

Creighton was the next. Creighton is surrounded by a very prosperous country; in fact is surrounded by about as good country as can be found west of Hoboken, and it is here that the factory of the Largen Sound Device and Largen Cooling System is located, and while it might not be proper to say a whole lot about it here, yet we do desire to say that these systems are being used in hundreds of theatres in this country as well as several of the foreign countries. We say this because Fred Largen is an old friend of ours and an old friend of the HERALD.

Clif Largen, his son, operates the Lyric theatre, and when you see Clif he will remind you a whole lot of his Dad, in that neither of them stutter. The Lyric is the gathering place of Creighton's amusement loving populace who have come to know that they are always assured of a comfortable theatre and the best entertainment that Hollywood can furnish.

Then we came home and the next day we got a cold wave from Valley City, North Dakota, and the heavy wind whipped a lot of tomatoes and poll beans until we will probably have to replant them. Doggone the doggone luck anyhow.

Yesterday we saw a fellow from Arkansaw drive down the street with a flea-bitten broncho hitched to a buggy without a top and he drove up near us and stopped. A fellow standing nearby said to us, "I see we have gone back to 'the horse and buggy days,'" and when he tried to go the horse wouldn't budge a step. It reminded us of old Abner Stoner back in Indiana. Ab had a mare that had notions of her own. She was balky and wouldn't budge if she didn't want to, and so Ab decided to trade her off to a neighbor. The neighbor asked him if she was gentle and Ab said she was so gentle that she would stand without hitching, and so the trade was made. In a few days he came back and said, "Say, Ab, that mare is balky; she won't budge a foot if she don't want to," and Ab said, "Did you hitch her?" and the fellow said, "No, I didn't have to," and Ab said, "Well, I guaranteed her to stand without hitching, didn't I." Then Ab grinned and the fellow said, "Say, Ab, you ought to be at the head of the Animal Husbandry Department."

That's all folks, there hain't goin' to be no more.

COCKTAIL HOUR

THE most trite but pointed line of the week's turn of the kaleidoscope has come from Mr. Paul Block, publisher, who every now and then gets so pleased with an editorial he hires space in the New York Times for it. He starts: "America is at a crossroads." That's only the half of it. America is at the double-crossroads. . . . Dr. Robert Redfield, a Chicago scientist, reports discovering a happy village in Guatemala where the inhabitants have never heard of the Dionne Quintuplets, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his flight, The Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield. That reminds us that a lot of London was a long time hearing about that last item. . . . And now the cables have it that that blow-up in Germany about Miss Leni Riefenstahl being non-Aryan and non-acceptable as Herr Hitler's good friend, was, may be, just a frame-up by Paul Goebbels on his own motion. Those fellows will have an argument yet. . . . In New York, celebrating her one hundred and first birthday, Mrs. Henriette Wimpfheimer, attributed her longevity to three meals a day and fresh air, admitting the while that recently a daily glass of champagne has been helpful. We are progressing. The time was when all longevity was due to either Peruna or Duffy's Malt Whiskey. . . . Mr. J. Louis Orton, British authority on stammering, gives us, from shipnews, tidings that King George VI, when speech making has an expert sitting by to keep him from speeding into verbal skids. The usual admonition, delivered in a low tone, overheard recently on the radio, is "take it easy." It would have been nice if some one had said that to Edward at about the right time.

"NEWSREEL" POLICY

THE camps of the commentators are dithering again about the newsreels and social concerns. This time the provocation is found in the fact that Paramount News appears to have photographed a strike riot and then to have decided not to issue the pictures for reasons of policy—according to Mr. Al Richard, editor, because they might foment demonstrations.

A typical expression from the columns of complaint is that the "newsreels are sidestepping their social responsibility."

In the first place there is no occasion for what are called newsreels engaging, as a regular order of business, in making negative of controversial material of any sort.

Secondly, newsreels have no social obligations beyond those of the amusement industry and theatres they are supposed to serve. Newsreels have an obligation, if they are to be purveyed as entertainment in theatres, to be entertaining. They have no obligation to be important, informative. They can successfully present neither one side, both sides, nor the middle of any social condition or issue.

Entertainment is not properly possessed of opinion, as publications may be. The producer of a newsreel is not its publisher and can experience consumer approval or disapproval only through the theatre, which is in fact the publisher.

In the present state of the business of distribution and exhibition there is no possibility of such a selection of audiences as is common to publications of the printed word.

It is unfortunate the word newsreel ever came into existence, because it is not once in a blue moon that film has an opportunity, against wires, radio and type page, actually to deliver news. Meanwhile some entirely competent newspaper men, clinging to the fetishes of their craft, expensively continue the fiction they are in the news business, while contemporaries, without journalistic background, are misled by the practice of their rivals and the misbranding of their product.

The newsreel business has been in notably low estate for some years. It arrived there by reason of a number of adverse forces, including its own mal-adjustment to the consumer's requirements. It is not mere perversity, but indeed reaction in the crucible of performance, which has determined that the newsreel shall be the cheapest short on the market—that fictionalized re-enactments of public events should command higher rentals, and that both should be out-sold, reel by reel, by cartoons of a rodent.

MEANWHILE the newsreels in their social and industrial misfitting are still a part of the institution of the motion picture, and they can bring down upon it the complications and criticisms of the political, social and class wars of the day, to no possible profit to themselves or the screen.

At best the course of the newsreel will ever be difficult. It is not many months ago that leftist youths by demonstrations against the most commonplace of newsreel subjects, including for example some battleship parades, brought pressures enough to take the name of Hearst off the screen and give us that grey neutral title "News of the Day."

The newsreel is part of the show. Ideas can be as dangerous in the news pictures as they are in the popular pabulum of the screen drama.

RADIO ISSUE

GREAT poignancy and considerable acumen are conveyed by a headline "Radio Control Held Hopeless" quoting Mr. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in Motion Picture Daily, on his arrival from the South.

"Radio Control" means, for the purposes of this discussion, relation, or rather lack of relation, between the screen appearances and air performances of motion picture talent.

Mr. Kuykendall has discovered what was always inevitable, that the relations between the art of the motion picture and the industry of radio will be ordained by sheer, gauche, brutal economic determinism.

No one, not even among our geniuses, has yet been found who is willing to starve for the art of the cinema. Further, no one has ever been discovered who would sacrifice a dime for it. That is not at all true of the drama, literature, sculpture, painting. And that in turn is a consequence of the fact that a man can not make a motion picture. It takes a lot of men. Idealism is not a group attribute.

The talent will follow the dollars.

Also the dollars will follow the talent.

This Week

BRITISH quota provisions as set forth in the official draft of a recommended Films Act became of absorbing interest to American producers as additional details of the proposals arrived by cable and mail. The homogeneous character of the international industry was evidenced also by interest in the problems of French exhibitors who are facing depressed receipts and heavy taxes. At home observers were mulling possible long-range implications of a decision by distributors to abandon the Film Boards of Trade as a national organization after 14 years of operation as an important cog. Mr. Samuel Goldwyn's recent predictions anent the future of color, specifically Technicolor, had meaningful echoes. Independent exhibitors mustered their demands for trade practice revision. Unionization of the industry in production, distribution and exhibition proceeded rapidly but without the headline explosions which marked the studio strike. Conventions neared their close as Columbia delegates entrained for the coast and a sales meeting next week.

Census Ends

The Federal Government, closing an office in Philadelphia, announced that in the census of United States business, for which the headquarters were established, a total of 3,000,000 schedules were filed. Reports on the motion picture business were published in MOTION PICTURE HERALD as they were released.

A summary of the census and a review of the findings on the film industry are on page 112.

Expects $5,000,000

Alexander Korda, returning home to London from New York, filled in some of the details of his new agreement to buy United Artists with Samuel Goldwyn from its present owners. The principal disclosure by Mr. Korda was his anticipation of a $5,000,000 yearly return to him from the deal.

Additional aspects of the Korda-Goldwyn agreement appear on page 17.

Abandonment

After 14 years of operation as an important cog in the motion picture industry the Film Boards of Trade will be abandoned July 1st as a national organization. Local boards may continue in New York and Chicago and possibly one or two other exchange centers, but distributing companies have decided to discontinue appropriations for their operation.

The machinery which the boards set up and the causes leading to their decline and final dissolution are recorded on page 18.

Television

Conceding that some progress has been made within the past six months, and that additional developments are in the offing for the next six, the motion picture industry now concludes that television's picture still is too small, the cost too high, the show poor and the patronage meager. The opinion is official, and is based on the organized Hollywood industry's survey of television, as prepared by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Television, however, made an advancement this week, in public headlines, at least, with the signing of an agreement between Radio Corporation of America and the 1939 New York World's Fair, placing television at the fair as "a major attraction."

The Academy's report on television and terms of the RCA-World's Fair contract, appear on page —.

Chromatics

Samuel Goldwyn's announcement that he will concentrate in the future on productions in color—Technicolor—was followed almost immediately by publicity releases from United Artists detailing the plans of other producers, Walter Wanger and David Selznick, as well as other activities in the field.

Ruling on RKO Claims

The latest developments in the RKO reorganization proceedings in New York this week were featured by the statement of O. C. Doering, of counsel to the RKO trustee, that only $21,176,694 of the $55,000,000 total of claims can be allowed by the federal courts, as Special Master George W. Alger said he "would rather be too conservative than too liberal with creditors' money."

Se story on page 14.

Trebled Costs

Production outlays of Hollywood producers in England are seen tripled by the new Quota Law that has been drafted by the British Government, proposing, as it does, a minimum cost clause imposing a $75,000 negative outlay per feature.

The first summarization of the new Act, which already is alarming exhibitors because of its threatening creation of a product shortage, starts on page 12.

Split

The four-day meeting of the Independent Supply Dealers Association at the Medinah Club in Chicago ended Monday with a split between the dealers and the supply manufacturers and the formation of an association by the manufacturers to foster exhibits in the future of their products.

Details of the Chicago meeting, and of the new association, are found in the story on page 103.

Silver Jubilee

Frederick Mercy, Sr., this month rounds out 25 years in exhibition, in Washington's Yakima Valley, and the Chambers of Commerce and citizens and press are paying tribute at banquet table and in newspaper headlines.

Mr. Mercy's progress, from one theatre in 1912 to 15 in 1937, is described on page 106.

Nuisance Tax Fight

Legislative matters pertinent to the motion picture industry attracted attention this week in Washington, where progress was reported by both sides in the fight to modify the administration sponsored Doughton measure extending socalled nuisance taxes for another two years, and in New York City, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Vancouver, B. C.

The story, in which the developments in Washington and throughout the country are discussed, is found on page 73.

Re-echo

A second echo in Washington to Paramount's reorganization was heard this week when the Securities and Exchange Commission presented to Congress another report on its findings in hearings on reorganizations of Paramount and other large corporations. Activities in Paramount's proceedings were cited as typical of those requiring federal legislation to protect reorganizing companies and their stockholders.

At the same time, the SEC published reports of stock transfers in Paramount, Warner Brothers, Columbia and Pathe.

Details of both of this week's SEC activities will be found on page 71.

Strong But Silent

Unionization of the motion picture industry continues in every department but without the headline attention which marked the recent Hollywood studio dispute. Theatre and exchange employees are organized under the banner of the IATSE and conferences on wages and hours are proceeding apace.

Countrywide reports on the situation are assembled in the story on page 16.

Conventions

Columbia, meeting Sunday in Los Angeles, will bring the new season's product list nearly to completion with only Gaumont British remaining on the convention schedule. The total announced for the year so far is 545 features with the Columbia, GB and independent lists expected to swell this figure to nearly 700.

Meetings are reported and plans discussed on page 99.

Defeated

A resolution which would have placed New York City's campaign to return musicians to theatres on a national basis was defeated at the American Federation of Musicians convention which also delayed action on the matter of hours and employment conditions of union members at Hollywood studios.

Details of the convention are reported on page 100.

Quandary in France

Depreciation of admissions and heavy taxes are giving exhibitors in France considerable worry, writes Pierre Autré from Paris. A closer union of the Exhibitors' Syndicate is sought to present a more solid front against adverse conditions.

The report is on page 96.

Pact Unchanged

A recent agreement reached between Will H. Hayes, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and Premier Mussolini will not be affected by a decree published this week in the Official Gazette in Rome. The decree put into effect an increase in the dubbing tax on films imported into Italy and established a new quota for theatres with respect to Italian films.

Mr. Hays' agreement with Premier Mussolini provided for the number of American films to be imported into Italy and the amount of money which American companies could export from Italy. The new decree raises the dubbing tax from 30,000 lire to a range of from 50,000 to 110,000 lire. The quota is one Italian film for every two foreign pictures shown in Italian theatres.

Threats

Independent theatre owners organizations became increasingly vocal in complaints against what they claimed to be unfair trade practices and in threats of reprisal through legislation and other means. Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors announced new plans for furthering trade practice revision by law.

Leaders in the campaign are quoted at length on page 15.

Protests

Action along the chance game front this week was concentrated, for the most part, in New York where the Independent Theatre Owners Association violently protested against the return of the games to the Loew's theatre circuit. Meanwhile, Bank Night distributors prepared to meet in convention in Denver as the games appeared on the way out of Texas theatres as various circuits dropped them in view of the recent court ruling there terming them violations of the state's gambling laws.

Full details of the chance game developments throughout the country this week are found in the story on page 110.

Educational

Theatre owners, ultimately, will benefit from the use of motion pictures in educational work, more than 600 persons were told by A. P. Hollis, director of the National Conference on Visual Education, at the conference's seventh annual meeting this week in Chicago.

Raymond Evans, head of the United States Department of Agriculture division of motion pictures, also informed the delegates that government films should not compete in the entertainment field.

Details of both addresses will be found in a report of the convention appearing on page 84.

Evidence

Paramount's newsreel of the clash between steel strike demonstrators and Chicago city police was subpoenaed by the Senate Post Office Committee and shown privately to the senators in the course of their investigation of the riots.

Facts about the unreleased film will be found on page 73.

Roxy Plan

Twentieth Century-Fox prepared and published details of the plan under which it will assume operation of New York's Roxy theatre, long in the hands of a trustee. Final approval by a Federal court is necessary before the agreement becomes effective.

Legal and financial details are explained on page 98.

Anti-Ascap

Wisconsin followed the lead of five other states in enacting tax legislation which, in effect, will make virtually impossible operations of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers which collects music royalties for its members.

Passage of the law is reported on page 106.

This Week in Pictures

MISS BEVERLY ARNETT, representing 1,500 junior college stage, screen and radio students, presents David O. Selznick, president of Selznick International Pictures, with a gold cup "in recognition of the supreme contribution to motion pictures, 'A Star Is Born'." The cup was the first award of its kind to be made by the undergraduate students.

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, satisfies a lifetime yearning with Billy Rose's costume and properties during a visit to Mr. Rose's show emporium, the Dallas Exposition. The gun positively is not pointed at exhibitors.

Otto Brower (below left), 20th Century-Fox director bound for Africa to film "Stanley and Livingstone," was accompanied on the Normandie by Mrs. William Goetz and her husband, vice-president of the company and executive assistant to Darryl Zanuck. Mr. and Mrs. Goetz, however, will not continue to the Dark Continent.

For Klieg lights and crowds the Broadway premiere of the film, which is based on Eric Maria Remarque's story of post war Germany, equalled the reception accorded any new picture this season. Miss Hampton, a favorite in silent pictures, recently took a screen test under the auspices of Universal.

Nagamasa Kawakita, head of Towa Shoji-Kaisha, distributor of European and American pictures in Japan, arrived in New York this week accompanied by his wife and the Japanese star, Setsuko Hara, who is shown with him. The distributor will show prints of Miss Hara's latest picture, "The New Earth," or "Daughter of the Samurai," to American showmen as a sample of Japanese production designed for international release. About 500 features will be produced in Japan this year, he said, the large number made necessary by extensive use of triple bills.

QUOTA LAW WILL TRIPLE U. S. COSTS IN ENGLAND

Minimum Cost Clause Imposes a $75,000 Negative Outlay, but Without Footage Relief; First Summarization of the New Act

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Reactions already are setting in following the British Government's drafting of a Quota Law restricting motion picture imports into England, and governing the procedure of product from abroad.

Discussions and action undertaken by organized exhibitors are reported on page 74.

Ironically, the severity of the draft that now stands over the government's sponsorship had its beginning when the British film industry admitted its inability to get together on a draft of its own, and called upon the government to make one for it.

The main lines of the new Quota as proposed by the Government were finally indicated to a deputation representative of the three sections of the industry by Oliver Stanley, the recently appointed president of the Board of Trade, last week.

Definite Provisions

Though they formed a joint delegation to the ministry, the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries (producers), the Kinematograph Renters Society (distributors), and the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association (theatre owners) were united only in that single particular. They had reported to Mr. Stanley, at an earlier meeting, their complete inability to arrive at an agreed trade policy in regard to the form of a new Cinematograph Films Act. Admitting this failure to act on the warning of Dr. Leslie Burgin (at that time Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade and now Minister of Transport) to "organize yourselves, or be organized from without," they in effect had asked the Government to select its own solution from the many put before the Statutory Committee headed by Lord Moyne.

Deploring, in his remarks to the delegates, the inability of the trade's various branches to agree among themselves, Mr. Stanley proved that Dr. Burgin's threat correctly had anticipated the intentions of the Government by presenting the deputation with a memorandum stating in very definite terms the main clauses to be incorporated in the new Films Act, which is to be introduced in the House of Commons this year.

He gave the industry representatives ten days in which to consider these proposals and make any suggestion for their amendment, indicating pretty plainly that in the absence of agreement as to such amendment, the Parliamentary measure would closely follow the lines of the draft.

The principal proposals of the new Board of Trade Quota, which supplemented an earlier official announcement that the Quota principle is to be continued for another ten years, are as follows:

(1) The British film Quota under the new Act to begin at a figure of 20 per cent for distributors and 15 per cent for exhibitors and to grow to figures of 30 per cent and 25 per cent in ten years.

The Existing Quota Position is that both distributors and exhibitors are subject to the same Quota (20 per cent) which is a maximum.

The Quota Changes Officially Proposed are: (1) The reintroduction of the principle that the quota should be "stepped up" in favor of exhibitors. This principle was applied in the earlier years of the 1927 Act but theoretically was assumed to be unnecessary as British footage grew.

(2) The establishment of a Quota of 30 per cent instead of 20 per cent as a maximum. This percentage may be further varied under discretionary powers proposed for the Board of Trade, referred to later.

(2) To qualify as a British film for the purposes of distributor's quota, a feature subject (over 3,000 feet) shall have cost, as a minimum, £15,000, or £2 10/0 a foot. When £45,000, or £7 10/0 a foot, is spent on a feature, it shall rank as double for quota.

Existing Position: There is no Cost clause in the present Films Act. Any picture made in the British Empire, subject to the payment of a certain percentage of wage costs to British subjects, is eligible for quota.

Changes Proposed: (1) The institution of a Minimum Cost clause is the most vital change proposed by the Government. It alters the whole basis of British production by or for U. S. companies in England and, by trebling in many instances their financial obligations under quota legislation, varies the economic basis on which the whole of their British operations are conducted. The financial aspect is discussed later.

(2) The principle of modifying quota footage obligations in inverse relation to negative cost is one urged by American distributors in England and would be a new feature of quota legislation.

(3) A separate Shorts Quota, to be introduced, beginning at the figures of 10 per cent for distributors and 5 per cent for exhibitors and rising to a 20:15 per cent figure. No Minimum Cost to be applied to Shorts in the Act but the Board of Trade to have powers to impose such a condition. All shorts but newsreels and advertising films to be eligible for quota.

Existing Position: There is no separate "shorts against shorts" quota, it being permissible to credit the British short or feature footage as coverage for foreign shorts. Various types of interest films are ineligible for quota.

Change Proposed: The main change is the fact that imported shorts must now have coverage of British shorts. British "documentary" shorts (sponsored interest films) will rank for quota.

(4) The administration of the Act to remain in the hands of the Board of Trade, which is to be given powers to modify the quota figure, or other provisions of the Act, in any year. The general position to be reviewed in three years.

Existing Position: The Board of Trade has purely administrative powers.

Changes Proposed: The Board of Trade is now given powers of legislation, including the power to operate the Variable Quota recom-

Bell Proposes U. S. Companies Finance Five British Films

New quota act controversies in England have brought out a number of variations for reciprocity as a solution to British production problems. The latest comes from Charles Bell, consulting engineer to Paramount and other theatre interests in London. He also is chairman of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, and promoter, with S. H. Soskin, of the Amalgamated studio at Elstree.

Mr. Bell proposes that five or six major production organizations in the United States each year should make or finance five British pictures in the £80,000 to £100,000 class ($400,000 to $500,000). On each of these they would guarantee a revenue from the United States of £40,000 ($200,000) or, if they did not distribute the picture, 1,000 first-run bookings.

Thirty pictures of this type, Mr. Bell said, would give the British industry all the assistance it needs. He denounced both the quality test and cost clause as methods of meeting the "quickie" problem, saying no tribunal can estimate entertainment value and that good pictures often are made for less than £15,000, the suggested minimum for quota pictures, and bad ones for much more than that amount.

BRITISH PRODUCERS CLAIM VICTORY

mended by the Moyne Committee. Changes in the incidence of the quota, and in other details, may be made without discussion in the House of Commons.

(5) There will be provision in the Act for ensuring that all of its clauses are respected.

(6) The Advisory Committee appointed under the present Act will be retained, perhaps with modifications in membership.

Existing Position. As regards (5): There are various penalties in the existing Act, for Quota default, etc. The "Moyne" Report proposed to make blind booking and block booking statutory offences.

Change Proposed: None, in the rough draft of the Government's plan. The retention of the Advisory Committee appears to indicate that the official Government Commission proposed by the Moyne Report will not be instituted. There is also no indication of an intention to add to or alter the Booking Restrictions section of the existing Act.

(7) The possibility of the institution of a Reciprocity scheme with the United States is under consideration by the Board of Trade.

This statement is taken to indicate that if a scheme of Optional Reciprocity is agreed between British production interests and U. S. distributors in London the Government will be prepared to embody in the Act provisions whereby purchase of British films for American release might be a set off against American companies' Quota obligations in England. The scheme has already been outlined in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Effect of the New Proposals

The proposals are regarded in the industry as expressing probably all the major changes in the present Act which the Government intends to ask the House of Commons to accept. The desire for a measure as little controversial as possible is believed to have influenced Mr. Stanley to confine his suggestions almost entirely to the Quota clauses of the Act.

There is no indication of an intention to include provision for the maintenance of British control of British companies or to set up machinery to assist British companies to obtain capital, both suggested by the Moyne Committee, and the principle of official government of the industry also appears to have been abandoned. It is not, of course, assured that none of those provisions will appear in the Act but it is unlikely that such admittedly controversial points would not have been put forward for trade comment.

The outstanding features of the new Government plan are, therefore:

Acceptance of the principle of Minimum Cost and the rejection of the alternative Viewing Test as the machinery by which a picture qualifies for quota.

The fact that, in adopting a Cost Clause the Government proposes no relief in the distributors' existing standard footage obligation. It was hoped that adoption of Minimum Cost would have been accompanied by a reduction of standard quota.

Recognition, with the above qualification, of the principle that increased negative cost shall reduce the footage quota obligation.

Institution of a separate Shorts quota.

Acceptance of "Flexibility" through Board of Trade administration.

SMALL UNITS DISCUSS QUOTA PROTESTS

An organized protest against the new quota proposals is being discussed among independent producers and small distributors, recording units and minor studios.

Ken Nyman has issued a call for fusion of all these elements with independent exhibitors for joint action against the cost clause, double quota reciprocity and other features threatening a product shortage and extinction of small interests.

The trade reactions to these suggestions are, broadly, as follows:

Producers as a whole regard them as a victory for their policy, particularly as foreshadowing the disappearance of the £5,000 "quickie." They look to greatly increased expenditure by American companies to provide work for British companies and an increased demand for British floor space.

Those producers who have depended on the low cost of their films to obtain profitable release, directly or indirectly, see some danger in the £15,000 minimum but believe they can remain in business either by increasing the scale of their production or by taking advantage of the fact that "under-minimum" films are valid for exhibitor's quota, though disqualified for distributor's quota, and will be bookable.

Shorts Producers see a great stimulus to effort in this field in the institution of a separate shorts quota.

Distributors are disappointed that, in admitting the justice of reducing the quota footage obligation in proportion to negative cost, the Government has not maintained an arithmetical proportion but has made a 50 per cent concession in footage depend on a 300 per cent, instead of a 200 per cent increase in cost and has established an arbitrary limit to the concession by the £45,000 maximum.

They are still more disturbed about the maintenance of the existing 20 per cent footage obligation with the addition of a cost obligation three or four times greater than the present minimum cost of British films.

Minor distributors, handling American product of second-feature categories, declare they would be put out of business. Their product cannot support the cost of quota coverage on the £15,000 basis.

Exhibitors regard the rejection of their proposal for a Quality (Viewing) Clause in favor of a Minimum Cost clause as a serious threat. They argue that if a Viewing Test is workable in order to render an under-cost film elegible for distributor's quota (as is understood to be proposed) it would be workable to determine whether an "over-minimum" film was in fact usable as entertainment.

The Minimum Cost clause is regarded by exhibitors as of very little value as a guarantee of quality. Skillful bookkeeping is likely, in their view, to cover considerable differences between real and nominal costs, and many see a danger of "quickies" differing chiefly from the old type, in that they will cost the exhibitor more, owing to the fact that the "double quota" provision will be taken advantage of by sufficient distributors to bring about a considerable reduction of available British footage.

It is pointed out that, if American distributors take advantage of the "double-quota" provision by making £45,000 pictures, there may be a reduction of from 30 to 50 British pictures a year. This reduction of distributors' footage is not covered by any reduction of the exhibitors' gootage obligation, in the Government's plans.

tors' footage obligation, in the Government's

Exhibitors are also disappointed at the absence of any provisions for statutory arbitration, as a measure of protection against distributors.

The Financial Angle

While the exhibitors' fears of a shortage of footage appear to have considerable justification, it is a mistake to assume that distributors in fact see quite such opportunities for exploitation as are credited to them by the "left-wingers" of the CEA. They are no more pleased with the Government draft than are exhibitors, and a very short examination of the financial position setup will explain why.

An obligation to handle eight British pictures a year may be taken as a typical minimum demand on a company handling an American output in England. This obligation can be met at present by the acquirement of eight 6,000 feet British films at the price of £1 per negative foot. More has been paid and a good deal less has been paid, but the figure is a fair average. The total annual cost is £48,000, or $240,000.

Under the new Act, with the £15,000 Minimum Cost operating, the same distributor, with an unaltered footage obligation, must spend £120,000, or $600,000.

If he elects to take advantage of the "double quota" concession in respect to all his British films, he will be called upon to make only four films, instead of eight, but they will cost him £180,000, or $900,000.

Now look at the figures as they apply to a major U. S. company, with a British quota obligation of 12 features yearly, or 72,000 negative feet:

Present Outlay:	Cost
Twelve features at $30,000 each	$ 360,000
Future Outlay:
Twelve features at $75,000 each	900,000
or:
Six features at $225,000 each	$1,350,000

Thus a $1,000,000 annual budget for British production may easily be largely exceeded if, as some people expect, the major American companies accept the fact that the acquirement of British pictures at a minimum cost for purely legal purposes is no longer commercially practicable and decide to cover their British quota by pictures definitely made for inclusion in their release schedules for America. It is not likely that the limit of £45,000 would be adhered to on these pictures. A figure of £80,000 has been stated by Joseph Schenck as the lowest at which a picture can be made in England up to American standards. If this figure is accepted the U. C. company with a six-picture British obligation will be called upon to spend $2,400,000 annually in English studios, on the basis of a 20 per cent quota.

It is probable that figures of this kind will be quoted in the representations which the K.R.S. makes to the Board of Trade at the end of the fateful ten days. It may be assumed that the K.R.S., speaking for American distributors, will stress the illogicality of halting the footage-reduction concession at the price limit of £45,000. The whole case for the U. S. companies is that they wish to be able to spend up to $500,000 on a British picture, and to release it throughout the world. Under the present official suggestions they will gain nothing by spending $500,000 that they will not get by spending $225,000; the smaller sum will bring them as much in reduction of quota footage as the larger.

EXHIBITORS DISAPPOINTED BY QUOTA

Additional Overhead

There is another financial angle to the problem. Even at the minimum figure of £15,000 per picture, acquirement of quota cover for an American output entails an additional overhead per American picture of approximately £3,750 (or $18,750). On the "double-quota" basis of operation it rises to £5,500, or $22,000. It is common knowledge that many American programme pictures book to moderate figures in England; such an addition to their British cost would in some cases make their importation commercially not worth while. A limitation of "B" films is therefore one of the obvious expedients which may be forced upon the American companies by the suggested new quota conditions.

This might not distress the Government, in itself, but it would entail a shrinkage of total product, including a reduction of British footage, which would give the exhibitor a very definite grievance, inasmuch as his quota is not computed in relation to the film output but to his own programme length; he is asked for a quota for screen time irrespective of the British footage available to fill it and that footage, due to be reduced in any case in proportion to the distributors' adhesion to a £45,000 picture policy, will be still further reduced if any large amount of American footage is kept out of the market.

Modifications Suggested

Another point urged by exhibitors is that though better class British pictures may be available under the new Act they will not represent footage available to the independent. Instead of buying "quickies" the American companies may buy £15,000 British films from British producers who at present release them through their own organizations. It may pay Alexander Korda, Herbert Wilcox and John Maxwell, whose pictures for the most part are not at present used to cover American imports, to sell some of them to U. S. companies. Such a transaction would represent in practice a reduction of British footage. The product would be largely absorbed by the circuits, and the independent, according to this argument, would to a large extent be restricted to the product of those British companies which continued to make films at less than £15,000 negative cost for exhibitor's quota only.

Outline Determined

It may be assured that all these arguments will be placed before the Board of Trade. It is also a reasonable supposition that they will be urged in the House of Commons, when the new measure is considered. They suggest modifications, perhaps eventually agreed modifications, in a measure the main lines of which are obviously, and apparently irrevocably, settled.

Figures and percentages may be varied but that the British industry in the years 1937-1948 will be governed by a quota based on a minimum cost for British films, and liable to be revised upwards rather than downwards under the Board of Trade's discretionary powers, appears as certain as anything can be in this uncertain industry.

Only $21,176,694 Of Claims Against RKO Allowable

Not more than $21,176,694 of the total of $55,000,000 of creditors' claims which were filed against RKO in the company's reorganization proceedings can be allowed by the federal court, O. C. Doering, of counsel to the RKO trustee, advised Special Master George W. Alger at a hearing on the company's reorganization plan last Thursday.

Mr. Doering's estimate excludes the $9,100,000 Rockefeller Center claim, provision for the settlement of which is made in the reorganization plan. The trustee's attorney said that the claims allowed by the court to date total $6,102,162.

Testimony Completed

The taking of testimony in connection with the plan was completed last Wednesday and the hearing on arguments was begun, with Joseph M. Cohen, an associate accountant for the independent stockholders' protective committee, the first to be heard.

Arguments were resumed Tuesday with creditors' attacks on the settlement of the Rockefeller Center claim against RKO for 500,000 shares of the reorganized company's new common stock. At one point, Mr. Alger asked Timothy N. Pfeiffer, representative of the Rockefeller interests, whether it would be possible to reduce the amount claimed, but Mr. Pfeiffer replied that considerable concessions already had been made.

Carlos Israels, representing unsecured creditors, stated that his group had given approval to the plan as a result of negotiations which effected several amendments to the plan. He indicated that the interest rate of 5½ per cent for the new debentures was still regarded as too high, but that he had been compelled to "take it or leave it."

John Stover, representing Ernest Stirn, a Class A stockholder, charged that conversion of Class A into common stock in 1931 was illegal because a quorum of directors was lacking when the conversion was ordered. He also contended that provisions of the plan would be illegal under the laws of Maryland where the company was incorporated.

Abraham K. Weber, representing common stockholders, said that the Atlas Corporation, proponents of the plan, have failed to establish their case. He said that the last re-valuation of the assets took place in 1932, and that the law requires a more recent valuation, not one based on earning power alone.

Richard C. Hunt, representing $1,118,500 of extended notes and $170,000 of debentures, challenged the assertion by Joseph M. Cohen, attorney for common stockholders, that the common had been reduced to one-fourth its value in 1932, and was now being reduced to one-eighth. Mr. Hunt stated that only one-fifth of the present outstanding common was issued in 1932. He said that the plan was fair to stockholders and that bondholders were being asked to sacrifice one-half per cent in interest, extend the maturity of the notes, and accept stock for their past-due interest.

The final testimony was offered last week by Anthony Belcer, an accountant, who was called by H. C. Rickaby, counsel for Atlas Corporation, the proponent of the RKO reorganization plan. Mr. Belcer testified that the value of RKO's assets was reduced by $24,474,941 by the revaluation undertaken for the company in 1932. Of this amount, he said, $16,372,072 was charged against reserve at the end of the year. Most of the adjustments were made on land valuations, he said. Mr. Belcer declined to make an upward revaluation of RKO's assets on the basis of improved conditions on the grounds that he had insufficient data at his disposal.

In opening arguments on the plan, Mr. Cohen listed a number of changes which the independent stockholders' committee favored. These included a reduction of interest on the new RKO debentures from five and one-half per cent to four and one-half per cent; elimination of the privilege of converting debentures into common stock; the payment of unsecured creditors' claims in preferred stock only, rather than in preferred and common as provided in the plan, and the payment of stockholders on a share-for-share basis, instead of the proposed one-half share of the new common for each share of the old.

In support of this point, Mr. Cohen said that "RKO is in the best financial position it has even been and has twice as much cash on hand than it ever had before."

Calls Provisions Unfair

Mr. Cohen attacked the provisions for settlement of the Rockefeller Center claim as "unfair," and said that the claim should be fought out in court. He said that the proposal to issue 500,000 shares of new RKO common stock to Rockefeller Center in settlement of the claim would give the Center "one-fourth or one-fifth of the entire stock equity," Mr. Cohen challenged earlier opinions that the operations of the Music Hall and Center theatre would "ever be profitable to RKO."

Mr. Alger observed in the course of the hearing that he "would rather be too conservative than too liberal with creditors' money. Too many companies which have been reorganized," he said, "are back in the courts again after a year or two. I won't allow that to happen in this case."

On Wednesday, it was reported that a group of stockholders planned to file suit against officers of RKO who were in office in 1931, charging "malfeasance" in the $11,600,000 debenture issue of the company during that year.

Meanwhile, Federal Judge William H. Bondy signed an order approving the settlement of four rent claims against RKO filed by the Broadway and 47th St. Corporation, Hoblitzelle Investment Company, Hoblitzelle Realty Company and Hoblitzelle Corporation. The claims totaled $9,318,341 and were allowed at a settlement figure of $1,249,998.

ALLIED ACTIVE IN NEW OUTBURST OF TRADE PRACTICE COMPLAINTS

Northwest Unit Names Former Judge as General Counsel; 'Sit-Down' Strike Against Paramount Urged by Ohio Group

Theatre owners' demands for action by distribution companies on trade practices and threats to force reforms reached a crescendo this week in a barrage from a variety of sources.

W. A. Steffes, as president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, announced the engagement by his organization of John P. Devaney, former chief justice of the Minnesota supreme court, as general counsel. Judge Devaney, the announcement said, will also assist in the drive for state and national legislation to bring about trade practice reform.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio invited exhibitor organizations throughout the country to participate in a protest meeting in Washington against the inclusion by Paramount of seven pictures in the 1937-'38 schedule which, it is claimed, were promised for this season.

The ITOA of New York invited exhibitors to submit suggestions for forming a united front against "the unbridled rough riding of the major firms over the supine bodies of exhibitors."

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America admitted that its ten point program was at a standstill for the present but deprecated any resort to legislation.

The position to which Judge Devaney was appointed was created at the Northwest Allied convention early this month. He will also become a member of the executive committee of the organization for which he will act in an advisory capacity.

Mr. Steffes announcement of the judge's engagement said:

"Among Mr. Devaney's other duties will be that of enlisting public aid and sentiment for the passage of the Neely-Pettengill Block Booking Bill as well as assisting in bringing about state and national legislation to drive out some of the unfair trade practices which now exist in the amusement business if negotiations for round table conferences prove of no avail.

"John P. Devaney at the present time is being mentioned quite seriously as a member of the United States supreme court to fill the vacancy created when Judge Van Devanter resigned."

Judge Devaney resigned from the Minnesota supreme court last February to re-enter private practice. He was closely associated with Governor Floyd B. Olson during his terms in office, took an active part in the National Peace Movement, was a director of the American Judicature Society and is first president of the recently organized National Lawyers' Guild.

"Sit-Down" Strike Urged

In view of the announcement, he is expected to take an active part with Mr. Steffes and with Abram F. Myers, general counsel for national Allied, in the organization's fight for trade practice reform.

Exhibitor units throughout the country were invited to join the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in a "sit-down" strike and national "meeting of action and not of protest" against Paramount for inclusion in its new program of seven pictures which the association claims were promised definitely in the 1936-37 printed work sheet. The organization was to hold the meeting in Washington next Tuesday "under the eyes of Congress."

PARAMOUNT WILL TEST THEATRE DIVORCE LAW

Paramount is planning to seek an injunction to restrain the State of North Dakota from enforcing its theatre circuit divorce law, according to Austin Keough, vice-president and secretary.

The action will test the constitutionality of the law as the application for the injunction will be based on the contention that the measure violates the due process clause and other provisions of the federal constitution.

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio organization, sent the following telegram to 24 exhibitor organizations:

"By including in its 1938 program the seven presumably outstanding features definitely promised in their 1937 work sheet, Paramount has shown its utter disregard of the moral rights of thousands of its customers.

"A sit down strike against Paramount by 4,000 independent theatres holding 1937 contracts unless it meets its moral obligations to deliver these pictures would mean a loss to it of between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000, which fact would be of interest to Paramount's directors and stockholders who yesterday approved a new salary contract with Adolph Zukor for $500,000 yearly.

"With the selling season for Paramount about to start, the time is opportune for decisive action and I urgently recommend that your organization, irrespective of national affiliation, be represented at a meeting of action and not of protest to be held at the Washington Hotel, Washington, under the eyes of Congress, Thursday, June 24th."

The date was later changed to Tuesday, June 29th at the Carlton Hotel.

Allied Theatre of the Northwest, the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association and the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Philadelphia early this week indicated they would send representatives to the meeting at which national officers of Allied were also expected to be present.

The Independent Theatre Owners of New York this week invited exhibitors to suggest a means of combating what is regarded as the "rough riding" of the distributors. A statement issued by the organization and published in its official bulletin, the Independent, said in part:

"The major firms do not want cooperation. In fact, they seem callous to opposition. Maybe they feel their position is so strong that nothing can harm them. Not even the fact that today the Stock Exchange is regulated, that Andrew Mellon will have to defend himself and his aluminum trust against the United States Government.

"Possibly the major firms are so conceited, have so many millions put away that no one knows about, that they are bigger than the Stock Exchange and Andrew Mellon. To watch their activities, one would think so. Certainly, no ordinary industry would react as this one has. With all the legislation on tap, all the investigations now pending and law suits that are filling court calendars, the obvious thought would be that the majors would welcome the cooperation of the exhibitors so that these pitfalls and headaches might be done away with and the business can go serenely forward.

"Even the MPTOA program, set forth by their own man, Ed Kuykendall, was rejected. Will Hays asked for self-regulation and then promptly forgot to do anything about it.

"Nothing the government can do can be any worse than the policies laid down by the majors. With prosperity back, exhibitors are now asked to pay ncreased rentals and higher percentages.

"With prosperity back, the majors are expanding their theatre holdings.

"With prosperity back, nothing is being done about double features.

"With prosperity back, nothing is being done about the encroachment of radio. . . .

"Something must be done and can only be done by cooperation. Your thoughts, comments and suggestions as to methods of procedure are important and from them will be formulated a program—one of authority and power because it will be an expression of exhibitors throughout the nation. . . ."

MPTOA Hits Divorce Bills

In a statement issued this week Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, said that negotiations regarding the organization's ten-point trade practice program are at a standstill at present, but added that some benefits have resulted and that the association would continue its campaign.

Criticizing the tactics of resorting to legislation for remedies, Mr. Kuydendall said:

"Regarding the theatre divorce activities sponsored by another organization, we have no faith in this being of any benefit to anyone concerned, as it only tends to invite state and federal regulation and interference in this business.

"Regarding the special graduated tax on chain operation, this also is not only unamerican and discriminatory but will boomerang on its sponsors. The special tax will not put the chain theatres out of business and will only tend to make state law making bodies conscious of the possibilities in increased taxes for all theatres. Efforts to have enacted various kinds of spite legislation will not be productive of any good, as I can see it, to those whom the sponsors pretend to represent. To prove this, you only have to check back over a few years to realize that nothing constructive has come out of it. Contrary to popular opinion at this time the Louisiana chain store bill does not involve theatres. The North Dakota theatre divorcement bill which was enacted into a law in that state has a long way to travel through the courts, before it becomes actually in force.

"If out of this session of Congress there comes a bill to investigate the motion picture industry, though we do not feel it necessary to have an investigation, MPTOA will participate in a constructive manner in order that the real theatre investments will have a voice in whatever legislation is enacted, if there be any."

Andrew L. Stone has resigned as president of Film Products, Inc., to join Paramount as producer and director. Jack Rosenfeldt will be operating head of the company with offices in New York City.

The Cinema Equipment Company with offices at 358 West 44th Street, New York, has been formed by Manny Gottlieb and David Meltz.

FILM INDUSTRY UNIONS START TO CONSOLIDATE GAINS IN ALL FIELDS

First Strike Threat Heard in Exchange Unionization; IATSE Organizes Theatre Employees in a Dozen Cities in the East

With Hollywood studio employees back at work and discussing an amicable settlement of jurisdictional disputes, the unionization campaign continued to make news less loud in headlines but more lasting in effect in its extension to every branch of the motion picture industry. The formation of collective bargaining groups is now well under way in theatres and exchanges and has been begun by press agents and office employees.

The first threat of trouble in the drive being conducted among film exchange employees by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees was averted when distributing companies agreed to accede to the wage demands of the Exchange Employees Union in Oklahoma City. The union had threatened to strike.

Negotiations between a distributors' committee and exchange union representatives from the east and south continued in New York.

Theatre employees have been organized under the IATSE banner in a dozen cities of the east and more are reported daily.

Scenic artists, painters and makeup men conferred with Pat Casey, negotiator for the producers on wage and hour regulations under the agreement which ended the strike last week.

The Screen Actors' Guild announced the opening of an eastern office to administer its new producer agreement in that territory, and the Screen Playwrights conferred with the Labor Relations Board in an effort to secure a collective bargaining designation.

A strike of 76 exchange employees in Oklahoma City was averted by the accession of distributors to the union's demands, according to George Snodgrass, president, who said that George Krause, assistant to George Browne, president of the IATSE, had wired him assurance that the union terms would be met.

The contract provides for a minimum weekly salary of $40 for shipping clerks, $35 for poster clerks, $25 for inspectors and $22.50 for assistant inspectors. Seven local exchanges were included in the contract drawn between Mr. Krause and the heads of the distributing companies in New York. They are Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, Universal, Columbia, RKO and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Republic has also agreed to sign, Mr. Snodgrass said.

Agreements for setting up basic wage and hour scales were concluded at meetings in New York for Kansas City, Indianapolis and Charlotte in addition to the Oklahoma City settlement last week, bringing the total number of exchange centers which have contracts to 14.

Newly organized theatre employees' unions in Kansas City have submitted an agreement to theatre operators and have signed a contract with managers in St. Louis. IATSE charters were granted to organizations of ushers and doormen in Boston, Bridgeport, Chicago, Lincoln, New Haven, Providence, San Francisco, Seattle and Wilmington but no action has been taken in these cities to secure agreements.

EQUITY AND GUILD TO ORGANIZE RADIO

Statements from Actors' Equity and from its affiliate, the Screen Actors' Guild, this week indicated that an attempt will be made to organize radio talent under the direction of the Guild.

In an editorial in its official bulletin Equity listed the organization of the radio field as an immediate need and predicted that the task would not be easy. Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, attended a meeting of the Equity council this week at which radio plans were discussed.

The Guild already has promised to cooperate in Hollywood, where most of the talent engaged in radio work are Guild members. Indications are that any film player appearing on the air will have to become either a member of Equity or of the proposed radio affiliate and that a minimum compensation rule will eliminate the use of guest stars without pay.

Substantial increases in wages, decreases in working hours, a closed shop and vacations with pay were asked by the Kansas City union, Local 24. The agreement, signed by Felix B. Snow, representative of the IATSE, was sent to first run theatres and to subsequent houses which employ more than two or three. The scales were $25 a week for cashiers; front doormen, $23.50; chief of staff, $27.50; assistant chief of staff, $24; ushers and usherettes, $20; back doorman, $20; superintendent of cleaners and porters, $28; assistant superintendent, $221, and porters, cleaners and maids, $20.

Theatrical Employees Local 2 in St. Louis secured an agreement with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners for a scale for Class A houses ranging from $15 to $22, with $22 for the chief of service, $18 for ticket sellers and takers, $16 for ushers and $15 for porters. The agreement affects about 90 theatres and some 400 workers.

Operators Join CIO

United Motion Picture Operators, Kansas City projectionists' union, last week affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization following a conference between Neal Beam, regional CIO organizer, and Michael D. Konomos, attorney, and Harold Hay, business agent, for the union.

The Empire State Motion Picture Operators' Union, claiming to be the only American Federation of Labor union in Brooklyn, this week applied to the New York supreme court for an injunction to restrain the Quinral Corporation, operators of a Brooklyn theatre, from discharging union members. Alexander Kindler, president of the union, said in an affidavit that Quinral entered into a contract with the union in 1932 to hire its members. The affidavit further charged that two union operators were discharged last February without cause. The corporation, in reply, charged that the union had made no effort to arbitrate differences which were the causes of the dismissal.

Studio Employees Confer

Committees of scenic artists, painters and makeup men's locals of the Painters' Brotherhood met this week with Mr. Casey to present their demands for wage scales and working conditions in accordance with the agreement reached when the strike was ended.

The painters asked a dollar daily increase; the scenic artists desired no change from their present $2.25 hourly wage but asked a 36 hour week, and the makeup men demanded pay for overtime and a 40 hour week.

A closed shop for talent employed in eastern studios on either theatrical or commercial productions will be placed in effect August 1st by the Screen Actors' Guild, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, said this week in New York. The Guild's eastern office will be located at 11 West 42d Street, New York. The organization's dues will be raised from $15 a year to the Actors' Equity level of $18 a year after August 1st, Mr. Thomson said. The initiation fee will remain at $25.

Studio publicity men will form their own autonomous union, to be known as the Screen Publicists' Guild, and will not seek any affiliation with the American Newspaper Guild, Don Roberts, temporary chairman of the new organization, said this week.

Office Workers' Union Started

Office employees of the motion picture industry have been invited to attend a meeting of the Motion Picture Division of Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants Union next Monday night in New York. The organization is affiliated with the United Office and Professional Workers of America and the CIO.

Michalove Attached To Zanuck Staff

Dan Michalove, former executive with Twentieth Century-Fox and with Warner Brothers, has joined the production staff of Darryl F. Zanuck at the Beverly Hills studio. Mr. Michalove, who was born in Asheville, N. C., started in the theatre business in the south and became general manager for Southern Enterprises. Later, he moved to New York to hold a similar post with Universal Chain Theatres and subsequently became general manager for Warner Brothers. He gave up this position to become executive assistant to Harry Warner and in March, 1933, resigned to assume operation of Publix Enterprises, Inc. He joined Fox Film Corporation in September, 1933, and became assistant to Sidney R. Kent, president.

Pacent Suit Continues

A motion to dismiss a $6,000,000 anti-trust suit brought against American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., by Stanley K. Oldden as assignee of the Pacent Electrical Company was denied in New York last Saturday by Federal Judge John Knox. The complaint was attacked on the ground that it failed to state a cause of action. The defendants were given 20 days to file answers.

KORDA SAYS HE EXPECTS TO GET $5,000,000 YEARLY FROM U.A. DEAL

Fills in Some Details of His Partnership Arrangement with Goldwyn on Arriving in London; Includes a Talent Interchange

Alexander Korda, the British producer who traveled to New York to demand a better deal from United Artists for the distribution of his product, and who returned to London virtually owning half of the company, alighted from the S. S. Queen Mary in England to voice his anticipation of a $5,000,000 yearly income from the deal.

Mr. Korda, returning with Murray Silverstone, British chief of United Artists, filled in some details of the agreement whereby his London Film Productions becomes fifty-fifty partners with Mr. Goldwyn in United Artists.

The deal, he declared, was in "an advanced stage", and would be completed within a few weeks, by the transfer of the whole of the ordinary share capital to the new partnership, at an approximate cost of £1,200,000 ($6,000,000). There would be no public share issue in England.

Mr. Korda declared that, partly as the result of London Film in future receiving one-half instead of one-fifth of the total profits of United Artists and partly as the result of more advantageous distribution terms, he expected that £1,000,000 ($5,000,000) yearly would be received from the United States and that London Films' total revenue from abroad would be £2,000,000 ($10,000,000).

Increasing Output

These figures would be earned, he said, on his increased output at Denham Studio, of 24 to 28 pictures in a full year and 14 in 1937, by London Films and associated producers. Some pictures would be made at Denham for British Empire distribution only. The total Denham Studio budget would be in the neighborhood of £2,000,000, ($10,000,000).

A full interchange of stars and directors with Hollywood will bring Mr. Goldwyn to Denham to shoot some color scenes for "The Goldwyn Follies," and Walter Wanger will produce a picture there with Sylvia Sidney and Charles Boyer. Charles Chaplin is also considering making "Regency" at Denham, after the production in Hollywood of a Paulette Goddard picture for U. A. release. That William Wyler and Lewis Milestone may be loaned to London Films are other possibilities and it was hinted that, at the end of his Columbia contract, Frank Capra might make a picture at Denham.

Large Scale Outlays

Saying that Hollywood was enjoying a wave of prosperity and that more than ever was being spent on negatives, with £200,000 ($1,000,000) the bottom cost of a big picture, Mr. Korda inferred that a similar scale of expenditure at Denham was justified by the receipts of pictures already distributed. "The Scarlet Pimpernel," grossed £420,000 ($2,100,000), and £270,000 ($1,350,000) of this was obtained out of England. Every successful British picture made it easier for the next one, he declared.

Mr. Korda is discussing an extension of color production at Denham with Dr. Herbert Kalmus, of Technicolor, during the present week, but is not in favor of an immediate all-color policy. Definitely to be made in Technicolor are "Tempest Within," with Merle Oberon, "Mutiny in the Mountains," the second starring feature of Sabu, the Indian boy of "Elephant Boy," and "Bicycle Built for Two," starring Edna Best and Ralph Richardson. The immediate production schedule at Denham includes, in black and white, "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," which will introduce Barry K. Barnes, "The Four Feathers" with Robert Donat and "The Playboy," with Jack Hulbert and Patricia Ellis; the latter also arrived on the "Queen Mary." All Denham floors are now declared to be occupied.

Meeting "British Interests"

Definite assurance that Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn would purchase United Artists from its remaining founders, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, was made by Mr. Korda and by David Rose, vice-president of Goldwyn, Inc., as they sailed from New York last week. Both, however, continued to refuse disclosure of the source of the purchase money, which is understood to require $3,000,000 from each of the buying partners.

One of Mr. Korda's immediate missions on his return to London, however, is a discussion of the deal and its financial aspects with "English interests."

No Personnel Change

When United Artists passes to the Korda-Goldwyn interests, said Mr. Korda, it will continue to function virtually under the same working executive personnel as at present, with George Schaefer, now vice president in charge of sales, remaining in charge of American distribution activities, and Murray Silverstone, now foreign sales executive, assuming full charge abroad.

WARNERS TO PRODUCE PLAYS IN LONDON

Production of at least six plays in London during the season starting in September will be undertaken by Warner Brothers with the cooperation of O'Bryen, Linnitt & Dunfee, London producing firm. It is planned to make screen versions of the plays after they appear in London.

Final details for the program will be made by Jacob Wilk, head of the Warner story department, who will sail for England within the next week. Later, Warner Brothers plans to send a business manager and production expert to London to handle the presentation of the plays.

Munro Homeward Bound on Deal

Charles Munro, managing director of Hoyts, in Australia, arrived in Hollywood this week from New York and Chicago, en route to Sydney, after several months in this country conferring with Twentieth Century-Fox home office executives on the General Theatres deal.

Accompanying Mr. Munro is Kenneth Asperey, counsel for Greater Union Theatres, Hoyts' partner in General Theatres. The two men are expected to continue conferences to the ultimate disposition of General Theatres. They were to sail Wednesday on the Mariposa with a group of sales executives from practically every major company.

Among those who will be on the boat will be S. S. Crick, managing director for Twentieth Century-Fox; Douglas Lotherington, RKO; Cecil Mason, Columbia, who is not staying on for the company's annual sales meeting Sunday in Hollywood; Herc McIntyre, Universal; Charles Chavel, independent producer affiliated with Universal.

Although no official word is available, it is reported that the present five-year agreement between the two important theatre circuits in Australia will be continued for at least 10 years. The understanding is that Twentieth Century-Fox is anxious to have the arrangement extended for 20 years, but will accept a compromise of half the period expected.

Lee Stations Setting Production on Coast

Following the current trend of radio to Hollywood, it has been confirmed in New York this week that the Don Lee Broadcasting System, an important link in the Mutual Broadcasting Company network, will concentrate all future coast production of the network in Hollywood and Los Angeles.

In a telegram to the Mutual offices in New York, Lewis Allen Weiss, general manager of Don Lee, said that in line with the general production expansion of the combined networks scheduled for the fall, he was currently negotiating for new headquarters in Hollywood for the combined chains, with KHJ as the western key station.

It is understood that several of the chain's more important commercial programs, currently being broadcast from New York, will be moved to the coast as soon as quarters can be obtained in Hollywood.

Drops Garbo Action

Greta Garbo has been relieved of the necessity of appearing in court in Los Angeles next Monday in the $10,500 suit filed against her by H. Fitzpatrick, assignee for David Shratter, as the suit was dismissed this week on the motion of attorneys for Mr. Fitzpatrick, who indicated the time for bringing the action had expired.

DISTRIBUTORS' REFUSAL OF SUPPORT BRINGS THE END TO FILM BOARDS

Majors' Indifference to the Existence of 22-Year-Old Boards of Trade Sound the Deathknell of All But Three Distributors' Film Boards of Trade, an adjunct of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and important for a decade and a half as the principal key-city machinery by which exchanges conducted their relations on trade problems with exhibitors in the field, cease operations, finally, on July 1st, apparently having outlived their usefulness.

. Closing of the New York headquarters, next week will mark the final dissolution of the group as a national organization, distributing companies having refused to continue appropriations for its operation. The field organization, already sharply curtailed, will be limited to entirely local operations in New York, Chicago, and possibly two other centers, but the continuation of even these boards will depend on action by local exchange managers.

The Boards of Trade had their inception in about 1915 in the larger exchange centers as organizations of the managers of the state right exchanges, and about 14 years ago were organized on a national basis, following the developmnet of the affiliated distributing companies, under Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Invalidation by the courts of their credit and arbitration machinery in 1929, the actual beginning of the end, was followed by their curtailment and the dismissal of paid secretaries in all but a few exchange centers.

Since the 1929 decision, the activities of the boards have been continued, even in those cities where the secretaries were dropped, usually by film exchange or film law, individuals interested in the work but were confined chiefly to maintaining contacts with civic and social organizations, combating adverse legislation, furnishing authentic film exchange reports on changes in theatre ownership and on openings and closings of theatres, and supervising fire prevention work in exchanges.

Mr. Pettijohn, who as general counsel for the boards has continued in active charge of their operations, refused to comment on the decision of the companies to discontinue appropriations.

Abandonment of the national organization was seen as having little influence on any future action on the establishment of the conciliation boards requested in the trade practice program proposed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Seven companies agreed to the formation of such boards last winter, but their establishment has been delayed. Under their plan of organization exhibitor organizations and the companies would be equally represented, whereas the Film Boards of Trade membership was confined to exchange managers.

Started as Trade Groups

The Boards of Trade in the larger centers began as trade associations, in several instances as bureaus of the Chambers of Commerce. As early as 1915 such groups were organized in seven or eight cities including New York, Chicago and Detroit. Their membership included the managers of state rights exchanges only.

MAYOR VISITS THEATRE AND THINGS HAPPEN

F. H. LaGuardia. mayor of New York, attended a theatre recently with the result police have been told to eliminate five unfavorable conditions in the midtown theatre district. Mr. LaGuardia objects to:

Horn honking by motorists attempting to go crosstown.

The large number of boys hawking newspapers and magazines.

Activities of peddlers, itinerant venders, beggars and impromptu musicians.

One of the first problems of the boards was that of exhibitors' credit. At the time the practice of paying film rental after the picture had been shown was the source of many abuses. Exhibitors, not satisfied with the box office returns on a film, would refuse to pay the terms originally agreed upon and, on the other hand, bookkeeping systems in many of the exchanges were inefficient.

In 1917, the exchange managers, through the Boards of Trade in those cities where they had been organized, agreed to demand cash in advance on all film rentals. On block contracts a deposit was required which could be applied as payment for the last two pictures shipped under the contract. At the same time arbitration committees were formed by the boards to which disputes over costs or payments were to be submitted by exhibitors, and, later, clauses were inserted in all film contracts binding the exhibitor to submit grievances to these arbitration committees. Exhibitors were represented on the committees and as a sanction to enforce its rulings the boards could shut off an exhibitor's film supply from all the member companies.

Organization of the boards on a national basis with a central headquarters in New York in 1923 supplied a clearing house for complaints from exhibitors which had been increasing with respect to the deposit system on block contracts. Showmen throughout the country complained that the exchanges failed to keep accurate books and that records of the deposits were mislaid or lost. In many cases, they claimed, credit for the deposits was withheld and used as leverage for obtaining new contracts.

Agreement Reached

Concurrently the practice of arbitrating disputes through the Boards of Trade had spread and had been found successful to some degree. Shortly after national organization of the boards it was agreed that the distributors would abandon the deposit system and that both distributors and exhibitors would bind themselves to submit all disputes to the board's arbitration committees.

The following year, again through the agency of the Boards of Trade, the distributors proposed a uniform exhibition contract to end complaints from exhibitors against the almost infinite variety of contracts and the insertion of obscure clauses. After long study of the many points involved a uniform contract was drawn up and adopted as standard by all but two or three of the distributors who later were forced, by pressure from the exhibitors, to adopt the form.

Through correction of these and similar long standing abuses the Boards of Trade grew and by 1925 they had been established in the 31 exchange centers. The branch managers who comprised the membership became accustomed to cooperation among themselves and began to take concerted action in non-competitive matters among themselves and with exhibitor organizations. Locked bookings under which the exchanges refused to sell film to an exhibitor who had overbought until he played out his existing contracts or to those who made a practice of booking two or more films for the same date and then selecting their program became possible through the board machinery.

During 1926 the practice of abrogating exhibition contracts through the fraudulent sale of theatres became prevalent and to check it the boards established committees which required the new owner or operator of a theatre to prove the sale to be a bona fide transaction before he could buy film.

Fire Prevention Effected

Shortly before this period, a series of fires in exchanges and theatres had given rise to a flood of agitation against the use of nitrocellulose film. City and state legislatures threatened the passage and enforcement of laws requiring the more expensive cellulose-acetate film and setting up rigid building standards. The Boards of Trade, to combat this legislation, wrote strict fire prevention rules for exchange operation and set up inspection committees to enforce them. Exchange fires previously attributable to negligence or inefficiency stopped immediately and with the proof that the fire prevention rules put in operation by the boards were sufficient to eliminate the fire hazard propaganda for legislation ceased to have effect.

As the boards began to function under their national organization they undertook other activities. They assumed control of "free-film" accounts through which pictures were supplied to orphanages, prisons and other institutions and supervised the industry's donations to local charities, eliminating through central administration most of the abuses to which these practices were subject. Employment bureaus, also, were set up by each of the boards through which the exchanges could have trained personnel instantly available to fill vacancies.

One of a wave of anti-trust suits which were directed against the industry in 1929 dealt with attempts of the Boards of Trade to enforce arbitration awards. Federal Judge Thomas Thacher, in a decision rendered in the United States district court is New York ruled that the standard arbitration clause in exhibition contracts was illegal. The ruling was supported, on appeal to the United States supreme court, in a decision from Justice James McReynolds which was interpreted as invalidating also the credit operations of the board.

Forced to abandon their activities along these lines the boards' power declined, although distribution executives considered that the habit of discussion of common problems and of cooperation continued to be value. Many who opposed the complete dissolution of the boards advanced the argument that the practice of submitting complaints to arbitration was still effective in preventing a mass of litigation.

In 1932 the major companies curtailed appropriations for the boards and dismissed the paid secretaries in all but the more important centers. Through the activities of the local exchange managers and those who had previously been connected with the boards, however, much of the activity, including the fire prevention work and the compilation of theatre listings, was continued.

Last week's decision to abandon the New York headquarters leaves the future disposition of even these activities in doubt. Indications are that they will be abandoned.

Now it can be told! . . . The story of Queen Victoria and her Prince Consort! . . . For the first time in many years RKO Radio selects a British picture for distribution — AND it's the greatest of all British productions! . . . To quote a film man just back from London: "'Victoria' is by far the most important picture produced in England since 'Henry The Eighth'! . . . The whole trade is excited about it. They believe it will outgross any British picture in history. It is being produced on a tremendous scale by Herbert Wilcox . . . All of the deep human drama in the great Queen's life has been caught in the picture — the attempt to assassinate her, her love for her Consort, the birth of the first Prince of Wales in 100 years — everything — not to forget such pageantry as you've never seen on the screen. Anna Neagle is marvelous as Victoria, and Anton Walbrook perfect as Albert. H. B. Warner and hundreds of others are in the cast. It's as big as they come!"

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Foolproof

Around Hollywood, everyone who has read the 1937-1938 production announcements of the various companies which have held conventions is saying that the forthcoming season promises to deliver more good pictures than has ever before been the case. A lot that looks so foolproof that they cannot help but be good are in the work. Several have been completed.

The second week in June saw at least four pictures started, "Nothing Sacred," "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "The Great Garrick" and "Big City," which, despite the excellent quality of product which the future may bring forth, seem to be of the standard in story content, player assignments and contemplated production class, are indicative of what to expect in the big picture line. Of the 10 films begun, these undoubtedly are the most outstanding.

To play in "Nothing Sacred," which William Wellman is directing, Selznick-International named Carole Lombard, Frederic March, Walter Connolly, Charles Winninger, Margaret Hamilton, A. W. Sweatt, Clarence Wilson, Olin Howland, Dick Rich, Troy Brown and the prize fighters Maxie Rosenbloom and Art Lasky.

Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., some time ago announced that he was going to make and play in "The Adventures of Marco Polo." Months went by and the next word heard of the enterprise was that Samuel Goldwyn had bought and would produce it. He put the production in the work last week. Gary Cooper and the attractive newcomer Sigrid Gurie were assigned to the leading roles. Ernest Truex, previously in shorts, but better known as a legitimate stage player, Verree Teasdale, George Barbier, Robert Greig and H. B. Warner, the younger Lama in "Lost Horizon," are the featured supporting players. John Cromwell is directing.

MGM's "Big City" will present Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer, Eddie Quilan, Regis Toomey, Charley Grapewin, Paul Harvey and Victor Varconi. Frank Borzage is the director.

One of the two starting pictures at Warner Studio is "The Great Garrick." Being directed by James Whale, it will offer Brian Aherne, Olivia de Havilland, Edward Everett Horton, Marie Wilson, Lana Turner and Chester Clute in the principal roles. Second picture is "Submarine 262," in which Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris, Gloria Dickson and Frank McHugh are the leading players. Lloyd Bacon is directing.

Under I. V. Willat's direction Monogram started "The Luck of Roaring Camp." The cast includes Owen Davis, Jr., Joan Woodbury, Charles Brokaw, Forrest Taylor and Sheila Bromley.

Universal's contribution to the new work is "The Lady Fights Back." Irene Hervey, William Lundigan, Willie Best and Ferdinand Munier are the featured names. Milton Carruth is directing.

At Republic "Love Ahoy" started. It will present Weldon Heyburn, Warren Hymer, Jeanne Madden, Dorothy McNulty, J. Carroll Naish, Sid Saylor, Ralph Sanford and Charles Trowbridge. Hamilton MacFadden is directing.

For RKO-Radio release, David Loew started "Fit for a King." Joe E. Brown is starred with Helen Mack, Paul Kelly, Harry Davenport, Halliwell Hobbes, Russell Hicks and Frank Reicher. Edward Sedgwick is directing.

Tenth starting picture is "The Awful Truth," Columbia. Leo McCarey is directing and the cast lists Irenne Dunne, Cary Grant, Wyn Cahoon, Scott Colton, Joyce Compton, Cecil Cunningham and Robert Allen.

Five pictures were completed and because of the death of Jean Harlow, MGM's "Saratoga" was temporarily postponed. However, with Mary Dees, the late star's onetime stand-in selected to complete the role production was resumed.

Republic completed an Adele Buffington story "She Didn't Want a Sheik." It will present Ramon Navarro, Lola Lane, Gene Lockhart, Kathleen Burke, Charlotte Treadway, Stanley Fields, Jamil Hasson, Billy Bevan, Robert Coote and George Sorel. Irving Pichel directed.

"Hell on Ice" (tentative title) completed at Universal. A Trem Carr production, it features John Wayne and Bernadene Hayes, with Shelia Bromley, Charles Brokaw, Billy Burrud, Jane Johns, Virginia Brissac, Hal Nieman and Huntley Gordon. Arthur Lubin directed.

Warner finished "Alcatraz Island." The cast which William McGann directed lists Dick Purcell, Ann Sheridan, Mary McGuire, Doris Lloyd, Ralph Dunn, Edward Keane, John Litel, Gordon Oliver, Addison Randall and George E. Stone.

COLLEGE MUSICALS VOGUE FOR SEASON

Indications of a college musical cycle in Hollywood followed Paramount's announcement that it would produce a sequel to "College Holiday." Twentieth Century-Fox plans to star the Ritz Brothers in "Life Begins in College" and Selznick International is considering a college musical in Technicolor. Selznick has signed John Monks, Jr., and Fred Finklehoffe, authors of the play "Brother Rat" to write an original on college life on which Oscar Serlin will be production aide. The Twentieth Century-Fox film will feature football sequences as in "Pigskin Parade."

At 20th Century-Fox "Too Much Limelight," a number in the "American Family" series, was finished. Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Florence Roberts, June Carlson, Billy Mahan, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason and Joan Marsh will again be seen in another "Jones Family" adventure. Frank Strayer directed.

Under its own auspices Universal checked "That's My Story" off the active list. Players to be seen are Claudia Morgan, William Lundigan, Ralph Morgan, Jack Smart, Hobart Cavanaugh, Eddie Garr, Herbert Mundin and Harlan Briggs. Sidney Salkow directed.

Music in the Air

During its sales convention MGM was not and since hasn't been reticent in letting all who care know that it will have at least seven filmmusicals on its 1937-38 program. Those mentioned are "Maytime," "The Firefly," "Broadway Melody of 1938," "Rosalie," "Girl of the Golden West," "The Ugly Duckling" and "The Red Mill."

But something that MGM's publicists have not very clearly brought out is that with the exception of "Broadway Melody," all the other productions are operettas. Also, with the possible exception of "The Ugly Duckling," all the properties are very well known to those who were patrons of the singing speaking stage in the years when the stage did not have to worry very much about motion pictures.

Oldsters, in and without the industry, who read the announcements must have been struck by an oddity. In the heyday of stage musical production, the ratio of production was about one operetta to half a dozen or so musical comedies. Generally speaking, the musical comedies that once were famous have now been forgotten and the operetta is coming back on the screen.

The condition prompts the question: "Why is MGM leaning towards such a type of film musical entertainment?" The answer may be found in the assumption that the screen has a more intelligent patronage than it is ordinarily credited with having. Then again, the company has personalities and singers who are glove-fitting in operetta.

Operetta differs from the modern musical comedy or revue in that its entertainment concept is based more on musical embellished story appeal than on the glamor of startling production effects or lavish mounting. In other words, with dialogue, action and music fulfilling their proper functions, operettas are merely popularly visaged grand opera.

SEC ATTACKS BANKER CONTROL IN CORPORATE REORGANIZATION

Second Report Recommending Legislation to Protect Stockholders in Reorganizations; Cites Paramount Case

The Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington hit out strongly this week against banker control and bankers' manipulations in corporate reorganizations, citing their activities in connection with the Paramount Pictures reorganization as being typical of the necessity for federal legislation to protect stockholders.

Resurrecting again the conditions of the Paramount and other reorganizations of the depression period, the SEC, in Washington, on Monday, sent to Congress another of its voluminous reports on protective and reorganization committees, recommending the enactment of legislation placing such committees hereafter under federal control.

The New Deal's Securities and Exchange Commission publicly told the United States Congress this week that nepotism was widely prevalent in Paramount Pictures in the early stages of the company's reorganization, and that John Hertz, serving as chairman of the finance committee and representing banking interests, cut the corporation's expenses by one-sixth, but, nevertheless was forced to resign as a result of feuds within the company.

The 605-page printed report—part two of the SEC's findings on its investigation of reorganizations—carried voluminous extracts from the testimony of witnesses who appeared before it last year in the course of the Commission's hearings on the reorganization of Paramount and some half-a-dozen other corporations outside of the film business.

The first section of the report, given to Congress in May, and explained in Motion Picture Herald on May 15th, page 65, asserted that, in the Paramount case, a group of actual security holders was organized, composed principally of large holders who were individuals and companies powerful in the financial world, and that "its program was founded upon vigorous criticism of the management and the bankers—Kuhn, Loeb and Company." "Its objectives," said the SEC, "were to oust the bankers and the old management from their dominant position and to substitute persons of their own choice. In this they largely succeeded.

"Though the struggle which took place was in the form of a security holders' fight, actually it was a battle between two groups of reorganizers for a position of dominance and supremacy over the new company."

The clear charge made by the SEC was that the various groups fought to advance their own banking or stock interests, and that "in this struggle for control the interests of investors are too frequently subordinated or completely forgotten."

Now the SEC seeks legislation for expeditious and economical rehabilitation of corporations in the throes of reorganization, which would give protection to stock and bondholders who up to now get "inadequate protection" in reorganizations.

NARRATIVE FILED IN FOX MIDWEST ACTION

A narrative statement of evidence consisting of more than 1,300 typewritten pages was filed in federal court in Kansas City this week in an appeal of the action brought by E. Rolsky and other independent theatre owners against Fox Midwest and several distributors. The defendants have 20 days in which to check the narrative.

The case was tried a year ago and Judge Merrill E. Otis ruled that because a film is a copyrighted article it may be sold to whomever distributors wish and on any kind of terms. He also decided distributors could give one theatre in an area an exclusive run for a film until the copyright expired.

The burden of the Commission's second report as issued this week is that committees uncontrolled by any laws or even generally accepted practices, as in the reorganizations cited, not only failed adequately to represent or protect the security holders, but also failed properly to cope with "various evils" and frequently fell short of the objective of "a clean and complete" reorganization.

"The importance of the management of a corporation to its security holders, is, of course, very great," the SEC pointed out, "but in many reorganizations there seems to have been little appraisal of the qualifications of the old management and the manner in which it discharged its trust. * * * Graphic illustration of the type of management policies and activities which should be examined in any reorganization is afforded by incidents from the history of Paramount Publix Corporation."

When John D. Hertz entered the management of the company, the SEC explained, he found that Paramount had done nothing in the way of negotiating for reductions in rental on its theatres, excessive insurance premiums were being paid, telephone and telegraph charges were high, the legal department was costly, and "nepotism had been practiced to a large extent."

All told, the report asserted, he cut expenses by about one-sixth, but nevertheless was forced to resign as a result of feuds within the company.

Said the SEC in its report: "We mention these allegations of diversion of company assets, of nepotism, of profligate management, and of temperamental direction of corporate affairs, not to evaluate this bitter Hertz-Zukor controversy, but because of the frequent importance of such matters in reorganizations. They are of the variety with which committees must deal, not only in discovering corporate assets in the form of claims against the management, but more particularly in appraising the faithfulness

SEC Also Issues Reports on Stock Transfers in Pathe, Warners, Paramount and Columbia by Company Officers

Motion picture business occupied considerable attention of the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington this week. Turning from its report to Congress on reorganization manipulations in the Paramount case (see column one), the Commission publicized stock transactions and other matters in Paramount, Columbia Pictures, Warner Brothers, Pathe Film, Trans-Lux and Grand National. Too, the SEC was listening to the requests of the management of the new Condor Pictures to act on Condor's application for stock registration, which the SEC has had pending since April 11th.

Sales during April of 212,000 three and one-quarter per cent Paramount Pictures convertible debentures by Stanton Griffis, chairman of Paramount's executive committee, through Hemphill, Noyes and Company, in which he also is interested, only partially balanced by purchases of 166,000 shares and resulting in a net reduction of 46,000 in his holdings, to 90,000 at the close of the month, were reported by the Commission in its semi-monthly summary of transactions of officers, directors and principal stockholders in the securities of their corporations.

A March report also was filed, showing that Mr. Griffis, through Hemphill, Noyes and Company, had acquired 901,000 debentures and disposed of 765,000 during that month.

Reports on Paramount stock covering the first three months of the year were filed, showing that Maurice Newton, New York, through Hallgarten and Company, disposed of 4,200 more shares of common than he acquired in January, acquired 5,000 shares more than he disposed of in February and made a further net acquisition of 4,500 shares in March. He personally acquired 4,000 shares in January. It was also reported that Mr. Griffis, again through Hemphill, Noyes and Company, through purchases, sales and exchanges, acquired 379,000 six per cent 20-year sinking fund debentures and disposed of 587,000.

The transactions of Hemphill, Noyes and Company in Paramount common stock were explained by Mr. Griffis at the Paramount annual stockholders' meeting, June 15, in New York, as a temporary one resulting from the firm's arbitrage transactions in Paramount securities.

Mr. Griffis said that Hemphill, Noyes, in an effort to aid Paramount in the retirement of its six per cent first preferred stock by conversion into common was buying first preferred, one share of which is convertible into seven shares of common, while selling the common stock. In the course of this process, the company temporarily went short on common, he said.

Mr. Griffis asserted that personally he had never been short on Paramount common and and competence of the management. It seems obvious that committees dominated and controlled by a profligate management would be apt to close their eyes to such matters irrespective of their importance to security holders."

The Commission also went into the "wrongful hypothecation of assets," as involved in the transfer by Paramount in 1932 of a large portion of its assets to Film Production Corporation, a subsidiary, and the giving to bank creditors a claim against those assets prior to that of the company's debenture holders; the "wrongful repurchase" of stock out of capital, and alleged excessive salaries and bonuses, as typical of matters which reorganization committees are called upon to deal with, and in the Paramount case might have been the subject of litigation for recovery.

Of major importance in reorganizations, however, the SEC cited the activities of underwriting and banking houses which, having been active in the management of a company, later participate in its reorganization.

Kuhn, Loeb and Company, it was pointed out, filled this position in the case of Paramount; in spite of opposition and criticism, it sought to play a major part in the reorganization. "Had it been successful in completely dominating the reorganization," the report commented, "it and the management might never have been called to account for their acts. Evidence of this can be found in the comparative inactivity of the protective committees organized by Kuhn, Loeb insofar as investigation and suits against the management and bankers were concerned.

"In cases such as these, if control over the reorganization falls into unfriendly or independent hands, the result may be costly to the houses of issue. * * * On the other hand, if the houses of issue can dominate the reorganization, they can through selection of the management of the new company, provide for their own banking connections with the company. They may be able to control the selection of receivers or trustees for the company, and their counsel. They can control the organization of security holders by selection of protective committees. In these ways, they are in a very good position to control publicity, to stifle investigation, and to perpetuate their control over or business associations with the company."

Only by the enactment of legislation imposing control on the operations of committees, setting up restrictions upon the membership of such committees and requiring "full disclosure" of their activities, can situations such as existed in the Paramount and other reorganizations be prevented from recurring in the future, the Commission warned.

The report further pointed out the importance to the underwriters of having the control of a company in reorganization fall into "friendly" hands.

"It seems clear that the reconstituted reorganization system should entail a basic and fundamental change in the present system," the report concluded. "No longer should the management and investment bankers be in a position of domination and control. No longer should stockholders be permitted to represent bondholders. The result should be not only a shift of the power from the inside groups to security holders and their representatives, but also a reconstitution of committees so as to provide security holders with more adequate representation.

"The key to reform in the activities of protective committees lies in the legislative grant of the power to deal with these conflicts of interest directly and forthrightly."

SEC Reports on Other Companies

declared that he was the largest individual owner of the company's common stock.

Other reports included in the Commission's summary were as follows:

Columbia Pictures: Disposition by Harry Cohn, Hollywood, of 5,124 common voting trust certificates and warrants covering 6,000 voting trust certificates, reducing his holdings at the close of April to 67,127 certificates and 18,587 warrants.

Warner Brothers: Disposition by transfer under a property settlement agreement by Jack L. Warner, Burbank, California, of 85,000 six per cent convertible debentures, bringing his holdings to 1,502,000.

Pathe Film: Acquisition by Robert R. Young, New York, of 1,900 shares of common, bringing his holdings to 25,715 shares.

Grand National Films, Inc., and Trans-Lux Corporation filed with the Commission notification of change of stockholders' meetings, and Trans-Lux a change of name from Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corp. to Trans-Lux Corporation.

Grand National meetings will henceforth be held in Delaware with elections on Tuesday, third day of July beginning this year. Trans-Lux announced change of stockholders meeting from second Wednesday in May to second Wednesday in April. The name was officially changed June 11, 1937.

Efforts to obtain action by the SEC on Condor Pictures' application for stock registration, which has been pending since April 11, are being made in Washington this week by George Hirliman, Condor president, and other officials of the company who arrived from the coast late last week for that purpose.

The failure of the SEC either to approve or disapprove the application has seriously interfered with the company's operations, making it impossible for Condor to proceed either with its originally proposed public financing or to abandon that for several avenues of private financing which Hirliman said are open to it, according to Condor's president, who added that the company had completed nine pictures without a penny being owed on them, but that further production would be stymied unless the SEC made its decision in the near future.

He made it clear that whether the company's stock registration was approved or disapproved, Condor was "going ahead." Pending the SEC decision, however, the company is virtually barred from obtaining new money, it was pointed out.

"The SEC's stop-order was issued on April 11 and we were given to believe that a decision would be made on our registration within 24 to 48 hours. Today, more than two months afterwards, we still have had no decision from the SEC. Officers of the company who stand ready to put new money into it are barred from doing so because we are unable to issue stock to them in return. Condor's bankers still owe the company more than $900,000 and can't give it to us because we are unable to issue stock to them. If the SEC could be prevailed upon to give its decision, whether it meant approval or disapproval of our registration, we would be in a position to go ahead. If it fails to act soon, we may abandon our public financing without waiting for the decision."

Mr. Hirliman was accompanied east by M. H. Hoffman and Albert Lieberman. He said that the clause in Condor's studio lease with Grand National requiring occupancy of the studio for a minimum of 100 days during the year, the omission of which from Condor's registration data brought about the SEC's stop-order, has long since been eliminated from the lease.

Society to Show Series of Pictures

Organized to show selected motion pictures without competing with regular theatres, the Southern California Society is planning to present two concurrent series of five programs each in Hollywood. On Wednesday evenings it will show foreign films, while on Tuesday evenings the Museum of Modern Art Screen Classics of America will be offered. The latter series will include the 1895 Edison feature "The Execution of Mary Queen of Scots"; 1896, "Wash Day Troubles"; 1902, "A Trip to the Moon," by George Melies; 1903, "The Great Train Robbery"; 1910, "Faust"; 1911, "Queen Elizabeth," with Sarah Bernhardt; 1912, "The New York Hat," by D. W. Griffith, with Mary Pickford and Lionel Barrymore; 1914, "The Fugitive," by Thomas H. Ince, with William S. Hart; 1917, Mack Sennet's "The Clever Dummy"; 1914, "A Fool There Was," with Theda Bara; 1916, D. W. Griffith's "Intolerance"; 1927, "Sunrise," by F. W. Murnau; 1927, scenes from "The Jazz Singer"; 1927, George Bernard Shaw in newsreel; 1930, "All Quiet on the Western Front"; 1928, "Plane Crazy," first Disney Mickey Mouse; 1928, "The Last Command," by Josef von Sternberg.

Bennett in Receivership

Richard Bennett has been placed in receivership in Hollywood following a petition by Mrs. Bennett.

Fight Continues In Congress Over Admission Tax

Powerful forces on both sides of the fight claimed progress this week in Washington in the effort to modify the administration-sponsored Doughton bill extending the admission and other so-called nuisance taxes for another two years. It was reported in the Senate on Monday that the Finance Committee's recommendation for a one-year extension instead of two would undoubtedly" pass the Senate this week. The measure would then be committed to a conference with a view to obtaining House approval of the Senate action before the present Congress expiration date, which is June 30. The measure will not be put to a vote in the upper house until the relief bill is out of the way.

Meanwhile, in the House of Representatives, Congressman Dingell of Michigan, leading nuisance tax modificationist, said he had practically completed plans to move for a preferential vote in the House in an attempt to force agreement with the Senate modification, provided chairman Doughton insisted on his original two-year extension.

At the same time, legislative matters of direct connection with the motion picture industry came up in New York City, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Vancouver, B. C.

It was also reported from Washington that motion picture executives will be given full opportunity to be heard when the Senate Patents Committee takes up the pending Duffy Copyright bill and other copyright measures. The only provision to be made by the committee is that a written request to appear at the hearings be filed.

Meanwhile, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia in New York signed a bill continuing the two per cent sales tax for one more year from July 1. This means that the motion picture industry will have to pay over an additional $700,000 annually to the city government.

Attempts of the film companies to have the city waive interest and penalties for non-payment of the sales tax during the recent court fight over its validity appeared doomed for failure for already the city has required one major company to pay both interest and penalties. The companies are acting individually in the matter.

The first step toward control of air conditioning in downtown theatres and business houses has been begun in Indianapolis by Henry B. Steeg, city engineer. Sanitation department engineers are making surveys of equipment and sewer conditions. An ordinance regulating the dumping of water from cooling systems into city sewers may result. Mr. Steeg pointed out that sewers already are overtaxed and that wells supplying cooling systems are doing the major share of lowering the water table under downtown Indianapolis.

In Kansas City the Kansas Tax Commission has ruled that screen advertising is "advertising," and is therefore exempt from the new two per cent sales tax. The same ruling applies to radio advertising.

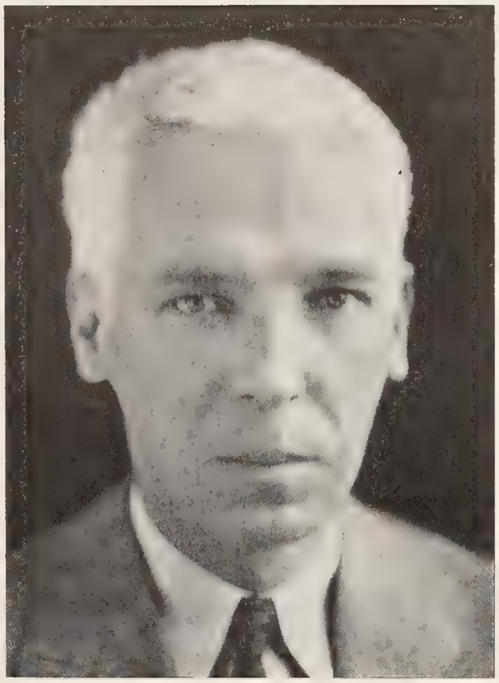
The Philadelphia amusement tax, calling for a levy of one cent on every 25 cents of admission, is expected to be passed on this week by the city council. The local measure follows closely the form of the Pennsylvania levy, and is expected to become effective July 23.

The Aldermanic Legislation Committee Monday in St. Louis asked the city councillor's office for an opinion on the legality of six proposed new taxation bills now pending, including the amusement measure. The committee adjourned to meet again later in the week without acting on an amendment offered by Alderman Arthur H. Pahl to eliminate the tax on tickets selling for less than 25 cents, which would drop the one cent tax on children's tickets. The amendment, if approved, would meet one of the chief objections raised to the bill by Fred Wehrenberg, Motion Picture Theatre Owners president.

Meanwhile, St. Louis theatres are circulating petitions of protest and some are running trailers opposing the proposed new tax legislation. It was intended to rush the message through to passage, but public protest reached such proportions that the board postponed its adjournment date and will reconsider the bill.

In Vancouver, B. C., a demonstration of projection equipment has been given before Commissioner J. M. Coadv as part of his general investigation for the Provincial Government into the question of whether two men in a booth are necessary. Theatre owners are seeking an amendment to the Fire Marshal's Act permitting one licensed operator and an apprentice in a booth.

WEAVER TO HOLLYWOOD



WILLIAM R. WEAVER, for the past eighteen years a member of the editorial staff of Quigley Publications, has been assigned as Hollywood editor, effective July 1. He will be in charge of editorial activities for Motion Picture Herald, Motion Picture Daily, Motion Picture Almanac, and Fame in the Hollywood Bureau. Prior to the World War, Mr. Weaver was associated with the operation of theatres and film exchanges and was editor of a reviewing service. At the conclusion of the war he joined the Quigley editorial staff and during the succeeding years has been in charge of various editorial departments, including editorship of "The Chicagoan". Recently he has been a member of the New York editorial staff of Motion Picture Herald.

Senators Shown Unreleased Film of Strike Fight

Although withheld from the public, a Paramount newsreel of the Chicago Memorial Day strike battle in which nine men were killed and scores injured has been shown secretly to members of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee and the Senate Post Office Committee, which is investigating charges of interference with the mails in the strike area.

Senator Thomas of Utah, after viewing the film with other members of the Civil Liberties Committee, said the reel showed an "unprovoked attack on a peaceful group of strike demonstrators" at the Republic Steel plant in Chicago. A graphic description of the newsreel was published by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, which stated those who saw it "were shocked and amazed by scenes showing scores of uniformed policemen firing their revolvers point blank into a dense crowd of men, women and children and then pursuing and clubbing the survivors unmercifully and they made frantic efforts to escape."

After relating how the strike demonstrators marched to the police line, the St. Louis paper reported the film shows the leader "arguing earnestly with the police officer who seems to be in command."

"Then suddenly," the article continues, "without apparent warning, there is a terrific roar of pistol shots, and men in the front ranks of the marchers go down like grass before a scythe. The camera catches approximately a dozen falling simultaneously in a heap. The massive sustained roar of the police pistols lasts perhaps two or three seconds."

Described as among the most harrowing scenes in the picture is one of a small group who lagged behind the fleeing marchers. In reporting this scene, the Post-Dispatch stated:

"In a manner which is appallingly businesslike, groups of policemen close in on these isolated individuals and go to work on them with their clubs. In several instances from two to four policemen are seen beating one man. One strikes him horizontally across the face, using his club as he would wield a baseball bat. Another crashes it down on top of his head and still another is whipping him across the back."

Paramount, in refusing to release the film publicly, announced it was using its editorial right of withdrawing from the screen pictures "not fit to be seen."

A resolution that the newsreel be exhibited to all members of the House of Representatives was introduced Tuesday by Representative Teigan of Minnesota. The film is in the possession of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, chairman of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee.

While the film was withheld from the public in United States, it is being shown to British theatre audiences. In commenting on the newsreel, The News Chronicle, London newspaper, complained that the police revolvers could not be heard nor the gas bombs seen.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS' CONVENTION ATTACKS COST CLAUSE IN QUOTA

CEA President Urges Fight Against Provision Be Carried to House of Commons; New Negotiating Group Named

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

The general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, at the organization's summer meeting at Harrogate this week, confirmed its previous decision to press for a Quality Clause in the new Quota provisions.

The general attitude of the body was expressed by C. P. Metcalfe, president, who, urging that a definite and declared policy be followed, said that the fight against the Cost Clause, included in the Board of Trade recommendations, should be carried into the House of Commons if necessary.

The CEA's stand was that the determination of quota films should be on a quality rather than on a cost basis. Resolutions endorsing the stand of Mr. Metcalfe and Ken Nyman, vice-president, were passed 53 to 20. Appointment of a new committee to replace the old Moyne negotiating committee was viewed as a further endorsement of the officers.

The new committee includes J. Prendergast, E. Trounson, J. Alexander, Major C. H. Bell, Richard Dooner, Sidney K. Lewis, E. J. Hinge, T. H. Hartley, F. G. W. Chamberlain, J. McCullie and H. P. E. Mears.

The position taken was in opposition to the former committee's wish that the quality clause be abandoned and that negotiations be reopened with the Kinematograph Renters' Society on the basis of acceptance of the cost clause.

Mr. Metcalfe reiterated the fundamental objection to the cost clause because of the product problem which is involved and said that the reciprocity idea as recently proposed is not practicable. He emphasized that the CEA should negotiate not only with the foreign faction of the KRS but also with the British distributors and the Film Group of the FBI.

Mr. Fligelstone, Mr. Gale, F. W. Morrison, Alex King and Ralph S. Bromhead of the old committee argued for a joint policy with the KRS on the ground of the definite rejection of the Quality Clause by the Board of Trade but other speakers urged the absolute necessity of maintaining the supply of minor American films, which the Cost Clause would kill. Jack Alexander said the independent exhibitor would be extinct in three years under the Cost Clause. Other speeches were in a similar vein.

The council voted thanks to Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for information concerning American rentals.

A paper on censorship, read by Lord Tyrell of Avon, president of the British Board of Film Censors, emphasized the submission of scripts by American companies to his board. One company, he said, sends all its scripts before production. He said a contact with Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, meant the establishment of a better understanding of the American Production Code.

Discussion of the censorship problem was slight but there was some criticism of the emasculation of films to obtain "Universal" certificates and also of the classification for adults of pictures which would be educational for children.

BRITISH NEWSREELS OMIT DUKE'S WEDDING

All British newsreels omitted the scenes of the Duke of Windsor's wedding to Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

An official statement was made to the effect that "to release films of the wedding might reawaken painful emotions among patrons and even lead to invidious demonstrations in the theatres."

The Duke's plea for privacy was quoted and it was added that the news reel companies' decision "was reached independently, without pressure or guidance from the Government or any other authority." This assurance was received with a considerable degree of sceptism, in view of the fact that the reels actually filmed the event, and transmitted prints directly from France to America and other markets.

Other papers were read by Mr. Bromhead, general manager of County Cinemas, Ltd., on "Our Jig-Saw Puzzle;" on "The Development of Electricity," by Leslie Knopp, A.M.I.N.E., and on "Rating Assessments," by D. Graham Motion, M.A., F.S.I.

The council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has requested the Board of Trade in London to consider the setting up of machinery for an official inquiry into all new plans for theatre construction. It has also made the point that, in considering such plans, regard should be paid to the principle that there should be a ratio between the available film output and the number of theatres in the country. Also reaffirmed is the association's desire for official arbitration in trade disputes.

It is generally believed that the Board of Trade takes the view that provisions covering overbuilding and trade arbitration would be out of place in any new Films Act.

"Overbuilding" Opposition Fails

That the existing machinery for opposing the erection of "redundant" theatres is not altogether serving the purpose for which it was created is suggested by two current news happenings. Unofficially it is said that the CEA Council has approached the Board of Trade to set up machinery for an official inquiry into all new plans for theatre erection, and to conduct such inquiries on the principle that there should be a ratio between the available film output and the number of competing theatres in any area.

Concurrently, the Association unsuccessfully has opposed issuance of licenses for two new theatres to be erected by A. E. Abrahams, the largest holder of freehold theatre properties in London, at Hillingdon and Hayes, in the London neighborhood. Before the London County Council objection was also taken to the grant of a license for a second news theatre in Leicester Square, although the opposition here was not provided by the CEA but by Jack Davis, whose Monseigneur News theatre is situated rather less than a hundred yards from the new site. Here again the license was granted.

An unusual situation will be created in Leicester Square. The Monseigneur flanks the Empire, the MGM shop-window, very closely on the East. The news theatre now authorized will neighbor it equally closely on the West. There will, in fact, be three theatre fronts practically in a continuous row; a hundred yards farther East is Daly's theatre, due for reconstruction as a multiple amusement center, another news theatre is across the road, with the Odeon-Alhambra arising in close juxtaposition, and on the South Side of the Square is the Leicester Square theatre. As a concentration of theatre this beats even the situation at Piccadilly circus, where two news theatres and four pre-run houses are within a stone's throw of each other but are separated by important traffic arteries.

Documentary Pioneer

John Grierson, Film Officer of the Post Office Film Unit, is resigning on June 30th and establishing himself as a consultant in the film field. The news has considerably more importance than usually attaches to an announcement of a change of trade affiliation. Mr. Grierson is the most considerable figure in the very significant field of British "Documentary" film production, and his resignation takes place at a time when all opinion believes that a separate quota for shorts will be imposed by the new Films Act. The result will inevitably be a big expansion in that department of British production. In that development Mr. Grierson seems certain to play a very prominent part, inasmuch as his new activities will be directed to an increase in the number of British shorts sponsored by public or commercial undertakings, and possibly to an expansion of production of Documentary films not so sponsored.

The Documentary owes its importance to the fact that, though a film definitely with a propagandist aim, it has developed a technique in many respects superior to that of American shorts and quite definitely ahead of that of the average British entertainment feature. Such films as "Drifters" (a trawling picture made for the Empire Marketing Board), "Night Mail" (which publicized the Post Office), "The Voice of Britain" (an inside picture of the British Broadcasting Corporation) and "Song of Ceylon," all produced by Mr. Grierson, have been extremely popular programme items. They have also revealed a number of new directors, young and with imagination, in whom a good many people see the hope of the British industry.

The interesting feature of Mr. Grierson's plans is that they are believed to include a possible liaison between the Documentary and entertainment fields. The establishment of such a contact is overdue, in the opinion of a great many people.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Stella Dallas

(United Artists—Goldwyn)

Melodrama

The dominating showmanship quality of "Stella Dallas" is its appeal to woman. When first made by Samuel Goldwyn about a dozen years ago, it not only was one of the most commercially successful films of its era, but during the elapsing years it has come to be regarded as one of the greatest stories of a woman's heartbreak and sacrifice. That, in devious ways, the plot of "Stella Dallas" has been adapted to scores of films is testimony of its appeal and merit.

The plot of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel, which has been modernly dramatized and adapted by Harry W. Gribble and Gertrude Purcell and Victor Heerman and Sarah Y. Mason, is simple and powerful. A woman marries above her station in life. She never can adjust herself. She finds her only real happiness in the sublime love of her daughter. A coarse, crude woman, Stella Dallas nevertheless has an understanding heart. Finally, although she knows it means tragedy for herself, she drives her daughter from her side and permits her husband to divorce her. As a lonely, disillusioned woman she sees her child come into the happiness a loving mother always dreamed would be her lot.

Being given the benefit of that class production which is common to all Goldwyn pictures, the great bid for modern popularity and success of the film is being placed on the character of the story. The matter of cast names has been given close attention. Barbara Stanwyck, who has made great strides in recent pictures, will be seen in the title role. John Boles is the sensitive Stephen, and Anne Shirley, featured in many RKO-Radio pictures, is Laurel. The woman in whom Boles finds solace is Barbara O'Neil, and Allan Hale is Stella's roistering companion, Ed Munn. Miss Shirley finds happiness in romance with Tim Holt. Supporting players include George Walcott, Marjorie Main, Bruce Satterlee, Anne Shoemaker, Halan Briggs and Etta McDaniels.

Release date: August 6.

The Californian

(20th Century-Fox-Principal)

Action Melodrama

Once more Sol Lesser has selected as material for a screen production the plot of the romantic bandit, the peace-loving boy who must turn outlaw in order to bring peace and justice to a strife-torn country. Familiar is the story of the hardships to which Spanish landowners were subjected when California became a part of the United States and before the full forces of law and order could be made effective. But probably it never has been told so graphically as in Harold Bell Wright's "The Californian."

Though the film tells an heroic romantic story, it essentially is a thrill action melodroma. Excitement is its blood stream. Production detail emphasizes that quality in slashing style. Among the many incidents in the forthcoming film and innumerable battles between bandit bands and between bandits and troops of U. S. cavalry. Thrilling rides lead to raids on ranchos and haciendas; desire for gold causes one bandit band to unleash a mountain avalanche of rock and stone; the sinister acts of a jealous woman bring on hand to hand combat.

To bring the Wright story to screen realism, Mr. Lesser has as the hero Ricardo Cortez. The heroine is Marjorie Weaver, who makes her screen debut. The principal heavies are Morgan Wallace and James Farley. Lesser's diligence in selecting the proper characters for types is nowhere better shown than in the choice of Katherine DeMille to appear as the feminine menace. Down the line of supporting players the same care is noted, as they all have long been associated with outdoor adventure yarns. Included are Nigel de Brulier, Maurice Black, Helen Holmes, George Regas, Pierre Watkin, Edward Keane, Richard Bottler, Tom Forman, Bud Osborne, Monty Montague and William Fletcher will be seen.

Release date: July 15.

Topper

(MGM-Hal Roach)

Fantastic Comedy

First of the Class A series of features which Hal Roach has contracted to deliver to MGM, "Topper" naturally is a source of more than ordinary interest. For a year or more during the transition period from short subject to feature length production, Mr. Roach has been experimenting. Intimately, he was searching for a new entertainment formula. He is convinced, and there is ample reason to agree with him, that he has found it in the forthcoming interpretation of Thorne Smith's "Topper," which Pack Jevne, Eric Hatch and Eddie Moran adapted and a comedy specialist, Norman McLeod, is directing.

Basically the idea is a comedy ghost story. Supplementing the dialogue and actions of the players and the situations in which they find themselves, some of the most unusual production effects ever attempted on the screen are being counted upon for a highly interesting turn, both in entertainment and salability.

An auto accident removes a high-flying but incompatible married pair from mortal existence. As ghosts they possess the power to commute between earthly and spiritual lives. To satisfy their eerie craving to do a good deed, they pick upon a staid but henpecked man. As they involve their victim in no end of strange and exasperating situations, the ghosts work out their own self-imposed purgatory and do something for their victim that he never thought could have been done for him.

Constance Bennett and Cary Grant will be seen as the ghosts. Roland Young is the victim they choose to haunt, and Billie Burke is his amazed wife. There is name value in the support, with Alan Mowbray, Eugene Pallette, Hedda Hopper, Virginia Sale, Theodore Von Eltz, Doodles Weaver, Si Jenks and Three Hits and a Miss.

Release date: July 16.

Between Two Women

(MGM)

Melodramatic Romance

Despite the fact that the major locale of this story is in a big city General Hospital, sound showmanship judgment would seem to indicate that it should be introduced to the theatre-going public as just what the title indicates. MGM's publicity men appear to think, although the record does not exactly confirm their belief, that there has been a dearth of hospital pictures. In concentrating on this idea they undoubtedly have overlooked the entertainment and commercial value of the motivating story.

That concerns a young interne who, physicaly attracted to a wealthy patient, thinks he loves her, and marries her. Romantic complications ensue for the man, who really loved a nurse who already was married, when his wife finds pleasure in the company of a brother doctor. It looks as if things might take a happy turn for the interne, as the nurse's husband dies and his wife runs away with the doctor, who has been debarred. Then a tragic situation evolves. The wife-stealing man and the woman are injured in an auto accident. The interne saves their lives. Compelled to forego his love for the nurse, he must live with the woman who deceived him.

The principals are Franchot Tone as the interne, Maureen O'Sullivan the nurse, Virginia Bruce the wife, and Leonard Penn, promising new player, as the other man. Others are Cliff Edwards, Janet Beecher, Charley Grapewin, Helen Troy, Grace Ford, Edward Norris and Anthony Nace.

Release date: July 9.

Annapolis Salute

(RKO-Radio)

Melodramatic Romance

With all but a few interior shots photographed in and around the historic Naval Academy, the romantic rivalry of two young midshipmen forms the basic theme of this story.

The story is an original by Christy Cabanne, who also is directing. A former student at the Academy, it is to be expected that Cabanne will include a great deal of intimate detail in the production and that through his knowledge of customs a unique and realistically intimate picture will result. The screenplay is by John Twist, who singly or in collaboration was associated with "Sea Devils," "Outcasts of Poker Flat" and "Wanted, Jane Turner."

James Ellison, graduate of the "Hopalong Cassidy" series, and recently in "23½ Hours' Leave" and "The Plainsman," and Marsha Hunt, featured in several Paramount pictures, including "Easy Living," "Murder Goes to College" and "College Holiday," are the leads. Sharing the romantic and melodramatic interest centering upon these two, are Van Heflin, previously in "A Woman Rebels" and "Outcasts of Poker Flat," as Ellison's rival and the one who finally saves his friendly enemy's reputation.

Forsaking his western roles, Harry Carey will be seen as a sea-going petty officer whose greatest ambition is achieved when his son, Ellison, becomes a midshipman. Supporting players include Arthur Lake and the newcoming Dick Hogan as middies; Ann Hovey as the campus flirt, and another screen novice, Marylin Miller, who has been featured on many radio broadcast programs emanating from the East.

EDUCATORS SEE FILMS IN SCHOOLS EVENTUALLY AIDING EXHIBITORS

National Conference on Visual Education, in Chicago, Brings Together Some 600 People; Benefits to Theatres Seen

by WILLIAM CROUCH
in Chicago

The present rapid trend towards the use of motion pictures in educational work will ultimately benefit the theatre owner, in the opinion of A. P. Hollis, director of the National Conference on Visual Education.

The seventh annual session of this conference was held in Chicago this week, from Monday until Thursday, and during that time more than 600 persons attended the meetings. The average daily attendance was near the 350 mark. Most of those attending, about 65 per cent., were teachers who use motion pictures in their educational work. The other 35 per cent were, for the main part, advertising men, sales executives, and non-theatrical producers.

The National Conference on Visual Education was established seven years ago by Mr. Herman A. DeVry, Chicago manufacturer of motion picture equipment. Mr. DeVry, a pioneer in the visual education field, felt that a great need for such work demanded his sincere attention. As a result he founded the visual education conference and operates it as a non-profit organization. In fact, it costs Mr. DeVry about $2,000 a year just to sponsor the event which has no dues or membership fees.

The purpose of the conference is to bring together the producers of so-called business films with the persons who use them in educational work. The makers of the films have found that over a period of years they have received a great deal of good information from the teachers who use their films and the suggestions offered are often incorporated in subsequent productions.

It is naturally the desire of the producers of films used in schools and other such places, that they obtain the greatest possible audience for their pictures. Because in the main these films being of an advertising as well as educational nature this large audience demand is of great importance.

The films used in schools and those shown at the conference are for the most part 16 mm. Many of the longer films are on 25 mm. film and in most cases the films can be obtained in either size.

The use of films for educational purposes causes the students to have a greater interest in motion pictures it was learned from teachers at the conference, who have been using films in their work for some time. The reason for this is that the students are very apt to compare the entertainment films with the educational films from a technical standpoint. This close cinema study makes them more avid movie fans and they like to look at entertainment films and analyze them as they have analyzed the educational films.

Students Make Films

At the present time there are many exhibitors who are either making, or experimenting with a local 16 mm. newsreel. This enterprise is, for the most part, being developed through high school students who make newsreel films of school events such as plays, class activities and athletic contests. On one night a week these films are shown in the local theatre and in most cases it is reported that a very good business has resulted. The exhibitor usually supplies the school with the necessary equipment for the film production and in return gets to show the film first. Many theatre men, it is reported, have found this new enterprise most profitable and a means of advertising their coming attractions in the schools and getting cooperation that would otherwise be overlooked. It also makes the students movie minded and this in the long run is what brings about a healthy condition between the exhibitor and the educational groups instead of a competitive situation that would be harmful to both.

ADVERTISERS WARNED OF CENSORSHIP THREAT

A three-point program to curb advertising abuses and thus ward off a threat of "government censorship," was proposed this week by B. H. Namm, head of the Namm store, Brooklyn, when he spoke before the retail advertising conference of the Advertising Federation of America's convention in New York City.

His plan is for "truthfulness in advertising, both in statement and application; the inclusion in advertising of all essential information; the elimination of statements and practices unfair to competitors."

"Tested advertising," Mr. Namm declared, "is increasing. Many types of tests are now being used. I consider newspapers the best medium for such tests."

At the conference some of the outstanding films were those of the Standard Oil Co., which screened a new promotional film made in Hollywood called "Stan"; the Pure Oil Company's pictures made by Stuart Grant; "Heads Up Baseball," made by Lew Fonseca; "China Visualized," made by Herbert C. White, and numerous others.

The United States government is one of the most interested parties in the DeVry Foundation. They annually send a number of persons to attend the meetings and confer with the teachers who show the films that the government makes for educational purposes. The agricultural division is the main producer of films in federal service, it was learned. Many of the films made during the year were shown at the conference and discussed by leading teachers of agriculture.

Mr. Hollis pointed out that at this meeting those present showed great interest in the Pathe 16 mm. newsreel which was enabling the schools to get scenes from important events for study and observation. These films went into the school film library in many cases and could be used for research work whenever the occasion demanded.

Through the Better Films Councils, the P. T. A. and other like groups the link between entertainment and educational films will be strengthened, Mr. Hollis stated, and through these mediums the difficulties that arise can be worked out for the benefit of all concerned.

The final session of the conference was Thursday following the annual banquet on Wednesday which was attended by more than 400 persons.

One of the principal speakers at the general session Wednesday was Raymond Evans, chief of the division of motion pictures, extension service, United States Department of Agriculture, who read a paper entitled "The Motion Picture Policy of the U. S. Department of Agriculture."

Government Position Given

"We do not believe," Mr. Evans declared, "that the federal government should compete in the entertainment field, except in so far as the subject matter of our educational films, properly presented for the information of the public, may be entertaining."

He continued by pointing out that he did not believe the educational field and the entertainment field have "anything important in common."

"In purpose, methods and ethical standards they are as different as night is from day," Mr. Evans declared, "and we feel that the tendency on the part of uninformed persons to discuss them both in one breath and in the same category serves no useful purpose whatsoever."

As a preface to explaining how the government films are circulated through 2,900 agricultural agents, Mr. Evans said, his department believed that "seldom, if ever, should federal funds be expended specifically for the purpose of securing presentation of our films in theatres."

Pointing out that because the organization is set up for agriculture extension work, schools are not served to any great extent, Mr. Evans stated "we would not consider expenditure of Department of Agriculture funds for theatrical circulation as proper, so long as the extension and school fields remain wholly unsatisfied in spite of our best efforts to provide enough films for their use."

Art Restrained

Artistic atmosphere in government films should be subject to restraint, he declared.

"The government," the speaker asserted, "has no business spending the taxpayers' money on forms of pure art while there remains a crying need for instructional films on the control of syphilis, of malaria, of hog worms, of the Japanese beetle, of the boll weevil."

In connection with the cost of producing government films and the number of government agencies engaged in the work, Mr. Evans said he read a recent syndicated article placing the total cost at more than five million dollars and the number of agencies at "more than forty."

Other speakers at the convention were Dr. I. E. Deer of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; L. W. Cochrane, director of visual education at the University of Iowa; W. J. Hamilton of Oak Park, Ill.; Mrs. Alma B. Rogers, director of visual education at St. Louis County schools; William Kurath, professor at the University of Chicago; Wesley Green, director, International Film Institute, Chicago; E. T. McSwain, professor at Northwestern University; W. F. Worthley of the Frances W. Parker Schools; and Leland Bradley of the University of Illinois.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

To Herbert Spencer Berg, of Paramount, who is Broadway's No. 1 fisherman, we relay Kay Kyser's story about the inebriate who rounded a corner one midnight and sought refuge from a sudden torrential rain in a darkened doorway.

It was a sporting goods store. Over the front hung a large sign in the form of a fish, with a hook in its mouth and a line attached. The inebriate took one look at the sign and became greatly excited. Hurriedly, he rang the bell of the apartment upstairs.

The sleepy tenant poked his head from a window.

"Who is it?" he called. "And what do you want?"

The inebriate waved his arms wildly.

"Hey, pull in your line!" he screamed. "You've got a bite."

"In face of complaints from stockholders and Wall Street financiers who object to the high cost of motion picture production," Mr. Ted (Cook-Coo) Cook, in the New York American, reports that many economies are now being rigidly applied.

"Among the foremost efficiency men recently arrived in Hollywood from New York to refocus Hollywood spending attitudes, is Barnaby Artichoke, who," observed Mr. Cook, "dwarfed all predecessors by carrying not three but seven brief cases, each with double bellows. At the very first conference he made a speech which not only touched Hollywood's heartstrings, but introduced a happy suggestion idealistic as well as practical.

"'While I agree,' he said, 'that every motion picture couple should adopt a baby, and pose with it frequently for still publicity pictures, I do not deem it necessary for each couple to adopt another baby every 30 days. I propose that all the actresses join One Big Union, and adopt One Big Baby, and alternate with it. In fact, I am perfectly willing, for economy's sake, to dress up as a baby and, with bottle, sit on the lap of any actress while the publicity department snaps still pictures."

The always-belittin' London Era now comes forth with the tall yarn about the Hollywood "quickie" producer who is making westerns now with half the number of players formerly used, by fixing the actors with side-whiskers on one cheek, making them clean-shaven on the other and photographing them from alternate sides.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

The Road Back

Drama

Some seven years ago Eric Maria Remarque wrote a novel that created comment in practically every country on the face of the earth. That was his "All Quiet on the Western Front." Universal Pictures bought and dramatized this story of a German soldier in the World War and the screen version was reputedly equally as successful as the printed. Then, several months later, Herr Remarque finished a sequel to this work and it first reached America, and Hollywood, through serialization in Collier's magazine. This was "The Road Back," and again Universal untied its purse strings and acquired the story of the return of a small group of German soldiers from the trenches to the Fatherland and their subsequent attempts at orientation, for presentation on the screen.

Again, as it did with "All Quiet," Universal cast aside many set principles of Hollywood production and allowed the story to merely tell itself. The result, therefore, of the screen version of "The Road Back," is a picture that is apt to be quite provocative of serious thinking rather than of mirthful entertainment. It is this that showmen will have to keep in mind in selling the picture, which, at the same time, is an understandable and human interest one.

There is much that is deep and significant in "The Road Back," especially at the present time when newspaper banner headlines daily promise the outbreak of another World War in Europe in the not too distant future. It might well be considered quite a preachment against such an event for although it tells the story of a group of German boys come home from the last war to find no flags waving, no bands playing for them and only fear, suspicion and hate, they might be the youth of any nation at any time, even the future. They are thus forced to cast aside the standards by which they have been living and adapt themselves to peace again. Some are able to do this, but others fail.

The action of the picture, although episodic, is fast withal. The comedy, however, appears quite forced and not at all comic. The humor of grown men, tried and true killers all, returning home to school where they are seated amongst children in the same desks they left five years earlier, and being returned confiscated playthings such as water pistols, just does not seem to register in face of what these soldiers have done before in the trenches.

Technically speaking, the picture has been given all but one of those features which the industry apparently deems tantamount of a "great production," and that one is the lack of so-called name players. About a dozen young players are trusted with the leading roles, and all handle them well. But, neither did "All Quiet" have a roster of then important Hollywood characters.

The other production values are there, however, in R. C. Sheriff, author of another great war story, "Journey's End," who did the screen play with Charles C. Kenyon. James Whale, known for "Showboat," "The Invisible Man" and "Frankenstein," is the director and Edmund Grainger was in charge of the actual work of production, which took months to complete, as producer.

As the picture opens, the remnants of a German regiment are together in a trench behind the front lines ready to move up again. They advance, losing quite a few of their number and take a French outpost as the Armistice is signed.

The men then begin the march back home in the quiet of peace. The first indication of what is to come is the demotion of all officers with the revolution in Berlin and the flight of the Kaiser.

Home at last, Tjaden (Slim Summerville), Willy (Andy Devine), Ernst (John King) and Ludwig (Richard Cromwell) encounter a revolutionary mob who attempt to tear at Ludwig's officer shoulder straps. They are victorious in this battle.

King is happy to see his father (Frank Reicher and his mother (Spring Byington), and is overjoyed at seeing Ludwig's sister Elsa (Jean Rouverol) until he realizes that he is still living in the days before the war as far as she is concerned. Summerville then saves from the mob the butcher shop of the Mayor (Etienne Girardot) and wins the hand of his daughter Angelina (Louise Fazenda).

The veterans return to school to pick up their studies where they left off but the places where their former schoolmates sat are now filled by children.

Albert (Maurice Murphy) then takes his fiancee (Barbara Reed) to a dance pavillion and learns she has been friendly with Bartscher (William Davidson), war profiteer. While the jealous boy quarrels with the girl rifle shots ring out. Troops are firing on hunger strikers. Weil (Larry Blake) marches forward toward his former captain (John Emery) to tell him that his men are shooting ex-soldiers when the officer calmly orders Weil shot down. The crowd is then fired on by machine-guns and dispersed.

Summerville invites his former pals to the wedding feast. Afterwards the men go to a cafe when Murphy finds Miss Reed in a booth with Davidson. Following the lessons he learned at the front, where he killed men who had never harmed him, he draws his revolver and shoots Davidson dead.

At the trial his friends testify for him. They contend that his act is the fault of the government which trained him to be a killer. If a man is compeller for four years to kill men he never knew they reason that there is cause for him to shoot a man who robs him of everything that makes his life worth living. Nevertheless, he is found guilty.

King and Cromwell then walk out into the country and come across a troup of young boys drilling, getting ready to fight in the next war when the echoes of the last have not yet died down. The men who traveled "The Road Back," then comment on the utter futility of it all as the picture ends.

Reviewed at a Monday matinee performance at the Globe theatre on Broadway. The theatre was approximately half filled and the audience was predominantly men, all of whom sat silently as the film unwound, apparently unimpressed at those scenes intended as comic relief, and remained silent as they filed out upon the picture's completion.—FRED BAEHLER.

Married Before Breakfast

(MGM - Sam Zimbalist)

Comedy-Romance

This is the season of the year when those surprise "sleepers" come along. "Married Before Breakfast" seems to have all the required earmarks; at least the audience which witnessed its preview in Uptown Theatre, Hollywood, gave evidence that it enjoyed the show greatly. Here in Hollywood there's always a flurry of expectancy when the MGM trademark follows the preview announcement. In this case, however, the enthusiasm lapsed noticeably when the title and cast credits flashed on the screen. But once the film got under way the mood and spirit changed. That buoyant tension which commonly comes into being when folks are genuinely surprised held sway.

The story is merely lively and refreshing farce comedy romance. Gay and airy continually, it is well prepared, acted and directed. Never serious, rather chock full of natural humor in dialogue, situations and characterizations, its wholesome fun that should have no trouble in gaining the attention of family audiences. Likewise, it holds much to interest the sophisticates.

All the characters are natural folks and the way they go about their work indicates that they must have had a pleasant time while on the job. As this spirit is evident to any kind of onlooker, it augurs well for the film's commercial and entertainment success.

The happenings in brief: Tom Wakefield sells an invention for a load of money. A regular fellow, he wants to share his good fortune with the world. Particularly he wants to share his windfall with his boarding house companions of less prosperous days. A dinner is arranged and to it comes a girl, Kitty Brent, who wishes she could get married. Money troubles stand in the way of her and her fiancee. Before she and Kenneth can marry, he must sell an insurance policy to Mr. Baglipp. Tom appoints himself boss of the job. The exciting and amusing incidents ensuing during the next several hours had the audience laughing endlessly. Every one in the cast participates as the Baglipps, funny gangster Harry, valet Tweed, policeman (Edgar Dearing), Miss Fleeter and socialite June Clayworth, who sees Tom slipping away from her.

Managers can really become enthusiastic in exploiting "Married Before Breakfast." By comparison lots of much more expensively produced and more elaborately staged attractions are much less worthy from an entertainment standpoint. A surprising film in its own right, it would not be surprising if many exhibitors elected to present it as the leading feature on dual programs.—G. M.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Produced by Sam Zimbalist. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. From story by Harry Ruskin. Screenplay by George Oppenheimer and Everett Freeman. Photographed by Leonard Smith. P. C. A. Certificate No. 3236. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 68 minutes. Release date, June 18, 1937. General audience classification.

Ever Since Eve

(Warner)

Comedy-Romance

Just about all the elements necessary to a pleasing comedy romance have been included here. The story, though somewhat complicated at times, is interesting. It may not be brand new, but it has been given so many novel and unique twists that it is refreshing. There's a quality cast, practically all the members of which are presented with a definite eye to their value as comedians. Probably the most startling fact about the film, however, is that Marion Davies, who earlier in her career won popularity as a comedienne, returns to the kind of role in which she was best liked. As the picture goes along, it won't take audiences or exhibitors very long to realize that the star is not the whole show. Others, particularly Robert Montgomery, Patsy Kelly, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Louise Fazenda, Barton MacLane and Marcia Ralston have their moments in the spotlight. In its entirety the picture measures up as satisfactory summer entertainment and where there is the will and desire to indulge in a little intensive exploitation, the chances are more than favorable that it may become a respectable money maker.

The major plot is simple. "Marge Winton's" charm and beauty as well as attractiveness to employers makes it hard for her to hold a job. Becoming a plain girl via the media of a brunette wig and simple clothes, she gets a job through publisher "Abbie Beldon" as secretary to author "Freddy Matthews." Likeable but irresponsible "Matthews" finds himself falling in love with the girl whose duty it is to see that he finishes his book. Ensues several reels of funny goings on in which the entire cast is involved before "Matthews" finishes his novel and becomes aware that the girl he sees sometimes as a blonde and sometimes as a brunette is one and the same. For novelty to break up the straight comedy and romance a couple of musical spectacle numbers have been included.

Previewed in Warners Hollywood Theatre. Audience reaction indicated surprise satisfaction and likewise hinted that if this film is accepted by exhibitors without too much temptation to remember previous Marion Davies offerings, but considering her as making a fresh start, it should be popular with general audiences.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Yodelin' Kid from Pine Ridge

(Republic)

Western

A typical Gene Autry outdoor drama, indicating that the production is a better-than-average western in story, action and in the appeal of its star performer. While localed in Florida the setting as unfolded during the course of its running might as well have been laid in the west or southwest, so infinitesimal does the scene differ from the standardized western locale. It serves one purpose, however, and that is in substituting Turpentiners for sheepherders as the traditional enemy of the cattlemen.

While not revolutionary the change of setting southward is another indication of the fresh approach made in these Autry westerns. An Autry picture is most unusual when innovations are missing. Of particular interest is the casting of the feminine lead, which ordinarily falls to a newcomer, whose chief hope is in catching some producer's eye. The girl is Betty Bronson, remembered for her "Peter Pan" role of another day. As the daughter of a Turpentiner, Miss Bronson imparts authenticity to the part. Smiley Burnette, as is his habit, capably handles the comedy interludes.

Autry's father leads a movement to set fire to the Turpentine forest because he believes the Turpentiners guilty of rustling cattle. Autry warns the Turpentiners and a battle results. Autry is disowned by his father and the cattlemen. Traveling with a wild west show, Autry becomes its star performer. Two years later the show comes to Pine Ridge. Autry discovers that two supposedly honest cattlemen are the rustlers. Both Autry's father and "Milly's" (Betty Bronson) father are killed. Autry is imprisoned for the murder of "Milly's" father. He escapes, finds the murderer and ends the rustlers reign. Peace comes to Pine Ridge between the cattlemen and the Turpentiners.

North of the Rio Grande

(Paramount-Sherman)

Outdoor Romance

Concentrating on those fundamentals which are the essence of successful motion picture production, Harry Sherman again has delivered screen merchandise of action and adventure. As has been common to the "Hopalong Cassidy" series, which, in the main, have featured the same principals, melodrama, a trace of romance, comedy, a bit of music and suspenseful excitement are the ingredients of "North of the Rio Grande."

The picture is visible entertainment. Everybody can see and thus understand the whys and wherefores for all that happens. There is no necessity for explanatory dialogue, nor is illusion resorted to for stimulation of the imagination. The opening sequences, incidents in a framed-up inquest, suggest what is to follow. When "Hopalong's" name is mentioned, the stage is set for all to know that he will have a hand in the final reckoning. With comedy involving "Windy," and romance, which plays a bigger part than in earlier pictures, "Hopalong," in order to avenge his brother's death and wipe out a band of train robbers, swings into action. Posing as a bandit, he worms his way into the confidence of the dual character, "Stoneham-Lone Wolf," and his minion sheriff, "Crowder." Obtaining the evidence he needs, with "Hopalong" in danger, the story builds to an exciting climax. Galloping bands of horsemen and a racing railroad engine provide the thrill action in which the riding, shooting trio of cowboy musketeers account for the bad men and leave the town of Cottonwood Gulch in peace before they ride off to further adventures.

With the quality of other "Hopalongs" serving to identify the entertainment value, this picture can be expected to please those who are familiar with the series, and if sold by exhibitors on its face value there is plenty reason to believe that it will interest diversified audiences.

Born Reckless

(20th Century - Fox)

Melodrama

In a week during which the public was permitted advance examination of several pieces of recent production activity, "Born Reckless" held up to the entertainment standard established. Like two or three of the others, this is a little picture with a surprise content.

The show is chiefly melodrama that has been subjected to a breezy hokum treatment. The other qualities are comedy, suggestions of romance, suspense and action excitement. Whether made for a direct purpose or just made to meet a commitment, the picture does what all films are supposed to do but sometimes don't, entertain and amuse. At least the audience which saw it in company with "The Prince and the Pauper" appeared to be of that opinion.

Quick clip shots of the Indianapolis auto race open the story, but "'Hurry' Kane's" winnings don't last very long. In a strange city, he gets a job with the taxi operating "Martins" and as a taxi war is raging "Hurry" is right in his element. As gangster racketeering is presented more from a comedy than vicious standpoint, "Hurry" has a grand time wrecking gangster "Barnes'" cabs. Even when "Barnes" thinks the menace to his plans is going to work for him, "Hurry" continues his destruction. For a few brief moments the film threatens to turn serious as "Hurry" becomes romantically attached to "Barnes'" moll, "Sybil," who, as she is presented, is hard to tell whether she's a good girl or one just out to double cross "Hurry."

Not a big picture, but one that is entertaining and full of that brand of exciting action usually so well relished by common ordinary folks, it appears to be less of a gamble than more pretentiously produced by less interesting features.

The Angels' Pit

(La Fossa degli Angeli)

Romantic Melodrama

The story is typically Italian and is placed in the marble mines near Carrara, in the most beautiful part of the Alpi Apuane. Two miners, Pié and Domenico, are in love with the same girl, Luisa. Domenico is much younger than Pié, who is his guardian after the death of his father. Domenico and Luisa are engaged but, against their own will, Luisa loves Pié. Luisa is delaying the wedding, but Pié, who considers Domenico as his own son and will not offend him, pretends indifference for Luisa and she decides to marry the younger man. Soon after, seeking refuge in a storm, Pié and Luisa take refuge in a desert hut. An avalanche of marble, caused by the storm, kills Domenico. Luisa believes her violation of her marriage pact responsible for the death of the young man. But later, love will make them smile again.

The picture gives a great view of the marble mines while the story is well directed by Carlo Bragaglia and is well acted, especially by A. Nazzari, acknowledged as the best young actor in Italy. Miss Ferida also performs creditably. The death of Domenico and the carrying of the body from the mine to the small village at the foot of the mountains is a superb sequence. The music is also good. Only in the supporting roles is there weakness to the picture.—Vittorio Malpasuti, Rome.

Produced by Diorama Film. Directed by Carlo Ludovico Bragaglia. Story by Cesare Ludovici. Screen play by Kurt Alexander and Carlo Bragaglia. Music by Maestro E. Masetti. Cameramen, Mario Albertelli and Piero Pupilli. Sound, Giuseppe Caracciolo. Assistant directors: Vincenzo Sorelli and Ugo Blasi. Film editor, Sorelli. Adult audience classification.

Wild West Days

Western Serial

A lovely young lady in distress, a band of smart but unscrupulous business men intent to defraud the heroine, the handsome and gallant cowboy come to the rescue, a horde of hollering Indians, some fast riding and equally quick gun play, all spread out on an expansive and eye filling western setting compose the ingredients needed to keep this serial story within the time honored traditions of its kind. First desiring the heroine's land for rustling purposes, the gang of land grabbers intensify their underhand work when a rich strike of platinum is uncovered on the property. Lucy (that's our heroine's name) is aided in her efforts to defeat the mob's purpose by the strengthening presence of hard riding, quick drawing Kentucky and his cohorts who form a sort of a Western three musketeers clique. A tribe of blood thirsty redskins, a stagecoach plunging over an embankment, a thundering herd and a broken suspension bridge are added complications for the young couple to worry about. Johnny Mack Brown and Lynn Gilbert play the leads and fulfill their arduous assignments of hair breadth escapes with particularly good grace. Robert Kortman, George Shelley, Chief Thunderbird, Russell Simpson, Frank Yaconelli, Walter Miller, Charles Stevens, Frank McGlynn and Al Bridge supply the necessary assistance and menace for the plot's continuance. The direction is credited to Ford Beebe and Cliff Smith. Ben Koeing and Henry MacRae were Associate Producers. The original story and screen play came from the combined pens of Wyndham Gittens, Norman S. Hall and Ray Trampe. 13 chapters in length. Running time, 21 minutes a chapter. Release date, July 5, 1937.

Paramount Pictorial, No. 11

(Paramount)

Entertaining

The content of this issue of the Pictorial series is devoted entirely to various methods of fishing. The material and locales presented make the subject different from the usual run of shorts depicting piscatorial sport. First in Florida and then in jumps to Alaska and Japan, interesting scenes are shown of the methods devised to catch crayfish and the unique use of the cormorant, a variety of an Eastern bird, by the Japanese for making their catch. The middle portion is the most striking and consists of shots of a family of bears fishing for their salmon dinner among fast flowing mountain streams. The narrative assignment is handled competently by Alois Havrilla. Running time, 10 minutes.

Serene Siam

(FitzPatrick-MGM)

Travelogue

A trip to Siam and, in the mood of the title, serenity predominates. In Bangkok the camera visits some of the innumerable and highly ornamental temples that are dedicated to Buddha and his teachings. Other points of interest are shown, including the everyday activities on land, the winding rivers with their overhanging trees and a sequence is devoted to the dancing girls of Siam. Contrary to the general rule of judging a dancer's ability by the nimbleness of the feet the girls of Siam are rated on the expressive gestures of their hands. Running time, 9 minutes.

Woodland Cafe

(United Artists)

Excellent Cartooning

Gay and tuneful is this richly imaginative visit to a bug night club. Equal to the brightly tinted tones in which the comic business has been dressed is the sparkling mood of animated fun and nonsense which the subject creates. Simply an enumeration of some of the hilarious and musical moments that occur in this odd rendezvous of frolic and frivolity, the incidents depicted will perhaps have a stronger appeal for the adult and the teen-age spectator. An aged albeit willing host and his young, blonde female companion, an amusing travesty of an apache dance executed by a spider and a fly, a "Cab Callowayish" orchestra playing some hot and low down tunes, a finale wherein an epidemic of "truckin'" sweeps the patrons and the entertainers off their feet supply cartoon moments that should hold small appeal value for the very young. Or, perhaps, the children of today are wiser in some respects than the children of yesterday. Running time, one reel.

Carnival in Paris

(MGM)

Musical Romance

A miniature musical romance and comedy that serves to introduce Ann Rutherford and Henry Brandon to the public. Potential stars of the future, the two have been surrounded with an elaborate two reel production and a Paris setting. The story relates the adventures of a homeless girl who, found stealing food, is chased by the gendarmes. She finds shelter in a museum, where she meets Brandon, who is janitor of the building and a student of Egyptology. They don Egyptian costumes and join in the carnival, winning the best-dressed prize. Returning to the museum they are discovered by the watchman when they break a vase. A paper that had been lodged in the vase reveals the identity of one of the museum's mummies which so delights the directors they reinstate Brandon and make him a member of the staff. Brandon asks Ann to marry him. Running time, 21 minutes.

Krazy's Race of Time

(Columbia)

Interesting

A forward looking creature is Krazy in his latest cartoon adventures. Projecting his fans into the future time of 1999, the far-seeing feline shows how the traffic problem will be solved by giving each car a road of its own. In this Utopian day and age, the homes of the future will be delivered to their sites by air transportation. Man will be valeted by a machine that will give his master a 24-hour service. In a rocket Krazy visits Mars, but finding the environment too martial for social amenities he drops into the more neighborly embraces of Venus. Imaginatively contrived with the comic situations certain to draw an amused response, this subject is well worth running time. Running time, seven minutes.

The Grand Bounce

(MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty

The "Grand Bounce" has reference to a check that paradoxically doesn't bounce at all in the euphemistical sense of the word. A short short story that originally appeared in a national weekly magazine it emerges on the screen as a dramatic record of the life of a check which in this particular instance is a week-end. Emerson Tracey, bank balance $95, signs his name to a $1,000 check to pay a gambling debt. The gambler indorses the check and passes it to his girl friend, who buys a fur coat with it. The furrier accidently runs down a child necessitating an operation on the youngster, the furrier paying the surgeon with the check. The surgeon lends the money (check) to a friend, who cashes it in a gambling house. The cash box is robbed. The thief turns the check over to a boxing promoter in payment of a debt. The promoter pays Nifty Turner, a fighter, with the check. Nifty owes Tracey $1,000. Tracey gets his check back and tears it up. Running time, 11 minutes.

The battle of wits between Donald and a robot butler who insists that the obstinate chap's chapeau be checked, Donald's experience in the automatic baby carriage and his treatment at the hands of a mechanical barber supply some fast and decidedly top notch comic moments. Running time, one reel.

Rushin' Ballet

(MGM)

Our Gang

The clever and appealing little fellow, Spanky McFarland, seldom gives a bad performance. In "Rushin' Ballet" Spanky is at his best. "Alfalfa" too contributes a commendable comic portrayal stooging for Spanky. When two bullies break up the marble game between "Buckwheat" and "Porky" the self styled ministers of justice, Spanky and "Alfalfa," institute reprisals. This consists in belting the bullies with tomatoes and then running for dear life. All concern wind up at a dancing school where a group of young ballet dancers are staging a show. Spanky and "Alfalfa" change to ballet costumes and join the dancers. Feeling secure in the belief that they have outwitted their pursurers Spanky and "Alfalfa" get quite a shock when the bullies appear on the stage, in costume. Running time, 10 minutes.

Hong Kong, Hub of the Orient

(FitzPatrick-MGM)

Colorful

Traveling eastward to one of the Orient's most renowned cities the camera has photographed, in beautiful color, various aspects in the life of its citizenry. In Hong Kong not all of its people make their home on land, a considerable number live in sampans. These sampans, small covered boats of unprepossessing appearance that literally cover the harbor, serve the Chinese family as a home. Leaving the distinctly Chinese atmosphere of sampans the camera next takes a tour along the waterfront where every face represents a different nationality. Also viewed is the crowded Chinese section and Repulse Bay. Contrary to its name Repulse Bay and its most noteworthy landmark the Repulse Hotel serve the aristocracy. The most beautiful girls of Hong Kong frequent the resort, attested to by the camera, not the least of them being the pulchritudinous Miss Hong Kong. Running time, 8 minutes.

Golf Mistakes

(MGM)

Very Good

This should delight the country's golfing legends and satisfy the non-golfers in its manner of presentation and comedy interludes. From the rudiments of this widely played game to the trick shots as illustrated by the experts various common mistakes are interspersed throughout the subject and the proper method of correcting them. Pete Smith has gathered four such experts, Horton Smith, Lawson Little, Harry Cooper and Jimmy Thompson. Their shot-making ability is a pleasure to watch. A canine golf ball retriever and a juggling caddy contribute the comedy interludes. Running time, 10 minutes.

Little Hiawatha

(United Artists)

A Real Treat

When the little Indian brave Hiawatha goes on the hunt, the audience is taken along with him for a sporting good time. Armed with his trusty bow and arrow, the miniature warrior tracks the woodland creatures with no success but wounded pride. Finally, he corners a little bunny but as he prepares to make his kill his determination vanishes at the pitiable sight of the tiny animal dropping a pathetic tear. The bunny is spared his life. Such an act of kindness is Hiawatha's salvation, for when the lad is being chased by a provoked mother bear, the forest people remember his good act and come to his rescue. How this is done will provide some exceedingly fine and imaginative bits of entertainment for any audience but particularly for the young folks. The coloring is exceptionally fine. The entire subject should prove a welcome screen offering. Running time, one reel.

Popeye in a Song and Dance

Popeye and his devoted Olive Oyl team up as an adagio dance act and perform their specialty for the general amusement of all except, of course, the bullyish Bluto. Substituting his unwelcome presence for Olive, Bluto pairs with Popeye for a walloping and hilarious dance turn. A wily fox happens along and with the expectation of a good day's catch succeeds in drawing the hound away from the rabbits. The fox swoops down on the rabbits but the hound returns in time to rout the fox. Running time, 8 minutes.

Mayor Considers Burlesque Code

F. H. LaGuardia, mayor of New York City, has under consideration a code of self-regulation drafted by a majority of burlesque theatre operators as a move toward reopening their houses which were closed May 1st by the refusal of Paul Moss, license commissioner, to grant license extensions.

The code was reported to propose a board of theatre owners to regulate burlesque, but it was understood Mr. LaGuardia prefers a supervisory board composed of theatre owners and other groups having an interest in the regulation of burlesque. The board, under the mayor's plan, would have complete power and would have a paid technical advisor.

Mr. LaGuardia also wants the theatre owners to sign a code of ethics which would prohibit entertainment such as the "strip tease."

Elimination of the word "burlesque" has been "suggested" by Mr. LaGuardia on the ground it is synonymous with the "strip tease" acts. Most of the operators have decided on the name "follies" for their shows which may reopen by the end of this week. Dropping of the name "burlesque" has started a jurisdictional dispute between the American Federation of Actors and the Burlesque Artists Association, both affiliates of the American Federation of Labor.

Sam A. Scribner, who is associated with the Apollo Theatre, will resign his post to become advisor to the theatre operators.

Mr. Moss, in an address before the New York Republican Club at the Lawyers' Club, 115 Broadway, mentioned his refusal to grant burlesque licenses by declaring he believed the New York theatre "an institution which should be protected from such depravity."

Georgie Harris to U. S.

Georgie Harris, actor and writer for the Rock Studios at Elstree, England, since the inception of that company, will leave Lonlon soon for a trip to Hollywood to observe production methods and technique.

Charles Light, general foreign manager of the Alexander Film Company, has left for Toronto on a trip to visit distributors. From Toronto he will go to Winnipeg and Vancouver and then will attend the company's sales convention in Colorado Springs in July.

20th-Fox Extended Engagements Jump Nearly 400% in 1936-37 Over '35-36

Record total of 4,487 extended engagements ranging from 11 weeks to an extra day were earned by 20th-Fox pix released between Aug. 1, 1936, and June 4, last, it was announced yesterday by John D. Clark, general manager of distribution.

This represents an increase of almost 400 per cent over the corresponding 1935-36 period when the extended runs totalled 936. A majority of the latter, incidentally, were two weeks or under, it is said.

Figures compiled at the office of John D. Clark, general manager of distribution, show that 3,354 extended runs occurred in the United States and Canada, and 1,133 in other countries. In 230 situations, 20th Century-Fox pictures ran four weeks or more, while the number of three-week engagements totalled 427. Two-week runs furnished another impressive total—1,478, of which 887 were domestic.

The holdover figures with length of run given first, followed by number of engagements break down:

U. S.—CANADA—11 weeks, 1; 10 weeks, 2; 9 weeks, 1; 8 weeks, 1; 6 weeks, 4; 5 weeks, 6; 4 weeks, 17; 3 weeks, 83; 2 weeks, 887; 1 week to 4 days, 1,197; 1 to 3 extra days, 1,020; Moveovers, (engagements in which there was a lapse of one or two days between completion of original run and start of moveovers), 135. Total, 3,354.

Foreign—7 weeks, 41; 6 weeks, 36; 5 weeks, 29; 4 weeks, 92; 3 weeks, 344; 2 weeks, 591. Total, 1,133.

20th Century-Fox . . . industry's leading producer of Boxoffice Champions . . . would naturally be expected to lead the field in extended runs. And 20th is one company that is keeping this season in mind, while preparing to make 1937-38 its greatest ever!

DEPRECIATION OF ADMISSIONS AND HEAVY TAX WORRY FRENCH OWNERS

Syndicate of Exhibitors Are Ready to Strive for a Closer Union in Order to Fight in Defense of Common Problems

by PIERRE AUTRE

in Paris

At the general meeting of the French Syndicate of Exhibitors, held recently in Paris, two important questions were put before the members: the depreciation of admission prices, and the never-ending fight against excessive taxation.

The meeting was presided over by Raymond Lussiez, president of the French Syndicate of Exhibitors.

The spirit of solidarity manifested during this general meeting is a significant development in the French Cinema Industry.

Mr. Lussiez defined clearly the problems of exhibition, in the face of present day conditions. The exhibitors replied that they were prepared to do anything to defend their interests and to further a close union of all branches of the Industry.

Mr. Lussiez said:

"Up to now, the Syndicate has been only the defender of your interests. Now, it must be your chief, and sometimes your judge. We are ready for this new task. And I thank you, for having told me that you will follow me and approve of that which you desire me to undertake." Thus, the unity of Paris exhibition is complete in its syndicate.

Mr. Bernheim, vice-president of the Syndicate, told of the continual efforts made by his committee to regulate the price of seats, so that the minimum tariff will be applied by all.

Agreements have been made with the Management Society for Pathé Cinemas and the GFFA Society, as well as a large number of theatre managers, first-run theatres included, for the application of the inter-syndical rates.

Moreover, the committee summoned the theatre managers who had been accused of violating the inter-syndical decisions. Sanctions were applied, followed by immediate readjustments. Actually, on 320 theatres in Paris, there remain only 38 which are being readjusted; all the others, from now on, will have tariffs conforming with the inter-syndical decision.

Consequently, the committee considers its work finished.

"In spite of the fact that the classification of the theatres has been established hastily," Mr. Bernheim said, "you have all given in to this measure of discipline. We thank you. The results have been excellent for everybody. You will help us to reduce the number of dissidents (now 6 per cent) who have not as yet followed your example.

"No doubt we ought to have recourse to sanctions. We will ask distributors to refuse them programs. Will you approve of our attitude?"

The approbation was unanimous. A committee for the classification of theatres by category, composed of managers, will complete the work which was taken over, temporarily, by the syndicate in conjunction with the distributors' organizations.

ILLNESS AGAIN TAKES DONAT OUT OF FILM

Robert Donat, once again a victim of asthma, is out of the cast of Victor Saville's "South Riding," which starts immediately for London Films at Denham. The cast will include Ralph Richardson, Edna Best and Edmund Gwenn, and the adaptation of Winifred's Holtby's book has been done by Ian Dalrymple. Harry Stradling will be at the camera. Based on a story which turns on the changing of English life since the War, "South Riding" will include many country backgrounds.

A child discovery is announced in this picture, in the person of Joan Ellum, one of many Yorkshire school children tested by Mr. Saville. She has a solo bit in a classroom scene in which Miss Best, as the mistress, has to face forty-four juveniles.

In a month's time the unification of minima tariffs will be complete.

Raising Prices in September

"This is indispensible," said Mr. Lussiez, "as we must foresee for September an augmentation of the price of our seats.

"These prices, very often, have not changed for five years. We cannot stand thus before new burdens which have been overwhelming us for a year. We must also realize that production costs have been augmented by more than 50 per cent. If we want films, we shall have to pay more for them. If not, we shall kill production, without which we cannot live. Next September we will augment prices generally. As we will do it all together, and in the same proportion, the public will follow us. Do you agree?"

The assembly replied by loud applause.

Here then is effected, without reservation, the solidarity of three branches of the Industry, exploitation, production, and distribution.

Taxation Problems

As for the question of taxes, Mr. Lussiez went into full details. He told of previous steps taken. He said that the last strike, which took place in April, could not be transformed into a movement against taxes, as the CGT (Trade Unions) would not have followed the demands of the exhibitors. In addition, the Gaumont and Pathé circuits, which are still under the threat of being taken over by the state, and the Paris legitimate theatres, of which many are subsidized by the state or city, could not have followed the movement.

"And yet, we must finish with taxes," Mr. Leriche, an independent director, replied. "For twenty years they have been 'pulling our legs.' It is not a question of politics. The governments of Poincaré, Herriot, Tardieu refused to suppress our taxes, as well as the present government. We know now the way of obtaining what we want. If we know how to join forces and act, we will win this fight against fiscal injustice."

Thus, soon may be expected a serious offensive, including a lock-out, against the oppressive taxes of the past thirty years.

Oppressive Laws Blamed

There is no doubt that the situation of cinema directors in France is very serious.

The application of new social laws, the details of which appeared in a previous issue of the Motion Picture Herald, has brought upon exhibition considerable burdens.

Most of the exhibitors agree that certain reforms were necessary, but that others are oppressive. Many say it would have been better to do justice to the legitimate claims of the staff, instead of waiting for the law to require it, and that the exhibitors ought to have organized themselves to resist excessive demands.

It is now too late to discuss these laws. They have been voted, and they must be applied. The question to be decided is how exhibition is going to be able to support these obligations which have been added to those which already made the existence of so many theatres precarious.

Cost of Supplies

Fernand Bastide, vice-president of the French Syndicate of Directors and manager-owner of a very important cinema in Paris, made the following statement, which represents the ideas of the majority of the exhibitors:

"I do not see," said Mr. Bastide, "how to meet the new burdens which have been imposed on us. These burdens are of two sorts: those which have to do with the application of collective contracts, and which are the cause of an increase of costs, often disproportionate to the normal resources of an establishment; and those which are caused by the increase in prices of all supplies: combustibles, carbons, spare pieces, transport, posters, prints. In some cases, the increase in price is 35 to 65 per cent.

"Soon, no doubt, it will affect costs of water and of electric current.

"Under these conditions we cannot keep going.

"There is only one solution: complete suppression of exceptional taxes, which are applied only to entertainment, and which, for the cinema, take as much as 30 and 35 per cent of net receipts. These taxes, before the new laws, caused a great number of theatres to operate at a loss. Today, they render exhibition impossible. Not only are they unjust, but they are fixed in an despotic way, with rates and special

Dear Mr. Littman:-

Congratulations!

Thought you would like to know that "THIEF MEETS THIEF" opened with a bang this morning and stayed at over-capacity all day long.

I can definitely assure you that it ranks high among the top grossers of the Rialto Theatre and that our judgment in booking it is more than justified.

Sincerely yours, steps according to the different categories of entertainment and according to the towns.

"Only a general reduction of taxes will permit us to reestablish a balance.

"In a great number of cases, this reduction of taxes will only permit the avoidance of bankruptcy.

Ban on Tips Is Also Problem

"The day that tips are done away with, which will mean new and extra expenses for us, it will be useless for us to try and fight. If I have to pay my ushers, it will mean an additional expense of 62,000 francs (about $3,000) per year, for me. Where can I find the money?

"The most deplorable thing in the whole affair is that the plan will at the same time equally displease a great number of employees.

"I know ushers, in many theatres, who make much more in tips than they would earn in a week if they were paid by the management for their work.

"You will never prevent, especially in theatres in the suburbs, the public from giving a tip. But, an increase in the price of seats will annoy them.

"How much shall I augment the price of the seats? One franc, (4 cents)? It does not, by far, compensate the new charges.

"For, one must not forget that out of the one franc the Public Assistance and the State will take their share. And on certain days, on this one franc I shall have 0.27 centimes with which to pay my general expenses.

"As for myself, I can only consider two possibilities: either a complete and total suppression of taxes, or closing down."

Animated Cartoons

A French designer, Pierre Bourgeon, who has been studying the animated cartoons for three years, is now completing his first film, which will be entitled "Coccinella Town." This film, which will be 600 feet long, will be in color. It has been made by Mr. Bourgeon and an Italian unit directed by Leontina Indelli, and will not cost more than $2,000.

It is the first experiment with animated cartoons in France since talking films arrived.

The French press remembers a pioneer of 30 years ago in this field, Emile Cohl, who is now old and ill.

"J'Accuse" in Sound

The famous French director Abel Gance, who made "Napoleon," is starting in French studios a sound version of his silent film "J'Accuse," produced in 1919. This will be a propaganda film for international peace.

News Notes

Mrs. Hope Williams, of Quigley Publications' London office, spent the weekend in Paris, together with Lilian Jeffrey, from MGM's New York headquarters.

The Paramount and New York Metropolitan star, Gladys Swarthout, is vacationing in France with her husband, Frank Chapman. They plan a visit to Italy before returning to the States in a fortnight. Paramount French branch organized a press reception for them.

The majority of French audiences do not understand the philosophical meaning of the Capra film "Lost Horizon" and were interested chiefly by the first part of the film, i.e., the airplane hop from China to Thibet. Mr. Capra protested because French distributors made cuts in the film.

"Shall We Dance?" is the only American picture now doing good business in Paris. "After the Thin Man" had an excellent fortnight, but fell because of the warm weather.

Luis Trenker's "The Rebel," produced in Germany in 1933, is at last having its first showing in Paris at the Paramount in a dubbed version under its new title "The Heroic Ambush."

The best French film ever produced in France "La Grande Illusion," directed by Jean Renoir, is breaking all receipts records at the Marivaux theatre, in Paris. For the first time, an advertisement in two colors (black and red) has been used for this film in the French newspapers.

The Irish writer, Liam O'Flaherty, is in Paris preparing a film adaptation of his novel, "The Puritan." The film, to be produced in France, will be directed by Jeff Musso. The star will be the wellknown French actor, Pierre Fresnay. The Austrian cameraman, Curt Courant, will do the photography.

Hans Richter, a pioneer of the German "avant garde" cinema, in the silent days, and who made some futuristic films, is in Paris, and may produce some original short subjects.

The International Committee for the artistic and literary diffusion through the Cinema (CIDALC), which has as president Miss Helene Vacaresco, Roumanian delegate to the League of Nations, and is representative of 52 nations, has awarded the International Cup for Documentaries to "Il Est un Petit Pays" ("There is a little country"), a short film produced in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg by René Leclère.

Interviewed in Paris, the French director René Clare said he is becoming a producer and his next films will be produced for Jack Buchanan in London, one in color.

WPA DIRECTOR URGES STATE THEATRE

A state theatre, operated for the public interest and benefit, is advocated by Miss Jeannette Eckman, director of the Works Progress Administration professional activities at Wilmington, Del., as a solution to the problem of offering permanent work to unemployed players.

Her plan was advanced after it was announced the Federal Theatre, a WPA project in Wilmington, will close July 15, leaving 25 persons out of work.

Film Franchise Up for Approval

A guaranteed price of $2,500 for each feature picture plus a graded percentage of gross receipts are the principal provisions in the proposed Twentieth Century-Fox film franchise for the Roxy Theatre in New York City. Arguments on the franchise and the first mortgage indenture for the theatre were to be heard Friday by Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey.

An amendment to the theatre's approved plan of reorganization was granted by the court upon petition of the theatre's gold noteholders' committee. Under the new plan, 15,480 shares of $1.50 cumulative preferred stock will be issued to noteholders instead of 7,740 shares of $3 dividend preferred. The court directed, though, that consents to the plan which already have been filed are not affected by the amendment.

In addition to the guaranteed price for films, the franchise provides for 50 per cent of the gross between $32,500 and $40,000 and 65 per cent of the receipts over $40,000. Features will be held over if they gross at least $28,000 in the first three days. The contract is for one year with provision for arbitration should the parties fail to agree on renewal terms.

Of six banks which entered bids for the right to act as trustee under the new indenture, the Continental Bank and Trust Company was low with a proposal of $2,000 for the first year's services and $750 a year for the remaining 19 years. The low bidder was trustee for old Roxy bonds.

Howard S. Cullman, Roxy trustee, submitted an unaudited profit and loss statement for the April 30th to May 17th period. It showed a profit of $9,609 before deductions for interest on funded indebtedness, depreciation and amortization, and administration expenses. Cash receipts were $138,570 and disbursements, $201,663. Cash on hand was $71,672; admissions totaled $121,005; film rentals, $22,554; special talent, $17,164; orchestra, $8,840, and stage, $6,957.

Warner Club Has Outing

The New York Warner Club held its annual boat ride and outing Wednesday with Miss Camille Garrity being elected "Miss Warner Club." The club members sailed to Bear Mountain on the S.S. Peter Stuyvesant. An innovation this year was a motion picture of the trip with Miss Garrity as star.

Close Vitaphone Plant

The Vitaphone studio in Brooklyn, N. Y., will close for the summer June 26 for the usual production halt. The plant will remain idle for 10 weeks.

Report Tests with Trailers

The American Tobacco Company, for Lucky Strike cigarettes, is said to be experimenting with one-minute film trailers. Lord and Thomas is the agency.

COLUMBIA SALES CONVENTION OPENS, AS U.A. AND RKO MEETINGS END

United Artists Adopts New Flexible Sales Policy; RKO Reports 150% Sales Increase; 1937-38 Features Total 700

The Columbia sales meeting, opening Sunday at the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles will bring the convention period nearly to a close with only Gaumont British remaining on the schedule. United Artists and RKO Radio concluded their annual sessions, in Chicago and Los Angeles, last week end.

Columbia home office delegates left New York Wednseday evening on a special train for the coast. The GB convention, twice postponed, has been set for July 9th to 11th at the St. Moritz Hotel, New York. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Monogram, Warner Brothers, Grand National, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox, Republic and Paramount gathered for sales discussions and product announcements during May and early this month. A total of 545 features have been announced for release during the 1937-38 season, and the Columbia and GB listings, together with productions planned by independent companies, is expected to bring the figure to approximately 700.

In the special Columbia train which left Grand Central Station on Wednesday were Abe Montague, Joseph McConville, Rube Jackter and Lou Weinberg, sales executives, and L. Astor, M. J. Weisfeldt, J. Seidelman, J. Friedman, Hy Daab, H. C. Kaufman, M. Grad, G. Josephs, M. Hannock, A. Seligman, L. Jaffe, B. E. Zeeman, V. Borelli, W. Brennan, S. Liggett, J. Martin, C. Roberts and branch managers and members of the sales forces of the New York, Boston, New Haven, Philadelphia and Washington exchanges.

The train will stop at Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago and Kansas City where the home office representatives will be joined by delegates from exchanges in those territories. The meeting will open on Sunday at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles and will continue through Thursday.

Gaumont British

From 75 to 100 delegates are expected to attend the GB session in New York which will open July 9th. The meeting was scheduled for this Friday after a previous postponement from June 10th. Executives of the company said this week that the sales officials were awaiting the arrival of several new pictures which are to be screened for the delegates. "Gangway" and "Non-Stop New York" are two of the films to be shown.

George W. Weeks, general sales manager, arrived in New York from the coast early this week after attending the Twentieth Century-Fox sales meeting in Los Angeles.

RKO Radio

Leo Spitz, president of RKO, told delegates to the five-day convention in Hollywood at the closing session on Monday that the company's records showed a 150 per cent increase for the first quarter of this year and that the fiscal year 1936 showed a gain of 250 per cent over 1935.

RENTAL CHOICE PLANNED BY UA

The United Artists sales policy next season will be flexible with exhibitors to be offered a program of 36 pictures on percentage or flat rental terms, officials returning from the Chicago sales meeting said. In addition to four Samuel Goldwyn films listed at 40 per cent each, another group of four will be offered at 35 per cent each. Walter Wanger will have four at 35 per cent and a like number at 30 per cent. Alexander Korda wil have two at 35 per cent, another two at 30 per cent and two others at 25 per cent. David Selznick's group of five will be from 25 up to 35 per cent.

A program of 48 features of which at least 25 will be of major importance was announced by Jules Levy, general sales manager. Titles which have been set were reported last week on page 45 of Motion Picture Herald. In addition there will be six George O'Brien pictures and two special attractions to be sold separately—Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and the British made "Victoria the Great," as well as 18 Disney shorts among the 1928 short subjects, including the "March of Time" and Pathe News releases.

S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, announced that the company will triple the 1936-37 national advertising expenditure, most of the increase going to newspapers which, he said, are the backbone of exploitation. Campaigns will be augmented through magazines, trade publications, billboards, radio and other media. Advertising and publicity personnel of the company was increased 25 per cent during the last year, he said. A budget of about $100,000 is expected for advertising on each big attraction in the new program.

Public relations as they affect sales promotion and educational work in the motion picture industry was the subject of a talk by Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager for the company, who showed how the work of his department not only increases business for exhibitors but develops interest in worthwhile entertainment on the part of the general public.

S. J. Briskin, vice-president in charge of production, reviewed the RKO roster of stars which, he said, had been increased to a total of 85 recognized names. These include Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Katharine Hepburn, Lily Pons, Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall, Joe Penner, Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothern, Charles Boyer, Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, Louis Hayward, Irene Dunne, Nino Martini, Mitzi Green, Joan Fontaine, Harriet Hilliard and Milton Berle. Newcomers added to the list include Marjorie Lord, Diane Barrington, Diana Gibson, Dorothy Moore, Constance Worth, Joan Woodbury, Ada Leonard, Thelma Leeds, Mary Frances Gifford, Anne Hovey, Elizabeth Russell, William Brady, Gordon Jones, Richard Lane and Onslow Stevens. Established favorites who will continue under contract include Jack Oakie, Preston Foster, Gene Raymond, Anne Shirley, Fred Stone, Wheeler and Woolsey, Helen Broderick, Victor Moore, Margot Grahame, John Beal, Parkyakarkus, Walter Abel, Erik Rhodes, Eric Blore, Eduardo Ciannelli, James Gleason, Billy Gilbert, Paul Guilfoyle, Van Heflin, Maxine Jennings, Ray Mayer, Bradley Page, Lee Patrick, Barbara Pepper, Lucille Ball, Frank M. Thomas, Patricia Wilder and Buster West.

Producers who will work on the new program include Pandro S. Berman, Jesse L. Lasky, Edward Small, Maurice Cohen, Edward Kaufman, Al Lewis, Lee Marcus, Cliff Reid, Robert Sisk, William Sistrom and P. J. Wolfson. Directors on the company's roster include John Blystone, Christy Cabanne, Edward Cline, Wallace Fox, Howard Hawks, Ben Holmes, Leigh Jason, Edward Killy, Gregory La Cava, Lew Landers, Rowland V. Lee, Joseph Lerner, Rouben Mamoulian, George Nicholls, Jr., Richard Rosson, Mark Sandrich, Alfred Santell, William Seiter, Joseph Santley, George Stevens and Ben Stoloff.

Contributions of Condor Pictures to the RKO release schedule will include six feature productions starring George O'Brien; 13 musical short subjects, and 13 new Bill Corum "Sports Shorts."

Sol Lesser will produce three Bobby Breen pictures also for RKO release.

The shorts schedule will include 18 Walt Disney "Mickey Mouse" and "Silly Symphony" cartoons; 13 issues of the "March of Time"; 24 two reel comedies to be made under the supervision of Bert Gilroy; two series of single reel musicals, 13 to be produced by Condor and six by Atlas Pictures; 13 "Sports Shorts"; seven issues of "Pathe Parade," film novelties to be created by Pathe News, and 104 editions of Pathe News. The two reel comedies will be released in six series, including six Edgar Kennedys, six Leon Errols, three Radio Flashes, three Headliners, three Smart Sets and three Radio Musicals.

Plaques and cash prizes were awarded the winners of special sales campaigns at the final session of the convention. The contests included the Jules Levy Campaign, special drives on the George O'Brien pictures, "March of Time," Joe E. Brown pictures and "Rainbow on the River," and a contest for poster clerks.

Parties and visits to the studios occupied the convention delegates over the week end. The convention banquet was held at the Trocadero Cafe on Saturday night when brief addresses were made by Will Hays and Jules Levy and the delegates were entertained by the RKO stars.

United Artists

Individual conferences and talks by George J. Schaefer, A. W. Smith, Jr., Jack Schlaifer and Monroe Greenthal ended the Chicago regional conference of United Artists last Saturday. Increased rentals were expected in view of the executives' suggestions that admission prices should be raised and that exceptional product was promised and big box office business predicted.

Last year's business and the product list were discussed at earlier sessions of the meeting which was attended by 85 salesmen from the western and southern territories. The delegates viewed two reels each of "Walter Wanger's Vogues of 1937" and "52nd Street" and all of "Knight Without Armour."

Ten of the 36 features scheduled for United Artists release during 1937-38 are finished or are nearing completion, Mr. Schaefer said. In addition to "The Hurricane," Samuel Goldwyn's South Seas picture which will be roadshown beginning November 1st, release dates on the group are as follows:

"Knight Without Armour," July 23rd; "Vogues of 1938," July 30th; "Stella Dallas," August 6th; "The Prisoner of Zenda," August 20th; "Dead End," August 27th; "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," September 17th;

LATEST PLANS FOR NEW PRODUCT

"52nd Street," September 30th; "Nothing Sacred," November 19th, and "The Goldwyn Follies," December 25th.

Carole Lombard has signed a three year contract with Selznick International calling for one starring picture a year and Walter Connolly has been signed by Mr. Selznick for the role of Gerald O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind."

John Cromwell abandoned direction of "Marco Polo" after a dispute with Samuel Goldwyn over characterizations in the picture. Archie Mayo has been signed for five years as a director by Mr. Goldwyn. His first picture will be "Goldwyn Follies."

Paramount

Details of Paramount's new product were discussed for 60 theatre executives, salesmen and branch managers by William Erbb, division manager at a two day regional meeting in Boston this week. Present from the home office at the meeting in the Copley Plaza Hotel were Neil F. Agnew, J. J. Unger, Milton S. Kusell, Robert Gillham and Don Velde.

Similar regional meetings were held in Dallas and Cincinnati by sales executives of the company on their way back to New York from the coast where the annual sales convention was held.

Warner Brothers

The third of a series of four regional meetings for Warner Brothers bookers and ad salesmen was held at the Roosevelt Hotel, New Orleans, last week end. A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges for the company and I. F. Dolid, assistant Vitaphone sales manager, conducted the session. Representatives of exchanges in Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Kansas City, Memphis, New Orleans and Oklahoma City were present.

Sales policies for the new season's product were discussed with special emphasis on the company's recently adopted accessories rental plan. The final regional meeting will be held in New York on Saturday at the Hotel Warwick.

Grand National

Production began this week on the first of the seven pictures planned by Grand National to cost about $500,000 each. "Something to Sing About," starring James Cagney, went before the cameras and will be followed by "Gorgeous," new Anna Sten feature.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has closed a deal with R. Dirks, creator of the newspaper comic strip, "The Captain and der Kids," for a series of cartoons. Thirteen of the subjects will be made for the 1937-38 season. The new series will replace the Harman-Ising shorts and will be supervised by D. G. Maxwell, formerly with Harman-Ising.

Monogram

Nine pictures of the 42 planned for Monogram's new program are completed and the first release date will be June 30th when "The Thirteenth Man" will open at the Los Angeles theatre, Los Angeles. Weldon Heyburn and Inez Courtney have the leading roles in the pictures.

Twentieth Century-Fox

Pictures released by Twentieth Century-Fox between August 1, 1936 and June 4, 1937 were held for extra runs in 4,487 situations, it was said this week at the office of John D. Clark, sales manager. Of the total 3,354 were in the United States and Canada, 1,133 in other countries.

NUMBERS TO REPLACE RKO'S A AND B LABELS

In an attempt to end "unjust prelabeling of motion pictures," RKO Radio will discontinue the practice of classifying films as A or B products.

Instead, a number system will be used, S. J. Briskin, production vice-president, said at the RKO sales convention in Los Angeles.

Mr. Clark left this week for Chicago and San Francisco for negotiations on circuit franchises.

Universal

Trem Carr has completed a deal with Universal to produce an indefinite number of pictures in addition to the six John Wayne vehicles for which he is under contract. The agreement provides that if the company approves stories purchased by Mr. Carr he will produce them on a single picture basis. First of the series will be Channing Pollock's "Synthetic Gentleman," retitled "Welcome Imposter."

Crescent Pictures

E. B. Derr, president of Crescent Pictures, has signed a contract with Hollywood Studios, formerly the Talisman lot, for space and offices for his 16 productions planned for the season. Six will be on the Secret Service Smith series and ten will be adventure action features.

Certified Pictures

Mack D. Weinberger has announced his resignation as general sales manager of General Pictures Corporation to become sales manager for Certified Pictures, new producing and distributing organization. Certified will distribute 34 pictures during the coming season of which 12 will be produced in their own studio. Mr. Weinberger plans to set up 25 franchised exchanges.

General Pictures

General Pictures which some time ago announced a program of 26 features and eight westerns, under its reorganization will produce eight features and six westerns. First of the new program will be "Night Edition," according to Bill Deming, production head.

Lenauer International

Lenauer International Films has acquired four shorts for distribution in this country: "In Austria with the Duke of Windsor," "Dangerous Mountain Climbing," "Tyrolese Costumes and Customs," and "Up in the Clouds."

Variety Club Plans Boxing Carnival

A boxing carnival featuring a bout between Freddy Steele, world's middleweight champion, and Charles (Hobo) Williams will be staged by the Variety Club of Washington July 20th. Proceeds of the event will be turned over to the club's welfare fund.

Rudolph Berger, who is chairman of the welfare committee, has been named general chairman in charge of the boxing show. It will be held at Griffith Stadium.

Musicians Veto Plan to Extend Work Campaign

Extension on a national scale of a campaign instituted in New York City to obtain reemployment of musicians in theatres was voted down at the annual convention of the American Federation of Musicians in Louisville, Ky. While pointing out that picketing and sit-in practices brought little results, delegates stressed the point the convention did not want to interfere with the efforts of the New York chapter.

The Philadelphia delegation proposed a resolution that the Federation give financial support to a local chapter striking or conducting a campaign to return musicians to orchestra pits but this too was defeated.

Action on two other issues which came before the convention was referred to the executive board with instructions that it convene in New York City within 30 days after the Louisville meeting. The first deals with the federation's stand on sound recordings, discs and wired music. In voting the delay the delegates empowered the board to act in "the best interests of the federation."

The second issue which the board will take under consideration is the question of hours and conditions of employment of union members at the Hollywood studios.

Joseph N. Weber, president of the federation, was assigned the task of handling any disputes arising between the musicians and the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

Among the speakers at the convention were Mr. Weber, James Petrillo, president of the Chicago local, and Chauncey Weaver, executive officer. All three emphasized the dangers of the Committee for Industrial Organization and affirmed adherance to the American Federation of Labor.

Vincent T. Miles, a member of the Social Security Board, spoke, outlining the security act.

Mr. Weber, in addition to being reelected president, was granted a six weeks vacation to recuperate from a recent illness. A $250,000 trust fund to be invested in United States bonds with Mr. and Mrs. Weber receiving the benefits also was voted. The principal will revert to the federation upon the death of Mr. and Mrs. Weber.

Elected with Mr. Weber were C. L. Bagley, vice-president; Fred W. Birnbach, secretary; Harry E. Brenton, financial secretary treasurer; Walter M. Murdock, member of the international executive board from Canada; Mr. Weaver, Mr. Petrillo, J. W. Parks, and A. C. Hayden, members of the international executive board from United States; and Mr. Weaver, Mr. Bagley, Vincent Castronovo, Edward Canavan and William J. Kerngood, delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention.

The musicians will hold their 1938 convention in Tampa, Fla.

CHICAGO CONVENTION BRINGS SPLIT OF SUPPLY DEALERS, MANUFACTURERS

Manufacturers Set Up Their Own Organization and Announce an Annual International Equipment Exposition

The four-day convention of the Independent Supply Dealers Association, ending at the Medinah Club in Chicago on Monday, was climaxed by the split in membership of the supply dealers and the manufacturers and the formation of the Theatre Equipment Supply Manufacturers' Association, composed of manufacturers alone, who immediately announced an annual international theatre equipment show in cooperation with supply dealers, film producers and distributors, and architects.

The new organization grew out of the situation which found two factions fighting for leadership, the dealers proceeding alone in almost continuous conference, paying little or no attention to the exhibits of the manufacturers.

Plans for the manufacturers' show next year will be made by a committee composed of Joseph B. Kleckner, chairman, president of Motiograph, Inc.; Oscar Neu, president of Neumade Products, Inc.; William Geddris, president of Ideal Seating Company; H. C. Hecht, president of Da-Lite Screen Corporation; Harry Strong, president of Strong Electric Corporation; C. S. Ashcraft, president of C. S. Ashcraft Manufacturing Company, and J. E. Robin, engineer and manufacturer, formerly executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association and now head of his own company of wholesale sales engineering.

The manufacturers' committee plans to hold several meetings during the next few months and will shortly hold an election of officers. Major and independent producers will be contacted, and commercial and educational motion picture producers will also be asked to cooperate in the venture, which is expected to be held in Chicago in June of next year. It is also thought that the 1939 show will probably be held in New York to coincide with the New York World's Fair.

Officers Are Elected

Harry Grahame, Denver, president, and all other officers of ISDA were re-elected Wednesday for another year with the exception of Mr. Robin, who was succeeded by Joseph Goldberg as secretary. Headquarters were ordered moved from New York to Chicago.

The Theatre Equipment Distributors of America, Inc., the rival dealer association, who also held their convention in Chicago at the same time, announced this week that the following dealer members were elected officers of the association: Arthur Marrone of the Superior Motion Picture Company, Pittsburgh, president; Joseph Pear of Amusement Theatre Supply Company, New York, vice-president; E. L. Hurley of Clems Motion Picture Supply Company, Philadelphia, secretary; R. Perse of Capitol Motion Picture Supply Company, New York, treasurer. The board of directors is made up of Joseph Guercio, Paul Heuter, Henry Dusman and Arthur Marrone.

Among the manufacturers exhibiting equipment at the convention were Summerour and Devine, Inc.; Peabody Seating Company; Operadio Manufacturing Company; Hurley Screen Company; Metallic Arts Corporation; Lavezzi Machine Works; Albert Sprincin and Company; Wenzel Company; Da-Lite Screen Company; United Optical Company; Wagner Sign Service, Inc.; Continental Electric Company De-Fi Manufacturing Company; Goldberg Brothers; National Carbon Company; Baldor Electric Company; Forest Manufacturing Corporation; GoldE Manufacturing Company; Century Electric Company; Strong Electric Corporation; Motiograph, Inc.; Brenkert Light and Projection; Lighting Distributors, Inc., and Ideal Seating Company.

Braddock-Louis Fight Films

The Braddock-Louis fight pictures which will be distributed by Henri Elman through his Monogram-Capitol film exchanges in this territory, will open Wednesday morning in two Loop theatres. The Palace and the Apollo will play the films day and date. In the past few years the Palace has had first call on the fight pictures with at least one week's clearance over other Loop houses. This year B & K had an even break with the RKO house and the films will be shown in both theatres simultaneously.

Robbins Acquires Miller

Robbins Music Company, in which Loew's has a half interest, has taken over Miller Music, Inc., in New York. The company will be operated by Jack Robbins as a separate unit, the same as the Leo Feist company, which was acquired some years ago. Included in the Miller library are the scores of Vincent Youman's shows, "Great Day" and "Through the Years," the entire catalogue of the late William H. Woodin and songs by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

Asks Fee in Fox Case

The law firm of Wise, Shepard, Houghton and Hoffman have filed an application in the federal court at New York for $12,500 for legal services rendered to the Continental Bank and Trust Company, as trustees in reorganization for the Flatbush Ave. and Nevins Street Corporation, owners of the Fox Brooklyn theatres.

Film Column Dropped

Four Paul Block newspapers have dropped Eileen Percy's daily column of film news. The papers which had published the column for the last five years are the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, the Newark Star-Eagle, the Toledo Blade and the Milwaukee Sentinel.

New Animating Device Claimed

Animated cartoons with the third dimension of depth is claimed for a device invented by a Russian artist, according to Max H. Hoepli, who has arrived in New York from Paris to market the invention.

In addition, Mr. Hoepli claims that the new method of making cartoons requires less actual work and permits the artist to do more shading than is possible with the present system of making cartoons.

The invention is said by Mr. Hoepli to consist of a perforated screen with two-and-a-half-million black pins filling the holes. The pins, Mr. Hoepli explained, may be pushed in and out of the screen with a magnet or roller. When they project their full length, he continued, four brilliant lights located at the four corners of the screen cause them to cast criss-cross shadows that are a dense black. As the pins are pushed farther into the screen, Mr. Hoepli said, the shadows become lighter and it is in this manner that shading is attained.

"Cartoons," Mr. Hoepli declared, "become animated engravings instead of animated drawings."

He amplified this by asserting that with the new device, invented by A. Alexeiff and his assistant, Miss Clare Parker of Boston, the artist, makes only one drawing for a scene. This drawing, Mr. Hoepli explained, is projected on to the screen and the pins are pushed forward to outline the subjects. The background does not have to be changed, although the position of the figures is altered, he said. Each change in the position of the figures corresponds to another drawing and it is photographed, he concluded.

Mr. Hoepli, who resides at 157 East 172nd Street, New York, plans to open offices in New York.

Seven Theatres Built

Seven new theatres were constructed and 38 were transferred in the New York territory during the first three months of the year, according to the New York Film Board of Trade. The transfers included eight each in Brooklyn and New Jersey, seven in the upper New York area, six in Manhattan, five in Long Island and four in the Bronx. Two new houses were built in the Bronx and in New Jersey and one each in Manhattan, Brooklyn and upper New York State.

AMPA Has Swim Fest

Novelty races, comedy diving, miniature water polo and under water events featured a water carnival and swim fest held for members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers by Monty MacLevey at the Parc Vendome Pool, 363 West 56th Street. Marvin Nelson, three-time winner of the Toronto marathon swim, gave an exhibition.

FILMS FIND TELEVISION FAR AWAY AS WORLD'S FAIR SIGNS FOR 1939

Film Industry Concludes That Television's Picture Still Is Too Small, the Cost Too High and the Show Is Poor

The motion picture's formal and official estimation of television's status today is that the picture still is too small, the cost too high, the show poor and the patronage meagre.

Employing the report of a special scientific committee of the Research Council of its Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the organized industry in Hollywood now is studying the progress of television and its relation, present and future, to motion pictures. The Academy submitted its first report on May 15, 1936, and, in future, will prepare semi-annual reports—the next being planned for issuance in January of 1938.

"It is still improbable that television will burst on an unprepared motion picture industry," the report observed, adding the opinion that "many millions of dollars must be invested before a nationwide urban exploitation of television becomes possible in the United States." The start of such a development, it was said, was forecast for 1937-38. "But television service for rural areas is still beyond the calculable figure."

The one tangible technical improvement to which the Academy does call attention is in the design of electronic projection devices, which now give promise of a considerable enlargement of television screen areas, "the relation of which would vastly accelerate the evolution of television as a practical art."

Nine engineers of the Research Council of the Academy, in presenting its second annual report on television, made no wild predictions of the new development's "being just around the corner." However, they did warn that "the time is not far off when those engaged in motion picture production, and others whose interests are likely to be affected by the evolution of this new field, will do well to acquire as much familiarity as possible with its characteristics and methods."

Commenting extensively on the British television experiments, in which the coronation process was televised, the committee said:

"The (British) accomplishments may be summed up as follows:

"Regular tranmissions for two hours a day over a period of seven months, using an all-electronic system with 405 lines and 50 pictures a second, interlaced.

"The sale of 1,000 television receivers in a highly populous area within, roughly, a 60-mile radius from the transmitter.

"The development of technique and operating organization, including multi-camera pick-up, studio procedure, special effects, training of personnel, accumulation of engineering data, etc.

Comparing the American developments, the committee, consisting of Carl Dreher, chairman; Gordon Chambers, L. E. Clark, J. G. Frayne, Barton Kreuzer, Wesley C. Miller, Hollis Moyse, William Mueller and Gordon S. Mitchell, Council manager, declared that the active television interests have accepted the Radio Manufacturers Association standard of 441 lines, a frame frequency of 30 pictures a second, a field frequency of 60 pictures a second, interlaced, and an aspect ratio of 4:3, the same as in motion pictures.

"Both here and abroad," the report said, "systematic engineering progress is being made in the development of high-definition television. The situation has reached a point where it warrants careful observation and analysis.

"As soon as large pictures are available with the requisite photographic quality, television may be expected to gain marked impetus, and commercial application in the larger urban centers will not be long delayed.

The committee pointed out that although most American television experiments have taken place in New York, the next urban center for development of television will be Los Angeles, which because of its topography suitable for the erection of high transmission towers, free from interference of "radio shadows" caused by tall buildings, has more favorable conditions.

The Council's Report

The Research Council's complete findings of television, as it stands today, follow:

"The members of the reporting committee are too well aware of both the potentialities and uncertainties of technological research to claim infallibility for such predictions as their task entails. It happens, however, that only one of the forecasts contained in the 1936 report requires, as yet, any essential modification. In every other particular the 1936 report is as valid now as when it was issued. To quote from that report, it is still improbable that television will burst on an unprepared motion picture industry; many millions of dollars must be invested before nationwide urban exploitation of television becomes possible in the United States; the start of such a development, forecast for 1937-38, is confirmed; television service for rural areas is still beyond the calculable future.

"The one change to which we would call attention is that recent improvements in the design of electronic projection devices give promise of a considerable enlargement of television screen areas, the realization of which would vastly accelerate the evolution of television as a practical art.

The British Experiment

"It is legitimately claimed for the transmissions inaugurated from the Alexandria Palace in London, on November 2, 1936, that they constitute the first and only existing public television service. For this achievement the British Broadcasting Company, the Marconi-Electrical Musical Industries, the receiver manufacturers, and the other governmental and private interests involved deserve the credit due to pioneers in a difficult field. Looked at realistically, however, theirs is still an experiment, as is any enterprise in which more problems are raised than solved.

"The accomplishments may be summed up as follows:

"(1) Regular transmissions for two hours a day over a period of seven months, using an all-electronic system with 405 lines and 50 pictures a second, interlaced.

"(2) The sale of not over 1,000 television receivers in a highly populous area within, roughly, a 60-mile radius from the transmitter.

"(3) The development of technique and operating organization, including multi-camera pick-up, studio procedure, special effects, training of personnel, accumulation of engineering data, etc.

"(4) As a special event, the televising of the Coronation procession, under adverse weather conditions, to some thousands of viewers.

"Our British correspondents agree, however,

World's Television Developments, RCA's Agreement for Television at Fair, and New Advances in London and Berlin

The greatest public attention given in this country to television to date came this week when David Sarnoff, for RCA, and Grover Whalen, chairman of the 1939 New York World's Fair, signed a contract placing television in the fair, as "a major attraction." Signing of the agreement was attended by the first ceremony of its kind ever to be televised, going out from the television studio of the Radio Corporation's National Broadcasting headquarters in the RCA Building at Rockefeller Center, where representatives of the press both saw and heard the major participants, Mr. Sarnoff, Mr. Whalen and Lenor R. Lohr, NBC president.

Additional television developments this week were noted in London, Los Angeles, Berlin and New York.

In London, observers were said by Bruce Allan, Motion Picture Herald correspondent, to have noticed considerable advancements in television at an exhibition held in connection with the opening of the Science Museum, at South Kensington, and in which the British Broadcasting Corporation participated. A display of early apparatus and components was combined with room-to-room transmission by standard television receivers as at present sold to the public.

"The screen quality of the pictures shown was excellent, and singularly uniform in all the different sets," wrote Mr. Allan. "The picture was very clear and there was a notable absence of flicker," he added.

"A five-foot by four-foot picture shown by Scophony, Ltd., transmitting from a laboratory two miles distant, was less clear and there was a distinct flicker," Mr. Allan concluded.

The British Broadcasting Corporation is understood to be considering the production of films for television broadcasting, at the Cricklewood Studios, under the direction of Dallas Bower. The first picture would be a history of television.

Meanwhile, Scophony, Ltd., in a statement to shareholders, claims that its medium receiver gives a dependable television picture, for actual theatre use, measuring five feet by four feet, and that its latest home receiver shows a picture measuring 24 inches by 22 inches. In both cases, still larger pictures are promised as a result of present experiments, said the company.

Scophony, of which Arthur Levey, Oscar Deutsch and S. Sagall are the principal directors, has received an order from the Soviet Government to install both transmission and receiving television apparatus in the Soviet Television Station at Moscow.

London also sends word that the Marconi-EMI Company is understood to have developed its Emitron television instrument to the point where a camera ten times as sensitive as any yet operated will soon be available, probably for use in the television studios of British Broadcasting. It is said that the development will permit the televising of scenes in indifferent lighting and the transmission from interiors not on the following adverse conclusions:

ACADEMY REPORTS ON TELEVISION

"(1) The received pictures, which are of the order of seven and one-half by 10 inches, are too small to afford more than scant entertainment value, even if other technical difficulties, such as a consistent lack of definition in the longer shots, are overcome in due course.

"(2) The cost of the receivers, 60 and 80 pounds ($278.70 and $371.60) makes television a toy of the well-to-do.

"(3) The theatrical content of the video broadcasts has rarely risen above the level of mediocrity.

"In short, the picture is small, the cost high, the show poor, and the patronage meagre. Even allowing for the success of the Coronation visual broadcast, we have to date an entertainment tour de force, rather than a spontaneous growth in answer to a genuine public demand. As for the economic question, it is no nearer solution than when the experiment was inaugurated. It is argued that if larger governmental subsidies can be secured, better shows will become available, and eventually widespread public interest and participation can be enlisted. Perhaps so. In the United States a few thousand radio amateurs listened to the Highbridge audio broadcasts in 1916; a few years later the number of broadcast listeners had risen into the millions. In the case of British television it is too early to draw conclusions.

American Developments

"In the United States the active television interests have accepted the Radio Manufacturers Association standard of 441 lines, a frame frequency of 30 pictures a second, a field frequency of 60 pictures a second, interlaced, and an aspect ratio of 4:3, the same as in motion pictures. These are the present characteristics of the test transmissions by the National Broadcasting Company from the Empire State Tower in New York, which are the nearest American equivalent to the British operations reviewed above. (The former, however, is not a public service; the receivers, of which there are over 100, being in the hands of RCA executives and engineers who report confidentially on the results.) The shows originate in a special studio in the RCA Building and are relayed to the transmitter over a coaxial cable and a radio link between the two buildings, whose airline separation is under one mile. The power of the transmitter, 7.5 kilowatts, is sufficient to lay down a satisfactory signal on the optical horizon, which is some 43 miles from the top of the 1,250-foot tower.

"The size of the received pictures is about the same as in the British case: seven and one-half by ten inches. Such a picture is afforded by a 12½-inch cathode ray tube, a size readily manufactured in the present state of the art.

"This experimental service has been in operation for about 11 months, with an interval to permit changing the transmitter from the earlier 343-line standard to 441 lines, and some briefer interruptions. A mass of data on the technique of televising, electrical interference conditions, signal distribution, etc., has been and is being collected. Papers describing the technical aspects of the research are presented periodically before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, the Institute of Radio Engineers, and other recognized bodies. In connection with one of the most recent of these papers there was a demonstration on a scale as large as ten by eight feet, using optical projection from a kinescope equipped with a suitable lens system, with, it is said, impressive results. (Similar experiments have been carried on in Germany, but there it was reported that the optical quality of the larger pictures was unsatisfactory.)

"Occasional television programs are transmitted from a Philco station in Philadelphia, and others. The Columbia Broadcasting System has announced its intention of installing a television transmitter on the Chrysler Tower in New York.

Other Developments Abroad

"In Germany there is considerable television activity. Scenes from the Olympic Games were televised, but apparently the results were unimpressive. In France the forthcoming installation of a 30-kilowatt transmitter on the Eiffel Tower is announced. There are also reports of Russian purchases of television equipment in the United States.

General Considerations

"Both here and abroad, systematic engineering progress is being made in the development of high-definition television. The situation has reached a point where it warrants careful study and observation. Just as the physical equipment required cannot be brought into existence quickly, it is impossible to acquire a background in a field as complex as television overnight, and study well in advance is a prerequisite of wise and economical planning. The time is not far off when those engaged in motion picture production, and others whose interests are likely to be affected by the evolution of this new field, will do well to acquire as much familiarity as possible with its characteristics and methods.

"We recur to the question of picture size. As soon as larger pictures are available with the requisite photographic quality, television may be expected to gain marked impetus, and commercial application in the larger urban centers will not be long delayed. The lesson to be derived from the British experience to date may be that when those in a position to gauge entertainment value advise that a given picture size is inadequate for successful commercial application, no purpose is served by trying it out on the public. The likelihood of a favorable verdict does not increase with the size of the jury.

"For the United States, it is to be hoped that no attempt will be made to commercialize home television until a picture equivalent in definition to the best home-movie projection, and not smaller than 24 by 18 inches, can be furnished with routine reliability. The most important interests in the domestic field appear to be committed to some such prudent policy.

The Situation in Los Angeles

"New York and Los Angeles together constitute the principal reservoirs of movie, radio, and television talent in this country. It may be expected, therefore, that when the problems of providing television service for the New York area are well on the way to solution, say in 1938 or early 1939, the next major urban area selected for television coverage will be that of Los Angeles. The topographical and physical conditions in the two regions are quite different, and, it would appear, are on the whole more favorable in the West.

"In New York the land elevations are relatively low, no point in any of the five boroughs, excepting Station Island, being as high as 300 feet above sea level. To secure short-wave covering, therefore, it is necessary to radiate from high buildings, of which there is no scarcity. However, the mass of steel structures on Manhattan Island of necessity casts radio shadows which complicate the problem of television distribution.

"Los Angeles, in contrast, is a city of low structures, but natural elevation provide numerous sites from which television service could be effectively provided."

Television Signed For World's Fair

especially lit, such as Westminister Abbey, the Albert Hall and West End theatres.

From Berlin comes a description of a newly developed television device which is said to combine a film projector with a "picture catcher" tube. It is now being shown in the German Post Administration's display of television in the German Pavilion at the Paris Exposition. The catcher, it is said, may be exchanged against another without interruption or phrase regulation, so films and open-air scenes may be alternately televised by interchanging the picture-catcher established on the roof of the pavilion and another such instrument placed in the hall.

In Los Angeles, Dr. Lee De Forest, radio pioneer, is reputed to have asserted that the cathode beam now being employed by television engineers, is not practical, and that successful commercialization of television awaits a concentration upon a mechanical plane.

Benjamin S. Moss, pioneer theatre operator, returned to New York from Paris and London, to where he traveled for the purpose of surveying latest television developments with a view to installing television, eventually, in one of his Broadway theatres. Mr. Moss brought back with him a complete television broadcasting and receiving equipment.

Television at World's Fair

By the terms of the agreement between RCA-NBC and the World's Fair, RCA will construct on the Fair Ground in New York City a building which will house a complete exhibition of all branches of the radio art and its developments. Facilities will be provided for demonstration of all aspects of radio and television.

This building, linked directly with the NBC television transmitter on the Empire State Building, will televise outstanding World's Fair events, and will bring to visitors, for the first time in American radio history, joint demonstrations of sound and sight broadcasting.

"The complete story of radio will be told to Fair visitors, Mr. Sarnoff declared at the the ceremony. We shall show how radio safeguards the passage of ships at sea, and the flight of ships in the air. We shall maintain a radio communications center at the fair, so that visitors may send Radiograms to any part of the world and to ships on the seven seas. We shall demonstrate how photographs are transmitted across the ocean by radio.

"Our exhibit will include the most modern equipment for recording sound in motion picture studios, and reproducing it in theatres, and we will demonstrate how the music of the world is recorded and reproduced on records.

"The youngest child in the family of RCA is of course—television. This infant is not yet out of the nursery, but is now learning to walk and to talk. The progress we are making daily in the development of transmitting sight through space gives promise that by the time the World's Fair opens in 1939 television will be greatly advanced over its present-day position.

"While the problems of developing a nationwide television system are enormous, we have faith in the future of this new radio art. Television is bound to have a profound influence on the lives of all of us. It will extend but not replace our present-day system of radio broadcasting."

Silver Jubilee of Frederick Mercy's Independent Circuit Is Observed

TWENTY-FIVE years ago this month, Frederick Mercy turned to the fertile Yakima Valley in Washington to plant his ideas for the exhibition of motion pictures. Today, the motion picture and the communities alike in those parts are duly observing "Frederick Mercy Silver Jubilee," with the principal attention coming, publicly from both citizens and Chambers of Commerce, in towns of Yakima, Walla Walla, Toppenish, Pasco, Sunnyside and Kennewick, where the properties of the pioneer now stand.

Banquets have been tendered Mr. Mercy in each of the six towns in which he operates. In each case the Chamber of Commerce sponsored the testimonial on its own.

Starting with the Majestic Theatre in Yakima, in June, 1912, the Mercy circuit has progressed until it now includes some 14 theatres, five of them in Yakima, three in Walla Walla, two in Toppenish and one each in Pasco, Kennewick and Sunnyside. Only the other day, Mr. Mercy ordered construction of the 15th, to be called the Liberty, extending his holdings into Ellensburg, and which will open on August 15th.

All of the Mercy theatres are owned directly by the Mercy operating company, and the progress of the firm has been steady without the complications of outside interlocking. No rental properties are operated by the company—which in itself is unusual with independent circuit operators—and among the 14 houses are included several which are generally admitted to be the finest in the northwest. Notable among them is the Capitol, in Yakima, seating 2,000, the "flagship" of the fleet.

The keynote being sounded at the Silver Jubilee banquets is that Mr. Mercy has been out front in keeping pace with both motion picture and business progress and never has hesitated to scrap a property or equipment at the first sign of antiquation. He has remodeled several of his properties many times down through the years.

In connection with the opening of the celebration, newspapers in each of the six towns published special sections to honor the exhibitor and his Jubilee. Pages and pages of congratulatory messages and pictures were included.

H. A. Gillespie, advertising manager for the circuit, said that the spontaneity of the Jubilee celebration was greater than any with which he has been connected in 20 years of publicity in exhibition and elsewhere. It came wholly unexpectedly to Mr. Mercy. It had been initiated by his son, Frederick, Jr., secretary of the Mercy Yakima Valley Theatres, who was assisted in arrangements by Arch Bartholet, division manager of the circuit, by Mr. Gillespie, and by the local managers of all the theatres, including J. E. Wright, city manager at Walla Walla; C. M. Wight, of Pasco; Don Visger, Kennewick; A. MacArthur, Toppenish, and C. A. Baldwin, Sunnyside.

FREDERICK MERCY

Few are aware that Frederick Mercy, Sr., really started in exhibition 27, and not 25 years ago. Although his Yakima Valley beginnings date back just a quarter of a century this month, and which now is the occasion for the celebration, he spent two years prior to that operating in the little town of Georgetown.

He is one of the few pioneers still living who played Adolph Zukor's first feature, "Queen Elizabeth," in 1912, and before that screened only short subjects.

Two years ago Mr. Mercy took his three sons into full partnership. Besides Frederick, Jr., who has headquarters in Seattle and is in charge of booking for the circuit, there are Edgar, now attending a poster advertising school in Chicago, and Paul, who started this week on a 'round-the-world sail aboard the S. S. President Adams.

The Mercys also operate the Yakima Valley Poster Service, of which S. G. Turner is manager. This outdoor advertising plant practically parallels the theatre circuit both in growth and operations. In this position, Mr. Mercy this week received from Clarence D. Martin, Governor of Washington, an appointment to membership on the State of Washington Advertising Commission.

Annual Equity Report Made by Treasurer

The annual report of the treasurer of the Actors' Equity Association was made this week in New York and showed assets totalling $481,945.37. This included cash in banks and on hand to the amount of $126,279.33; investments at cost and accrued interest of $106,587.41; cash in banks and securities held on deposit from theatrical companies of $53,000, and the Actors' Equity Realty Corporation of $185,027.06. The association's liabilities, totalling $481,945.37, included accruals and audited vouchers payable to the amount of $2,003.97; legal claims collected payable to members, $29,708.03; security deposits, $94,290.00; deferred credit to income, $664.47; reserves, $6,272.51, and surplus, $349,006.39.

In the association's legal report, it was shown that the number of arbitrations instituted on behalf of members decreased 17 per cent from the number last year. The Arbitration Committee's report showed that 19 arbitrations had been instituted, involving a total of over $32,000.

Meanwhile, the association's members, this week, voted to remove the secret ballot on all questions considered by the membership.

Entertainers Tour In Covered Wagon

A horse drawn covered wagon, carrying entertainers, is being sent on a tour of approximately 250 cities as part of Chicago's 100th anniversary celebration of the granting of its charter. The entertainers will supervise talent contests and the winners of the contests will go to Chicago for semi-final tests on August 23rd and 24th. The final winner will be given a screen test at RKO Radio's Hollywood studio.

All English Odeon Companies Merged

Eighty-six companies owning the theatres included in the Oscar Deutsch Odeon circuit in London have held formal meetings to approve the merging of all companies into one. The move is preparatory to a public issue by Odeon, on a preference or debenture basis, probably of £4,000,000 of a total authorized capital of at least £8,000,000. United Artists has an interest in Odeon.

To Honor Kurtzman

A testimonial dinner in honor of Charles E. Kurtzman, head of the Kurtzman Agency, Inc., Ambassador Theatre Building, St. Louis, is being planned by a group of his friends. Mr. Kurtzman recently sold his interest in the Kurtzman agency and also his stock in corporations interested in the Fanchon and Marco theatres in St. Louis. He plans to move to New York City about July 1.

HUNGARY USED 220 FEATURES IN 1936-37, HOLLYWOOD SENDING 64

Season Was Good for Product from U. S.; Speculators and Amateur Producers Now Will Be Barred from Production

by ENDRE HEVESI

in Budapest

With the end of May the 1936-'37 film season in Hungary has come practically to an end, for all the more important films have been released. Only less important pictures will be shown in June and July and these will not make much difference to the business results of the distributing firms.

From August 1936 to the end of July 1937, 220 features have been released in Hungary, including films to be released in June and July. Of this number 64 were from Hollywood and 24 were Hungarian-speaking films made in Budapest. The Hungarian market was secured for these films as movies are compelled to recruit 20% of their programs from Hungarian-speaking pictures. Certain of this market, Hungarian producers were very eager to make films during the past season, especially so because local films had grown in popularity during the season 1935-'36. Unfortunately, the 1936-'37 season was not as prosperous for local producers as they had expected. The pictures shown during this season had deteriorated in quality and the immediate result was that the public of Budapest first run houses which had only recently begun to patronize locally made films again fell away from them.

Of the 24 Hungarian films, only five had real box-office success in Budapest first-run theatres. Of course, neighborhood and provincial audiences still like Hungarian-speaking films, but naturally even they greatly prefer the good local films to the inferior product. Towards the end of the season, it grew evident that even this public, for whom the fact that locally-made films are Hungarian-speaking, is of greater importance than any other quality, was beginning to get tired of the bad Hungarian films which were all made after the same pattern. The weak Hungarian films are losing ground even in the provinces, which so far have been their stronghold. Even so, in provincial movies a bad Hungarian picture still obtains box-office receipts which are five or six times as high as those of a good American film.

FORTUNE SURVEY FINDS SINGLE FEATURE FAVORED

In its ninth quarterly survey, Fortune Magazine, in its issue of June 21, 1937, reports that the replies of "more than one per cent of the public showed that:

"A thorn in the side of the movie industry is the double feature program, which it is trying to eradicate as fast as it thinks the public is welling. To find out how willing the public is to go to a theatre to see one feature, plus whatever miscellaneous fare it is offered, this question was asked, and the answers are conclusive enough: Which do you prefer?

	Answers
Double features	21.7%
One feature and good shorts.	63.9%
No preference	3.1%
Don't go to movies........	11.3%*

*"In the Survey for April, 1936, 15.7 per cent said they did not go. The discrepancy between this and the answers here and on the star-preference question is probably accounted for by infrequent movie-goers who have seen enough of them to pick out their favorites.

"All kinds and conditions of people agree that they prefer single features, although the poor like double features twice as much as the prosperous, presumably because they think they get more for their money."

A certain amount of irresponsibility characterized Hungarian film production this year. Many producers started to make films without proper financial backing and without any artistic and technical experience. They themselves lost very little because they invested very little capital, but the creditors advanced cash and material and lost considerably. This situation was disadvantageous for the whole trade. The movies which released the bad films made by these inexperienced producers, suffered because their public was dissatisfied with the performance. Even the studios felt the bad effects of this unhealthy system. It happened in many cases during the past season that several producing firms could not pay studio charges. In one case the hitherto unprecedented thing happened that a Hungarian film could not get bookings from any Budapest first run movie. The Minister for Home Affairs had to use his authority to compel two first run movies, which had a very good season, to release the film in question.

Trade Warned

Such cases warned the trade and also official circles that something must be done about the prevailing situation. Forty Hungarian films have been planned by producers, with and without capital of their own, for the next season. If they would all be made and such a large percentage would be of bad quality as was the case last year, a catastrophe of the film industry and the distributing trade could not be averted. Luckily, the authorities will probably interfere. Up till now they had furthered the growth of local film production in every respect, but now they seem to have realized that this unlimited and uncritical production is anything but advantageous for the future of Hungarian films.

It is rumored that a limit will be set to local production officially. According to the plan, the state-owned Hunnia Studio will be leased only to producers who can guarantee sufficient financial means and adequate artistic experience to make films of good quality. Speculators and amateur producers with insufficient means will be barred. Although there is room for 30 to 35 films to be made in the three Hunnia studios yearly, it is planned that only 12 to 15 Hungarian films are to be shot in these studios next year. For the rest of the time, Hunnia will either be leased to foreign producers or remain dark. The other studio, the private property of Filmiroda, can be used for only about 12 pictures a year. If this restriction is brought into practice, no more than 25 to 27 Hungarian pictures can be made locally in the 1937-'38 season. Hunnia would prefer its studios to remain empty for a few weeks rather than lose considerable sums as it did in the last season. In one case Hunnia management was compelled to have the negative of a newly made Hungarian picture sold by auction because in no other way could they get back the 60,000 pengös (12,000 dollars) which the producing firm owed them.

Would Aid U. S. Films

This reform would greatly benefit the Hungarian market. Of course American films would also greatly profit by this self-imposed limitation of Hungarian production. Forty Hungarian films, even if the majority is of deplorable quality, would be a heavy blow to American film companies. It would mean that in the country, where movies have performances once or twice a week only, American pictures would have no chance of release at all, owing to the great number of Hungarian films that would flood the market. Limited number but good quality is obviously as essential for Hungarian films as it is for American ones.

The local branches of American companies adhered to this principle last season. Most of them imported big features rather than a great number of less important films. They realized that it is not the quantity but the quality that is important if they want to make good in Hungary. If they carry this practice to even greater length, they will achieve satisfactory business results in the future.

The following list shows the takings of the branch offices of five American companies and those of the German Ufa from August 1st, 1936, to March 31st, 1937:

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer leased 20 features during these eight months and their takings were 534,000 pengos ($107,000);

Twentieth Century-Fox showed 16 features, took 475,000 pengos ($95,000);

Paramount showed 10 features, took 214-000 pengos ($42,500);

Warner showed 12 features, took 184,000 pengos ($36,500);

Universal showed 5 features and 11 westerns (cut shorter) and made 141,000 pengos ($28,000).

The local branch of the German Ufa released 20 features; 18 of these were imported from Germany and 2 were made in Hungary by local producers and distributed by the local branch of Ufa. These two Hungarian films alone made of 250,000 Pengös ($50,000). The 18 imported German features together made 265,000 Pengös ($53,000).

MGM's outstanding success was "Camille," the greatest hit of the season. About 100,000 persons, 10% of the entire population of Budapest, have seen the picture in the first eight weeks of its run in Metro's own first run house. The film will run until September in subsequent deluxe movies. Other big Metro hits were: "Rose Mary," "Night at the Opera," "San Francisco," "Wife Versus Secretary." Two big features, "Great Ziegfeld" and "Romeo and Juliet," failed to hit the mark; their takings were far below the expected sums. "Born to Dance" was not so popular as last year's "Broadway Melody," although Eleanor Powell has many fans here. "Gorgeous Hussy" was a disastrous failure. Its historical background did not interest local audiences and the end of the film caused tremendous laughter and ridicule. When the hero and heroine declared that they were going to beautiful and peaceful Spain where they could live in peace, the public roared with laughter.

20th-Fox Gains Ground

Twentieth Century-Fox gained ground considerably on the local market. The biggest successes were: "Poor Little Rich Girl," "Girls' Dormitory," "Message to Garcia," "Under Two Flags," "Shark Island" and "Private Number." Big failures were: "Country Doctor," "To Mary with Love" and "Ladies in Love." This latter owed its failure to the carelessness with which the Hungarian scenes were produced. Scenes which happened in Budapest were accompanied by Vienna music; when a view of Budapest was shown, the orchestra played "Wien, Wien, nur du allein" ("Vienna, Vienna, You Are the Only City for Me") and finally a well-known building of Budapest was represented as being in quite a different district from where it really is, with a non-existing Turkish cafe opposite. Such minor faults nearly invariably occur in American made films with a Hungarian background. They ruin the film's chances by evoking annoyed ridicule from local audiences.

Paramount had no outstanding hit in the last season. "Jungle Princess," "General Dies at Dawn," "Plainsman," "Texas Rangers," "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" did fair business. "Champagne Waltz," on the other hand, was a big failure.

One of the season's greatest hits was Warner's "Charge of the Light Brigade." Other good, b.o. takings were attained by "Pasteur" and "Anthony Adverse," although both scored less than was expected from them. "White Angel" was a failure.

The new Universal had two considerable successes: "Three Smart Girls" and "My Man Godfrey." Universal had hardly done anything on the local market in 1936, but in 1937 did well with these films. They also had 11 Western films cut down to a length of 1,000 metres and distributed them in neighborhood and provincial movies as accompanying shorts.

Columbia has no local branch here and no local distributing firm has taken over the distribution of their products.

RKO have no local branch either, but their products are distributed by a Hungarian distributing firm. Their best b.o. successes were the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers pictures and "Mary of Scotland." "Dancing Pirates" was a failure.

Few Barred by Censors

Only few American films were banned by the Censors because the local branches were careful and did not import films which they knew would be rejected. Gangster films have no hope of being passed in Hungary. But apart from these and crime films, a few films were banned for interesting reasons. "Green Pastures" and "Maid of Salem" were rejected owing to religious reasons and "Road to Glory" because of its pacifist tendency.

The profits on German films decreased this season. Independent Hungarian producers imported very few German films and none of these was more than fairly successful. Ufa, the local branch of which distributes the best products of the present German film industry, cannot boast of very good results either. The gross scored by German films is far below that of American pictures, despite the fact that German is understood by considerably more people in Hungary than English.

A few French films made good business here, especially in Budapest first run houses. British films, however, cannot win the hearts of local audiences. No British film did good business in Hungary in the past season. Austrian films, which had done quite well in previous years, fell back considerably.

National Decency Legion Classifies 16 Productions

Of 16 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week 11 were approved for general patronage and five were found unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Black Aces," "Doomed at Sundown," "Famijen som var en Karusell," "Fizessen Nagysad," "The Girl Said No," "Love in a Bungalow," "Married Before Breakfast," "One Mile from Heaven," "Punks kommt aus Amerika," "Two-Fisted Sheriff," "Yodelin' Kid from Pine Ridge." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Another Dawn," "Midnight Madonna," "Slave Ship," "The Road Back," "She Had to Eat."

Weinberger to Head Sales for Certified

Mack D. Weinberger, who recently resigned as sales manager of General Pictures, has joined Certified Pictures in a similar post. Certified, according to an announcement, will distribute 34 pictures next season, 12 to be produced by the company and the others from independent companies. Franchise holders are expected to be lined up in every key center within a month.

FROM READERS

To the Editor of the Herald:

The writer just enjoyed a visit from Mrs. Jasen of California, who spent a very interesting forenoon with us at our home.

Mrs. Jasen was particularly interested in the Motion Picture Herald, and said she had often heard the Herald quoted. She gave us a very descriptive description of the making of the picture "Garden of Allah," as to detail used and amount of money it took to produce it. Many scenes were taken on her friend's ranch.

Her boy was tried out for a part in "Tom Sawyer," but was too small.

So we learn from day to day the value and wide circulation of the Motion Picture Herald.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can.

Governor Signs Anti-Ascap Bill

Approval of the Cashman bill by Philip F. LaFollette, governor, has placed Wisconsin in line with five other states which have enacted laws that virtually prohibit activity by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to which royalty fees are paid by radio broadcasting stations, theatres, hotels and other entertainment places where copyrighted music is played.

Specifically, the Cashman bill levies a 25 per cent tax on music brokers' receipts from licenses issued for the public rendition of copyrighted music. It also provides for a $20 annual license fee for investigators.

Other states with laws barring operation by Ascap are Michigan, Florida, Washington, Nebraska and Montana. Suits contesting the validity of the laws in all five states either have been filed or are being prepared by Schwarth and Frohlich, Ascap counsel.

Ascap was denounced at the opening of the National Association of Broadcasters convention in Chicago this week when Ed Craney of Station KGIR, Butte, Montana, declared conditions as outlined by Ascap officials were untrue in most instances. All broadcasters want, Mr. Craney asserted, is honest legislation and protection from infringement suits and a chance to pay those who deserved money for their music instead of numerous others. He stated the money was not going to the right people and until it did the situation would be unhealthy for all. Composers and the rightful parties are not getting their share or anywhere near it, he declared. The NAB, he continued, does not object to the price paid but it does object to whom the money is paid.

Mississippi MPTO To Meet July 18-19

State and Federal tax problems will be among the questions discussed when the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Mississippi convenes in Biloxi for its annual convention July 18th and 19th.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, will speak at the session. Mr. Kuykendall also is planning to address the annual convention of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association at Birmingham, Ala., June 27th and 28th.

Walbrook as Apache

Anton Walbrook, who just has completed the part of the Prince Consort in the Herbert Wilcox "Victoria the Great," has been cast for a second Wilcox picture. He will play the lead in "The Rat," an adaptation of an Ivor Novello play which has been big box-office in England. His role is that of an Apache chief, and the settings for the most part will reproduce the Parisian underworld. To play opposite is Elizabeth Allan, who was opposite Walbrook in "Michael Strogoff."

The director of the picture will be Jack Raymond, who is in Paris getting background shots. The screen treatment of the story, which was made previously as a silent, is in the hands of Hans Rameau, who worked on the Walbrook vehicle "Maskerade." Marjorie Gaffney is writing the scenario.

Herbert Wilcox has a third Walbrook subject scheduled, but it must await completion of the star's Hollywood engagements. In the meantime he will, after his return from the American presentation of "Victoria the Great," produce Anna Neagle in the Technicolor version of "Nippy," the American title of which might well be "Tea Shop Girl."

Seven Finished

The total output in 1937 of the Warner-British studio at Teddington will be 14 features. Seven have been completed and two are currently on the floor. They are "Transatlantic Trouble," with Max Miller, and "From a Dark Stairway," with Hugh Williams and Chili Bouchier. Recently completed are "You Live and Learn," with Glenda Farrell and Claude Hulbert and "Change for a Sovereign," with Sir Seymour Hicks. Immediately planned are a Keith Falkner musical and a comedy-melodrama with Claude Hulbert, to be followed by another in which the latter will travesty long-distance swimming. Another Max Miller comedy and a second Falkner feature are scheduled for September.

The Teddington studio takes care of the British quota obligations of the Warner and First National distributing organizations in England. Irving Asher has also found time to discover, in Errol Flynn, a front rank star for Hollywood.

Barnes Gets Lead

For the Arnold Pressburger (British Cine-Alliance) production of "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," for London Films at Denham, Barry K. Barnes has been cast in the lead. It will be the first screen role of this twenty-eight-year-old actor, who has made an international reputation in the last seven years, and is now under a long-term screen contract to Pressburger. Hans Schwartz and Adrian Brunel are the directors.

COMPANY'S FIRST FILM COVERS ARCTIC FRONT

Roy Kellino started this week at Sound City on studio sequences for "The Last Adventurers," the first film of Conway Productions, using a cast which includes Roy Emerton, Peter Gawthorne, Linden Travers, Niall MacGuiness, Kay Walsh and Johnnie Schofield.

For the exterior scenes of this drama of trawling in the White Sea, a unit headed by H. Fraser Passmore has just returned from a four weeks' trip in Arctic waters. Eric Cross is chief cameraman.

Barnes started with a small part in the Charles Laughton stage play, "Paul the First." He had repertory experience in Hull and Edinburgh, played in "The White Assegai" in the West End, and in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at the Malvern Festival of 1930 and then spent a year in Australia before returning to London for "The Late Christopher Bean," "Flowers of the Forest," "Aunt of England" and "Spring Tide." That he will prove another Robert Donat is the hope of his present producer.

Of equal interest is the appearance in the chief woman role of Sophie Stewart, who has been due for stardom since her work in the Bergner "As You Like It," and more recently in the New World "Under the Red Robe." Francis Lister, Henry Oscar (as Robespierre) and Margaretta Scott are also cast.

Two in Work

With completion of the Jessie Matthews "Gangway," which is in the cutting room after seven weeks on the floor at Pinewood, Gaumont-British has only one production in progress for its major program, the Alfred Hitchcock version of Josephine Tey's "A Shilling for Candles." At the Gainsborough studio at Islington "Dr. Syn," with George Arliss, is still in progress, current activities being concerned with exteriors at Rye.

Hitchcock's cast at Pinewood now totals 73 speaking parts, the latest additions including Percy Marmont, playing father to Nova Pilbeam, Basil Radford, George Curzon, Jerry Verno, John Longden, George Merritt and H. F. Maltby. The director's treatment promises to be original; he will tell his story largely through the reactions of a bunch of everyday English people to the various incidents of a crime-and-escape story, in which Miss Pilbeam is a girl faced with a love or duty problem. As well as variety of character, "A Shilling for Candles" will have a wide range of settings; the camera will travel widely through the English countryside.

Itemized

Jessie Matthews and her husband Sonnie Hale are resting in Cornwall.

Nat Pendleton is in Paris, en route to Hollywood, after concluding his part in "Gangway."

Miklos Rozka, who is under contract to London Films, and wrote the background music to "Knight Without Armour," has been awarded the Franz Josef prize in Hungary. The award is made only once in three years to an outstanding composer.

Edmund Lowe is booked for Hollywood on the Normandie on June 24th.

Ned Mann got in on the Queen Mary with Alexander Korda and Murray Silverstone.

Joan Gardner (Mrs. Zoltan Korda) and her newly born son have left the Nursing Home.

Barbara Allen, "Perfect Girl," selected to represent the idea of national fitness, is being featured in a series of physical training films by G-B Instructional.

Ontario Censor Head Outlines New Rules

O. L. Silverthorne, chairman of the Ontario film censor board, following his recent attack on British film standards, in which he suggested the need for more censorship of British films, has outlined the new policy for his board in the viewing of pictures.

Among the censorship requirements which will act as the official guide for the Ontario board will be: disapproval of films ridiculing religious sects, or races; elimination of all matter which tends to debase morals; loose conduct between men and women will be barred; criminal methods and crimes which give instruction in crime through suggestion will be eliminated; prolonged or passionate love scenes, when suggestive of immorality, will be eliminated. Mr. Silverthorne declared also that the board will disapprove any films of a propaganda nature, or which are definitely partisan.

New London Trade Publication

A new motion picture trade paper, the Independent Sentinel, has begun publication in London. It is described in the first issue as presenting the case of the independent producer, exhibitor and distributor. There is no indication in the first issue of the identity of the publisher.

N.Y. OWNERS TO FIGHT CHANCE GAMES RETURN

Action to Combat Practice Is Taken After Loew's and RKO Resume in Manhattan

Independent exhibitors in New York this week declared "war" against Loew's and Radio-Keith-Orpheum for returning chance games to their theatres.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York unanimously adopted a resolution for the appointment of a committee to devise ways and means of combatting the return of chance games to Manhattan theatres, where they were recently discontinued, but reinstated, two weeks ago, both by Loew's and RKO.

The organization, in its bulletin, The Independent, attacked Loew's for its action and criticized the distributor's extended playing time, protection and preferential contracts. Loew theatres' "low admissions" were also cited as "unfair competition."

This attack against the Loew's chain of theatres came immediately after the circuit, along with RKO, announced last week that it was returning chance games to its theatres because the public was demanding them. Broadway, however, heard that the games were being brought back because of the refusal of independent theatres in competition to the Loew houses to discontinue the practice of giveaways.

Skouras Studying Move

Despite the fact that Loew's and RKO have reinstated games in their theatres, Skouras Theatres will not revive the practice, it was said at the circuit's New York headquarters. According to executives of Skouras, they believe it is a mistake to put games back during the summer months. However, the current moves are being watched closely, and unless something is done to do away with the practice, circuit executives feel they may be forced to return to Bank Night and Screeno.

Meanwhile, at Columbia, S. C., Governor Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina ended the chance game disputes in his state this week as he called to the attention of Sheriff J. H. McLeod of Kershaw County a ruling by the attorney general to the effect that Jack Pot and Bank Night come under the classification of lotteries.

But, in Denver, C. U. Yaeger, president of Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., Bank Night owners, was preparing to preside over a two-day convention, June 25-26, at Colorado Spring of Bank Night distributors. The convention was to open with a luncheon and dinner with only the second day taken up with business sessions under Claude Ezell. sales manager.

Further South, in Austin, Texas, theatre interests have filed a motion for a rehearing in the H. S. Cole Bank Night case, in which Judge O. S. Lattimer of the Texas court of criminal appeals ruled the game a lottery. Meanwhile, the game was dropped by Interstate Theatres in face of the announcement by Karl Hoblitzelle that they would be continued until the court of criminal appeals had ruled on the petition for a rehearing of the decision that it was a lottery. District Attorney John Shood at San Antonio had said that he would not interfere until the ruling had been handed down. Following the lead of Interstate, the Will Horowitz Homefolk Theatres at Houston also withdrew their free lotteries held twice weekly in the street before their four theatres.

Meanwhile, the grand jury of the criminal district court at Beaumont has been instructed by Judge R. A. Shivers to investigate Bank Night drawings. In a special charge, Judge Shivers told the jurors that the court of criminal appeals at Austin had ruled that the game as "commonly practiced by theatres" is a violation of the state gambling statutes.

Injunction Attacked

Attorneys for the Omaha Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association filed a 51-page brief with the supreme court at Lincoln, Neb., objecting to the allowance of a temporary injunction against Bank Night drawings asked by the attorney general of the state. They claim no final decision can be made until the referee appointed by the court reports. Meanwhile, exhibitors say they would suffer irreparable financial damage if the injunction is granted now.

An action which will determine whether or not Bank Night is a lottery in Oklahoma has been filed in Oklahoma City by O. P. Ludicke, a patron at the Victoria, against the theatre, Standard Theatres, Inc.; and Pat McGee, general manager. Mr. Ludicke asks $100, the amount of a prize, plus six per cent interest from April 28, when, he claims, he was refused admittance to the theatre to collect the prize after he alleges his name was called outside the theatre.

At Santa Fe, N. M., District Judge David Chavez, Jr., has ruled that the so-called Bank Night insurance is a violation of the state's lottery laws.

Coronation Color Film Will Open in Hollywood

The premiere of the All-Technicolor featurette, "The Coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth," set for Fdiday at the Carthay Circle theatre, Los Angeles, was paired the preview of "Wee Willie Winkie." Twentieth Century-Fox is distributor of both pictures.

National release for the Coronation films has been set for July 15, according to John D. Clark, general manager of distribution. Mr. Clark said that although July 15 is the national release date, several key-city runs will get the film on or about July 1.

In Story Department

Mrs. Doris Warner LeRoy. daughter of Harry Warner and wife of Mervyn LeRoy, has joined the story department of Twentieth Century-Fox. Mr. LeRoy produces his own pictures for release through Warner Brothers.

Ben Chapman has been named casting director of Major Productions, succeeding Veronica Grusling, who resigned recently.

Work Speeded on Brazilian Films

by L. S. MARINHO

in Rio de Janeiro

Brazilian motion picture production has been practically at a standstill during recent months, with no domestic product having been offered local theatres for some time. But now work has speeded up and it is expected that before the end of the year at least seven pictures will have been completed. The first will be "Maria Bonita," directed by Julian Mendel and starring Elaine Engel. The second will be "O Bobo do Rei," a play by Joracy Camargo, directed and played by Mesquitinha, prominent comedian. Cinedia, one of the major producing organizations, will soon start shooting on "Alegria," with Gilda de Abreu in the leading role.

The censor board of Brazil was asked to take action, through President Getulio Vargas, this week against Celestino Silveira, motion picture commentator over radio station Mayrink Veiga because of the criticisms of domestic short product and the "requests of the public not to attend theatres showing these films." Theatres in Brazil are now compelled by law to show at least one domestic short subject.

It was reported this week that the Companhia Brasileira de Cinemas would soon start construction on another theatre in Cinelandia, where practically all of Rio de Janeiro's first run houses are concentrated, to increase its total of theatres owned outright to seven. At the same time it was said that the organization was also taking over the Alhambra, which had formerly been operated by the Companhia Commercial e Immobiliaria.

Vital Ramos de Castro, owner of a circuit of second-run theatres, as well as the first run Plaza, will soon open his new Opera as another second run unit.

Albert Rosenvald, formerly assistant to John L. Day, Jr., at the Rio de Janeiro office of Fox, and later assistant to J. C. Bavetta when he took Mr. Day's post on his joining Paramount, this week resigned from the company after 23 years of service.

Zucker Heads Radio Office

Stanford Zucker of Cleveland has been named general manager of Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc., succeeding Gus Edwards, resigned. Other appointments include those of Milton Roemer as vice-president in charge of hotel and night club sales division, and Earl Thomas, who has been named radio theatre director.

LeRoy Plans Stage Play

A New York stage production of "They Won't Forget," which is now being prepared for release at the Warner Brothers west coast studio, is planned by Mervyn LeRoy, producer and director. It will be the first Broadway show produced and directed by Mr. LeRoy.

Although originally banned by the Ohio censor board, "Ecstasy" has been approved and will be shown at the Carter Theatre in Cleveland.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 73

Bluebook School Question No. 73 was: (A) What attention does the driving motor transmission require? (B) In general, describe what maintenance is required by speed control devices and what is the greatest help in tracing their troubles?

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; G. E. Doe; L. Cimikoski; C. Oldham; J. R. Prater; K. and R. Wells; W. C. Brown; T. F. Bochert; M. and J. Devoy; H. Edwards; C. Lonie; W. Limmroth; C. Champney; D. E. Birdsong; L. F. Hayes; H. B. Smith; C. L. Loft; O. H. Schmidt; W. Edmonds; J. A. Zachritz; W. McCollister; T. W. Redhouse; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; S. R. Hewitt; D. and W. Porter; A. H. Bradley; G. E. Michelson; W. C. Bant and L. M. Roberts; R. E. Bullard and J. K. Robinson; A. W. Baxter; P. and L. Felt; J. H. Morton; T. S. Randall; H. Lathrope and M. Dey; F. L. and L. Savlor; E. L. Sanford; S. H. Billings; B. and M. Walker; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; D. Smith; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; A. D. Lonby; E. M. Brown, D. Davis and W. L. Davis; L. F. and G. Brown; J. H. Morton; B. L. Cooper and T. L. Kent; L. B. Knox; S. C. Osborne; M. L. Grahame; E. F. and M. Wentworth; R. S. Welch; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; B. L. Sanderson; H. L. Jacobs; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; T. Turk; P. F. Maxwell and R. D. Hicks; N. G. Gee; L. B. Masters; A. C. Greene; T. L. Stobey; W. A. Kendal; R. H. Jones; T. B. Brown and W. V. Henderson; H. A. Ames, R. Dennis and F. E. Dorp; W. R. and L. Matthews; O. L. Goldstein and K. N. Alberts; H. T. Randolph; D. A. Shea and H. T. Plum; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd; J. W. Harrison; J. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; E. Exline; G. Caldwell; R. H. Carter; D. Stanhope; T. L. King.

Concerning Section A, Evans and Rau say, "The driving motor transmission should be properly lubricated with a lubricant recommended manufacturer. Tension of the drive belts or chain should be watched very carefully, in order that the undue strain resulting if it be too tight. If, however, it be too loose, a belt may slip, or a chain will be noisy. In either case unsteady speed of projector mechanism will occur, resulting in flutter and/or wows in the reproduced sound. Worn gear teeth and frayed belts should be watched for as they may cause a break-down while a show is in progress."

J. R. Prater says, "The driving motor transmission requires constant, careful attention as to lubrication and adjustments of belts or chains (as the case may be) and gear trains; also careful daily inspection of parts to the end that worn or deteriorated parts such as belts, chains, gear teeth, sprocket teeth, shafts, bearings and rubber or damping parts be detected before trouble occurs. Oil is injurious to rubber, hence must be kept away from all such parts.

"Excessive slack at any point, due to wear or lack of proper adjustment, may cause flutter or wows. Complete failure of any part may jam the whole machine and cause possible heavy damage, aside from show stoppage. Many types of transmission are now in use and it is the wise procedure to follow the manufacturer's recommendations exactly regarding lubrication, adjustments and care."

May I butt in to emphasize the high importance of regular, thorough inspection? Most troubles encountered in projection would be avoided (assuming requisitions for repairs and replacement parts to be promptly honored by managements) did the projectionist make regular, properly spaced, careful inspections. But be it remembered that merely glancing at a part does not comprise an inspection. Parts must be carefully examined, both individually and with relation to other parts they contact or have electrical connection with. Because something was quite all right yesterday is no proof it is all right today. Some parts should have careful daily inspection; others less frequent, but regularly spaced inspection. In this connection, examine page 212 of your Bluebook of Projection. On the wall of the projection room have a sheet of paper of proper size, white cardboard such as business cards are made from by preference, with inspection periods of various things marked. For example: Monday. All switches. Timing of projector rotating shutters. Test lost motion in projector mechanism gear trains and so on, with various things for each day, some marked every second, third or fourth Monday, Tuesday or whatever day selected for that article's inspection. Careful, regular inspections insures smooth, excellent operation, with trouble backed off the map. Lack of it is an invitation to trouble, which invitation usually is accepted.

(B) Charles Oldham replies, "Since speed control systems vary with different types of motor employed for projection, so do the maintenance requirements vary. Frequent inspections are necessary to insure constantly good operating condition.

"Where control cabinets are supplied for the motors, such as, for example, the Western Electric, which may be either a. c. or d. c., the circuits are of course very different. A large part of the troubles in these cabinets are nevertheless the same for both. The most frequent sources of trouble are easily corrected. They consist of faulty switch contacts and the contacts of the rheostat control that is employed for variable speeds being dirty or not properly adjusted. Defective tubes, loose connections or otherwise poor contacts, tube contact spring weak enough to not insure good contact with tube prongs. On a single phase induction motor, which also is used, the fingers of the short-circuiting disc must be kept clean, as well as the commutator and brush contacts. The centrifugal switch must not be permitted to bind from any cause or else short-circuiting the commutator when up to speed may occur. If this happens the motor of course cannot run as a regular induction motor, thus causing the starting resistance, that is connected in series with the brushes, to burn out. The synchronous motor depends upon frequency of the power supply for its speed. If that frequency is steady such motors give very little trouble. Such trouble as occurs may usually be traced to either a blown fuse or a burned-out starting resistance. A voltmeter is helpful in locating some of the troubles of speed control devices."

W. C. Brown says, "Speed control devices in general require but little care. Vacuum tube types should have their tubes checked periodically. Governor types should have their contacts inspected and cleaned with crocus cloth at regular intervals. Tubeless types require practically no attention except regular inspection of contacts and correction of any faults found. Synchronous motors require only that regular care that any motor should receive."

In addition to which, very many properly stressed cleanliness, which always is of high importance in machinery of every type and kind, especially where oil is used, or the equipment is exposed to the atmosphere, which invariably carries within more or less dust.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 79

(A) Do you believe the tendency to give circuit theatre house managers only very limited authority is wise?

This question is not intended as in criticism of the system, but is asked because I think it very possible some views and ideas that may be helpful generally may result.

Commissioner Told Of Union's Refusal

Harold Warren, projectionist and owner of a theatre in Port Alberni, B. C., informed a government commissioner in Vancouver the projection's union refused to send him a substitute operator when it learned he planned to testify for the theatre owners in their dispute with the union.

The commissioner, J. M. Coady, was appointed by the provincial government to arbitrate the owners' request and the union's refusal to change regulations so as to permit an apprentice to replace one of the two qualified projectionists which are on duty in each booth.

State Department Complains About Ambassadors in Films

With the same dignity it claims for its members, the State Department in Washington has issued a complaint against the motion picture version of diplomats.

The ambassador depicted in films—the one with diamond studs in his shirt, a monocle in his eye and a beautiful woman in his life—doesn't exist in real life, the diplomats insisted, according to the United Press.

And to prove their point, the diplomats point to the department's official photograph album. Some of the ambassadors pictured in the book are handsome but mostly they have bald spots, bay windows and bone-rimmed glasses, the press association explained. Furthermore, virtually all of them are married.

The lament concerning movie diplomats was published in the American Foreign Service Journal, official publication of the Foreign Service Association of which Cordell Hull, secretary of state, is honorary president.

One development, however, which the diplomats are hoping is a good omen is the fact that a film producing company recently requested two copies of the State Department's photographic register. It shows the faces of every man in the diplomatic corps but it also shows all the buildings the department uses as embassies and this is the reason, diplomats fear, the film company wanted the books.

U.S. Concludes Business Census

With the completion this week of its general business census project, covering general business operations for 1935, the Bureau of the Census has closed its quarters at 2401 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, and is moving its files and records to the Commerce Building in Washington, abandoning the Philadelphia branch, which was established for the express purpose of conducting the nation-wide census of business, including the motion picture, under the direction of Fred A. Gosnell, chief statistician for business.

Future correspondence relating to the census of business or any other census matters should be addressed to the Bureau of the Census, Washington, and not to Philadelphia.

The Census of Business received and tabulated a total of 3,000,000 schedules on all phases of business. In addition to preliminary and interim reports on many subjects, there were published in volume form a total of 35 final reports, including a report on places of amusement, and published in Motion Picture Herald on March 27th, page 33.

The extent to which motion picture exhibition represents the backbone of American amusements was graphically shown in the census of reports on amusements. From these it was determined that American film exhibition conducts one-third of all American amusement places, yet employs 59 per cent of all amusement employment, pays 64 per cent of all amusement payrolls, and grosses 73 per cent of all amusement receipts.

Final figures on the 1935 census of amusements, made public by the United States Census Bureau disclosed:

1. 157,789 persons were employed in all amusements, and 93,052 of them, or 59 per cent, were in motion picture theatres.

2. $159,641,000 represented the entire amusement payroll, while motion picture theatres' payroll was 64 per cent of this, or $102,804,000.

3. Total receipts for all amusements were $699,051,000, of which motion picture theatres grossed $508,196,000, or 73 per cent.

There were 37,677 establishments of all kinds covered in the census, 12,024 of them motion picture houses. The census reported baseball, football and other sports, bathing beaches, canoe rentals, race tracks, riding academies, skating rinks and swimming pools, amusement parks and amusement devices, band recitals, billiard and pool parlors, bowling alleys, dance studios, dog tracks, and legitimate stage, vaudeville, opera and motion picture theatres.

Robb & Rowley Sale Effective July 1st

Sale of a half interest in the Robb & Rowley circuit of about 80 theatres to United Artists Theatres will become effective July 1st. Contracts were signed immediately after the board of UA theatres voted approval of the purchase. William P. Philips, vice-president, treasurer and a member of the board, recently returned to New York City from the coast and Dallas, where he conferred on details concerning the transaction. The theatres on the circuit are located in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Change Exhibitor Outing

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York outing, which was originally scheduled for July 21, has been postponed to July 27, according to a statement from the organization this week. The Alexander Hamilton has been chartered by the organization for the day's sail to Indian Point. Luncheon, dinner and dancing are planned aboard the boat, while games and prize contests will be held at the Point.

Cecil DeMille, Laughton Named In Tax Inquiry

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Promised dramatic disclosures of how wealthy taxpayers "rooked" the United States Government tax collectors last week degenerated into a statement purporting to explain how various individuals saved themselves a few thousand dollars here and there by taking advantage of long-standing provisions of the revenue laws.

Initiated by a message from President Roosevelt June 1st in which it was declared the Government was losing hundreds of millions of dollars a year through tax evasion and avoidance, the investigation opened last week by the joint Congressional committee proved a disappointment to public and committee alike when Treasury officials failed to make the sensational revelations which had been anticipated.

Instead, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and his subordinates treated the committee to learned disquisitions on the tax laws and tax evasions and Elmer L. Irey, head of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau, cited a motion picture director, an actor, a razor inventor and a couple of comparatively small Wall Street personages to support his explanation of how it is possible to reduce income tax responsibilities. In most instances, he admitted, the methods of tax reduction cited were perfectly legal.

DeMille, Laughton Cited

The motion picture actor whose name was bandied about was Charles Laughton, British citizen, who is said to have had a contract with a British corporation under which the corporation collected his salary and made payment of a lesser sum to him. In 1935, Mr. Irey said, Mr. Laughton's earnings of $190,000 were paid to the corporation, which paid the actor $20,000.

On Wednesday before the joint Senate and House committee which is investigating tax evasion, Commissioner George S. Helvering outlined the formation of a corporation by Cecil B. DeMille, admitting that the courts had held the film director's position to be perfectly legal. The corporation, formed and completely dominated by De Mille, he said, consisted of himself, members of his family and his attorney.

"This was an incorporation of what may be called the earning personality of Mr. De Mille," Mr. Helvering explained. "In other words, DeMille's earning power was almost the sole corporate asset. DeMille the individual then went to work for DeMille the corporation at a salary far less than he knew he could demand as a director. The corporation then sold DeMille's services.

"The government claimed that the accumulation of this surplus was unreasonably a purposeful attempt to avoid surtaxes. De Mille answered that his corporation was saving up money to go into the production of motion pictures at a later date, which was a proper accumulation of surplus. The court sustained DeMille."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Atlantic Pictures

FALLING IN LOVE: Chas. Farrell—This English made picture is what I would term as an above the average program picture. It was better than I expected and it gave the satisfaction of a good B picture of the major studios. Doubled with "More Than a Secretary," which seemed to please in an average fashion. Business on this program a fair average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Columbia

CRAIG'S WIFE: John Boles, Rosalind Russell—Very serious character study which pleased an average midweek audience.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry—A good historical drama which didn't do as well on Saturday as I hoped for. Probably due to pre-commencement activities.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LADY FROM NOWHERE: Mary Astor, Charles Quigley—Fairly entertaining action drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PAROLE RACKET: Paul Kelly, Rosalind Keith—A good programmer. Worked out to a nice climax. Played May 18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THUNDER IN THE CITY: Edward G. Robinson—Surely were disappointed in this picture, did not pay film rental. Whoever wrote this story must have had thunder in his head. Better play this on bargain night. Running time, 76 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

TROUBLE IN MOROCCO: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—Jack Holt is always a good drawing card here but this picture is too weak to stand alone. We played it with a three Stooges and a serial and did better than average business. Running time, 62 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

WOMAN IN DISTRESS: May Robson, Irene Hervey—Fair programer. A bit messy, but will please the none-too-particular. Played May 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien, Beverly Roberts—Good aeroplane picture. Enjoyed by all my patrons. Running time, 10 reels. Played May 27—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

GREEN LIGHT: Errol Flynn, Anita Louise—Very good. Interesting all the way through. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

ONCE A DOCTOR: Donald Woods, Jean Muir—Very interesting picture. Many good comments on this. Running time, six reels. Played May 22.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

ONCE A DOCTOR: Donald Woods, Jean Muir—A surprise picture. Even First National did not rave over it but it pleased much better than some of the so-called specials. Good story, good cast, and some wonderful shots of the ocean in a storm. I double featured this one but with good shorts it is good enough for a single feature program. Running time, 65 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SING ME A LOVE SONG: James Melton, Patricia Ellis—Very good entertainment. Melton's singing was enjoyed by all. A refreshing comedy. Play it, plenty of compliments at the door. Running time, nine reels. Played June 10.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SING ME A LOVE SONG: James Melton, Patricia Ellis, Hugh Herbert, Walter Catlett—A darn good picture in any language. I just wish there were more to be had like it. Hugh Herbert and Walter Catlett should have been the stars. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 13.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

STOLEN HOLIDAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—Good picture for this type. Kay Francis is always good. A picture with a foreign locale does not go so well as my patrons seem to prefer "made in America" films. Was rained out the first night and attendance not so good as the picture deserved the second night. Running time, 90 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THREE MEN ON A HORSE: Frank McHugh, Joan Blondell—It seems strange that a story will ring the bell on the stage and prove a dud as a movie. At least, that is the way it proved for us. The stage with its limited following may have had enough followers of the racetrack to find this to their liking but as movie fare it has not the ingredients for a popular movie success. Business below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAMILLE: Greta Garbo, Robert Taylor, Lionel Barrymore—Greta with us is thumbs down. She can go to Sweden or Switzerland any time now. After seeing Jeanette MacDonald, Betty Furness or Annabella, what can you expect.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAD HOLIDAY: Edmund Lowe, Zasu Pitts, Elissa Landi—This should be titled "Mad Exhibitor and Patrons" for aside from Zasu Pitts' excellent acting there is nothing to it. I still do not know who killed who and why. Edmund Lowe is very poor in the lead. Running time, 72 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OLD HUTCH: Wallace Beery, Cecilia Parker—Ran this on gift night and had tie-up with the school and did very satisfactory business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—We didn't think when we played this it was Jean's last. And had our fans, we doubt they would have passed it by so lightly. Jean was well liked and surprising that we did so little with this one. Our vote can be added to the many (incidentally several have even requested the same thing at our box office) that Metro release what they can of Jean's work in "Saratoga." Another player could finish the plot. We think everyone wants it this way. They'd do it on the stage; why not on the screen? Played May 23-24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

ARIZONA RAIDERS, THE: Buster Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—This is a very good western for Friday and Saturday. Showing very short. Takes too many shorts to build up a program. OK for a double feature. Running time, six reels. Played June 4-5.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

BIG BROADCAST OF 1937, THE: Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Bob Burns—A very good show, recording much above all that I have played from Paramount since the sound has started in pictures. Jack Benny is the leading man and his voice is much superior to all other actors. Thanks, Jack and Bob. Running time, 10 reels. Played June 6-7.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMING: William Boyd, George Hayes—Very good. Running time, 78 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

NO MAN OF HER OWN: (Reissue) Clark Gable, Carole Lombard—Got by. Just a programer. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OUTCAST: Warren William, Karen Morley, Lewis Stone—Good melodrama. Lewis Stone helps lots and Karen Morley fine as ever. Played May 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OUTCAST: Warren William, Karen Morley—Would hardly say this is more than an average program picture. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 30.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Very good entertainment. Played May 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TRAIL DUST: William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison—Average Hopalong Cassidy western, which means that it will please the western fans. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 24.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Pleased all. Good show. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross—Very satisfactory Crosby picture. Shirley Ross is very well liked. They ask for more of her. Played May 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG: Virginia Bruce, Kent Taylor—Very good picture that will please more than you might guess from the title. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 1.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

Republic

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry—We couldn't see anything in this Autry opus. At any rate, his personality failed to click with our folks and the production value was way below standard. Played May 8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROUND-UP TIME IN TEXAS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Very good Autry picture. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 22.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

TWO WISE MAIDS: Alison Skipworth, Polly Moran—Average program picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 27.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DANIEL BOONE: George O'Brien, Heather Angel—This is a very good picture of its kind, but ran into a Saturday slump for some reason which I fail to understand.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DON'T TELL THE WIFE: Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel—Not so much to this one, although we did good business with it. We wanted to set this out but couldn't get what we wanted, so we played it without any advertising and let them come at their own risk. Well they came and lots of them. You figure it out. Running time, 62 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

OUTCASTS OF POKER FLAT: Preston Foster, Jean Muir—Nothing special as to draw or satisfaction. May have been true to Bret Harte's time, but too much dance hall and killing. Played June 11-12.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

PLOUGH AND THE STARS, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Preston Foster—Held the attention of those who came to see the picture, but the same fault that spoils some other productions existed in this one, and that is that there are too many dark scenes. Played May 29.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—This is a swell picture for a small town audience and gave a good account of itself on a Sunday date.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RAINBOW ON THE RIVER: Bobby Breen, May Robson—This proved a power for us. Bobby Breen seemed to bring them in and the picture gave complete satisfaction.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster—Pretty good program picture that did poor at the box office. It seems like a sea picture never did draw for us. Running time, 88 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

SEA DEVILS: Victor McLaglen, Preston Foster—The old stuff, McLaglen versus Foster, etc. The only change is Foster instead of Lowe. A bit wearisome. Played May 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

OFF TO THE RACES: Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane—Good program picture. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Ritz Bros.—Very, very good. It looks like Fox has something to rave about in Sonja Henie for she is charming, aside from her one hundred per cent perfect skating. Arline Judge is very good. Personally, if I never see Adolphe Menjou again it will be nineteen years too soon but the excellence of the balance of the cast counteracts his very tiresome performance. This one had been shown all around here so the box office was not too good but it pleased. Running time, 92 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll, Alice Faye—All that Fox claims in way of a nice picture, nice music, story and cast. Played June 13-14. —P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

ON THE AVENUE: Dick Powell, Madeleine Carroll, Alice Faye—Good program picture. This did not make any money on account of the rental being too high. So far Fox pictures have not made any money for us. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

REUNION: Dionne Quintuplets—Very pleasing drama. Did just fair on Sunday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Bros.—A perfect musical comedy that did not set the world on fire with our weekend patrons, but was thoroughly enjoyed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STATE FAIR: (Reissue) Will Rogers—Played to nice repeat business, but have had bigger Rogers' pictures. Think it still has box office value.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TIME OUT FOR ROMANCE: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen—Good on the whole. Again we say Claire Trevor deserves much better material. Played May 19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Annabella, Henry Fonda—If this was made in England it has all the earmarks of a high class Hollywood production. The color was perfect, and background, sound, etc., were all that one could ask for and there are enough incidents and action to please all tastes. It is hard to judge its pulling power as it was doubled with "Rainbow on the River," but no doubt it did its fair share of giving us three days of above average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur—A wonderful picture. Very good. You can't miss on this one. Something different, and the patrons actually enjoyed it. Was easy to understand the characters, too, for an English picture. The ladies seem to find something in Boyer's voice that enthralls them. Jean Arthur was real good. Personally, I thought Colin Clive did a wonderful bit of acting. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 9-10.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MEN ARE NOT GODS: Miriam Hopkins, Gertrude Lawrence—We played this with our fingers crossed and actually did good business. Pleased a few ladies but disappointed the majority. Was hard to understand the actors. We wouldn't allow children in and that's what evidently drew the people. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 8.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE RAINY AFTERNOON: Francis Lederer, Ida Lupino—We played this rather old but it is still a much better picture than most of the new ones we play. I wouldn't say this had anything to do with it, but we didn't have any rain for about 18 months until we played this picture. It started to rain the first night and rained for three days. Running time, 11 reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

Universal

EMPTY SADDLES: Buck Jones, Louise Brooks—Good Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD: Jane Wyatt, Louis Hayward—A very pleasing comedy drama. Did well on midweek date.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAN I MARRY, THE: Doris Nolan, Michael Whalen—A good Sunday picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MIGHTY TREVE, THE: Noah Beery, Jr., Barbara Read—A very fine human interest drama. The dog seemed almost human. While the dog has a prominent part in this, it is not strictly a dog picture. Noah Beery, Jr., was at his best in this. Noah Beery, Jr., has the making of another Wallace Beery type of actor. He seems to resemble his uncle, Wallace Beery, more than his father, Noah Beery. This was doubled with "Fugitive in the Sky," a good action air thriller. This program did good average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland—Just a wonderful production. Proud to show this one. Enjoyed by all my audience. Don't pass this one up. Running time, 139 minutes. Played June 3.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

BLACK LEGION, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Dick Foran—Excellent. Bogart swell and Dick Foran proves his worth in something other than a western. A bit strong to appeal to the feminine part of your audience. Played May 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLACK LEGION: Humphrey Bogart, Erin O'Brien-Moore—One could not ask for a better picturization of the Black Legion, but apparently our customers have had enough of the Black Legion from the papers. This was doubled with "Three Men on a Horse," which did not help any. Business below average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CALIFORNIA MAIL: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—A good western. Foran's singing excellent. Played May 11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT O'MALLEY, THE: Pat O'Brien, Sybil Jason—Very good entertainment. Deserves attention in any house. Sybil Jason is a big help. Played May 20-21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown, Carol Hughes—Average Joe Brown picture that will get quite a few laughs. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 8.—Roy Pringle, Rio Theatre, Fabens, Texas. General patronage.

HOW TO BE A DETECTIVE: M-G-M Miniatures —Mildly amusing.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HOW TO VOTE: MGM Miniatures—Exceptionally clever. A little over some of our farmers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

QUAINT QUEBEC: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These FitzPatrick color travelogues are well received and often receive a good hand at the close.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

REUNION IN RHYTHM: Our Gang—Very good comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SERVANT OF THE PEOPLE: Special—A very fine historical subject that all should see. Reasonably entertaining for the masses. Shows the drawing and signing of the Constitution of the U. S. A. A credit to the industry but should be furnished on the regular short program to make up for some of the poor ones we have to pay for.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

CHRISTMAS COMES BUT ONCE A YEAR: Color Classics—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GRAMPY'S INDOOR OUTING: Betty Boop Cartoons—Fair. Betty Boop doesn't mean a thing here. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

HAWAIIAN BIRDS: Color Classics—Very good filler and the natural color adds to the beauty of the pictures and scenery. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

LOVER'S PARADISE: Musical Romance—Very nice color process and this is a good filler on a short program. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

MUSICAL CHARMERS: Phil Spitalny and Girl Orchestra—Phil Spitalny presents his All-Girl Orchestra again and it's excellent entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JAPAN SHOWS GAIN IN ATTENDANCE, BUILDING

Governmental Depts. Make Use of Screen; Change Seen in Status of Foreign Product

by H. TOMINAGO
in Tokyo

Sharp increases in total attendance of motion picture theatres in Japan during 1936 couple with a marked gain in number of theatres and heightened activity on the part of the government as a source of screen product to indicate a steady forward movement for the industry in all its branches.

Official figures give the number of motion picture theatres in Japan as 1,627 at the close of 1936 against 1,586 a year previously, a gain of 41.

Total motion picture theatre attendance in 1936 is given as 202,658,784, which compares with 184,922,485 in 1935.

The 400 governmental and municipal departments and offices making pictures for propaganda and other purposes, educational and cultural, produced 22,000 subjects of various lengths, most of them from 1 to 4 reels.

Out of the 1,627 theatres operating in 1936, 1,130 play Japanese pictures exclusively, 61 offer foreign product only, and 433 exhibit mixed programs of Japanese and foreign material, increases of 13, 5 and 23 per cent respectively over 1935 figures. The increased percentage of theatres playing mixed programs indicates a widening interest of the public in foreign product and, naturally, an expanding interest of foreign distributors in the Japanese market.

The year showed an increase of 161 theatres equipped for sound, bringing the total number to 1,368, which is 84.1 per cent of the total number of theatres in Japan. The rate of installation moved up sharply in 1936.

Try 5-Day Runs

The Toho interests, dedicated to a policy of 10-day runs since last fall, announced a 5-day run schedule for its houses effective May 1. This does not apply, however, to the organization's first run theatres in Tokyo. It does affect Osaka, Kyoto, Yokohama, Kobe and Nagoya. Also announced by the circuit is an all-domestic product program for the Nippon Gekijo.

While it is granted that the 5-day run policy will enable Toho to release 6 pictures a month, as against a lesser number formerly, it naturally will follow that foreign film distributors serving Toho will have the number of picture requirements increased proportionately. This is expected to offset in a measure the loss of outlet incurred by them as a result of the Nippon Gekijo all-domestic policy.

On the face of it, the development appears to have much to win favor of both domestic producers and foreign distributors. But complications are expected to more or less nullify apparent gains as efforts are made to realign subsequent run booking schedules so as to make them conform to the first run openings. For this reason, trade opinion is as yet by no means unanimous as to the wisdom of the innovation.

Want Foreign Talent

Completion of "The New Earth," produced by Arnold Franck in Japan, has set in motion a movement looking to the bringing of foreign production talent to Japan to make product of comparable character. Towa Shoji, distributor of "The New Earth," is reported to have been approached by various European producing companies with proposals for joint production ventures.

The trade hears that the main purpose of the visit of Mr. Kawakita, head of Towa Shoji, to Germany, in company with Setsuko Hara, star of the film, and Mr. Kumagai, director of Nikkatsu company, was to negotiate with European producing companies, directors and players, with a view to inviting them to Japan to make other pictures for the foreign market.

Since "The New Earth" was presented in a number of Japanese theatres there has been a demand on the part of the film-minded public for reconsideration of the present status of foreign film in Japan with an eye toward increasing the output of Japanese product for foreign exhibition. Interesting in this connection is the move of S-Y theatres, usually playing foreign pictures only, in releasing "Osaka Natsuno-Jin," a big Shochiku production, simultaneously with other first runs of the Shochiki circuit playing Japanese pictures. This is considered as direct recognition of the trend of thought current in Japan.

In the opinion of Mr. Kido, vice-president of Shochiku, expressed to Mr. Ohtani, the president, in regard to this move by S-Y theatres, it is contradictory that the majority of the more intelligent theatre goers in Japan prefer foreign product. He added that, in view of this, the Shochiku company, commencing this year, will release the pick of Japanese productions in the first run theatres which have been playing foreign product exclusively.

CRITICIZES GIVEAWAYS

"Numerous complaints from moviegoers have reached my desk recently regarding a 'give-away' practice at certain neighborhood theatres here which seems to be the shabbiest kind of deception," writes Lowell Lawrence, movie critic for the Kansas City Journal-Post.

"To bolster the box office draw of cheap movies, the houses advertise free premiums of china or glassware to every woman patron, but instead of getting the premiums when they purchase their tickets, many patrons are handed socalled 'shortage cards,' claiming that the supply of gifts has been temporarily exhausted and supposedly entitling the holders to receive the premiums at a later date.

"The practice forces many of the patrons to make repeated trips to the theatres before they are handed a trivial premium worth only a fraction of the admission charge. Additional protests have been voiced because the attractive premiums displayed in the theatre lobbies are not the ones given ticket purchasers. Several disappointed neighborhood theatregoers are so incensed over the deception of the 'free gift' racket that they believe the practice should be investigated for violation of the honest advertising laws."

Japanese Feature Total Set at 500

The prevalence of double and triple feature programs in Japan will result in the production of about 500 Japanese films during the 1937-38 season, according to Nagamasa Kawakita, head of Towa Shoji-Kaisha, distributor of European made films in Japan. Mr. Kawakita arrived in New York City Monday, on the Queen Mary. After a week in New York he plans to spend about ten days in Hollywood studying production methods.

Mr. Kawakita was accompanied by his wife and Setsuko Hara, star of the picture "New Earth." The producer also brought a print of the film which, he said, is the first Japanese picture produced with an aim for international release.

"I think the world is interested in what is being done in the Far East," he said, "and while I am here I will try to find producers who will cooperate with us in the production of pictures for distribution in every country. I hope to have some companies visit Japan and produce there."

"New Earth" which also is called "The Daughter of the Samurai" will be handled in the United States by Modern Films.

Elliott Leaves for Jungles

Clyde Elliott, producer-director; Colin Tapley, one white member of the cast, and a technical crew of Paramount, will leave Los Angeles this week for the jungles 400 miles south of Singapore to film scenes for "Booloo."

Lustig Starts Theatre Service

Dave Lustig, pioneer publicist in New York independent exhibition, and who resigned last week as treasurer and member of the Theatrical Business Representatives' union, has inaugurated a service for special theatre exploitation and publicity, with headquarters at 334 West 44th Street, New York.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

PROFITABLE PLANNING

The pattern of any successful enterprise is laid out against the background of a definite plan which of course has also to do with the execution of a well-devised picture campaign. The theatreman who would obtain results must line up a logical succession of ideas whatever form they may take, and work them so that the sum total of their accomplishments comes at least within reaching distance of a set goal.

In other words, able managers are expected to know in detail pretty near where they are headed and how, which covers something more than merely following a budget breakdown and hoping for the best in boxoffice returns.

Ofttimes, certain objectives not directly connected with any single picture campaign are aimed for by open-eyed theatremen while utilizing the momentum of individual campaigns to reach the points designated. John Burhorn illustrates this concretely in the preface forwarded with his recent Quigley May Plaque entry headed "Planning Our Campaign". Burhorn wrote: "When we first decided to campaign on a more than unusual basis, as to effort and expense, we definitely had in mind the accomplishment of the following purposes:

> Boxoffice receipts should be increased to merit the extra advertising expense.
> We desired to use the picture in such a way that constructive and friendly feeling between the public and the theatre might be increased.
> That the campaign might result in our theatre gaining additional respect and admiration from business and professional men in the community.
> That certain members of the Gayety staff interested in taking active part in the preparation of the campaign, would thereby profit in experience and knowledge and become better equipped for future usefulness in the interest of our theatre, thereby profiting themselves."

The Round Tabler's progress along his predetermined route is best traced by a serious study of his Award campaign described on a following page. There can be little doubt that his plan scored and emphatically in putting over his show; that it scored again in strengthening Burhorn's outside contacts and personnel morale to serve him well in future campaigns.

Seek the reasons behind the success of a manager in any spot and invariably one finds a definite planning in selling his shows with as little as possible left to chance.

LATITUDE IN EXPLOITATION

From Singapore, just now comes a jubilant note written by Julius Fisher, of Amalgamated Theatres, to say that local authorities after many years have finally granted him permission to employ "girls in the flesh" for ballyhooing, doing away with the necessity of using the less effective cutout or figure, and that a girl on a street float advertising "Jungle Princess" created a sensation.

To theatremen in this country accustomed to doing about what they please to put over their attractions, Fisher's triumph may appear less than earth-shaking. But the situation of the Far East member can be pointed out in comparing the exploitation latitude allowed the American theatreman in general with the restrictions that hamper our overseas brothers.

All of which is set down to emphasize that showmen in the United States have little reason to complain as concerns outside interference with their exploitation plans which often include cooperation of the very forces that work against managers in foreign countries.

READY FOR EMERGENCY

Recently, the New York newspapers carried a story about a Saturday night fire at the Capitol Theatre, on Broadway. But nothing was said about the speed, dispatch and precision with which the theatre staff took hold to the extent that a capacity audience never knew that a fire had occurred caused by a lighted cigarette in a trash basket.

The rest of the story also bears telling.

It concerns the preparation made by Manager Herman Landwehr by regular fire-equipment inspections, panic-and-fire drills plus perfect teamwork from his staff. It concerns the immediate presence of the manager at the point of threat, the placing of vacuum sweepers to suck the smoke through open windows, the quick extinguishing of the flames, the taking of panic-stations by the staff ready to control the crowds, man the exits and house lights.

The praises showered upon Landwehr and his staff are well deserved. But more to be stressed is that the theatreman had trained his personnel religiously to meet the occasion and was in complete control when danger threatened.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Jig Saw Stunt

Sears Roebuck cooperated with Howard Burckhardt, Loew's State, Providence, R. I., on "Star Is Born," by means of a jig-saw contest run in local daily with cut of Gaynor cut up and scattered through the store's ads. Readers were invited to assemble the puzzle to match the original.

Seven-day man-on-the-street broadcast put on in front of theatre with Station WPRO, questions centering about the desire of those questioned to go to Hollywood. Through tieup with store, demonstrator was planted in window to show local women the art of makeup and how they could be as beautiful as Janet Gaynor.

Boucher Promotes

Numerous stunts have been employed by Frank Boucher, Metropolitan Theatre, Baltimore, recently, to plug his attractions, one being tieup with local printer from whom he promoted 5,000 spiral bound address-telephone books in exchange for ad on back cover.

On "Internes Can't Take Money," Boucher sent postcards to all doctors in town calling attention to the medical angle in the picture and for "Waikiki Wedding" tieup with druggist was used for giveaway of fan photos.

Shakespeare Kin

Miss Joy Hathaway, direct descendant of Anne Hathaway, wife of William Shakespeare, was prevailed upon by William Nitschke, Loew's Triboro, Astoria, to lecture before an audience of 1,000 students at local high school in connection with his date on "Romeo and Juliet." Illustrated essay contest was planted in schools with prizes of the motion picture editions of the play and guest tickets to winners.

For "Maid of Salem," Bill had girl in Puritan costume distribute heralds on street. Color charts were planted in schools for a coloring contest.

Promotes Full Page

Special safety short, "Horsepower and Horsesense" booked by Charley Pincus, at the Capitol, Salt Lake City, was used for promotion of two full-page ads from local auto dealer who tied in the reel the car he was handling and also plugged the feature in the copy.

INVITES PROBATIONERS TO SEE "COURAGEOUS"

Reported by MGM's campaign service bulletin is the neat tiein made by Ernest Van Pelt for the roadshow date on "Captains Courageous" at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco. Van Pelt arranged with Judge Dunn of the local juvenile court to invite a group of boys on probation to see the picture, after convincing Hizzoner that the picture carried a great object lesson for the young probationers.

"Horizon" Contests

Historical essay newspaper contest high-lighted Raleigh Sharrock's "Lost Horizon" campaign at the Centenary Theatre, Shreveport, La., with guest tickets to those submitting best scripts on "Tibet and Its Mystery." Raleigh also planted contest on classified page offering tickets to those spotting their names. Street parade with youngsters carrying placards following bannered cars in the downtown area also attracted.

Miniatures

In the subsequent-run Commodore Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., Louis Fishkin for "Seventh Heaven" promoted local toy shop for a miniature assortment of illuminated houses furnished with appropriate settings to be used for his lobby display. Background with Eiffel Tower was painted in with transparent moon blinking on and off. Illuminated lampposts with street markings and three-sheets were planted at either side of display and sky blue gelatin over the spotlight made an ideal night effect.

Merchant paid for printing and distributing of tinted photos of Simone Simon with store ad on back, and imprinted blotters were distributed in schools.

Stiltwalker

Bannered stiltwalker in full dress covered streets of Morgantown, West Va., for Ken Grimes on "Star Is Born" at the Warner Theatre. Star stencils were used on sidewalks and street parade was held opening day preceded by school band and boys on bikes carrying special posters. On opening day Grimes also arranged bannered plane flight.

Art Tells 'Em

Letter sent out recently by Art Abelson on "Maytime" at the Lake, Devil's Lake, N. D., was topped by cuts showing Art and his assistant discussing coming date. Balloon copy had Abelson saying he hasn't seen Mr. (name of patron) at the theatre lately and assistant in answer suggesting Art to drop a line to patron about the picture.

Letter was addressed personally to patron listed in the balloon copy and below followed list of other coming attractions and stars.

Lead Editorial

Importance of the recent coronation newsreel pictures of the coronation was sold by Manager C. M. Pincus, Capitol, Salt Lake City, to the extent that the Deseret News, leading daily, gave a lead editorial to the Fox Movietone coverage, current at the theatre. Paper emphasized the date by saying that all school children be urged to see the short as a valuable study in history.

Red Hearts

Series of red compo board hearts linked together formed the basis of George Limerick's lobby setpiece on "Love Is News" at the Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Tex. Large center heart carried title done in white on the red background with heads of Loretta Young and Tyrone Power. Remaining hearts carried scene stills also heart-shaped. Entire setpiece was outlined in white border.

Fish Gag

Youngster wearing dunce cap and seated on high stool at curb fished with baitless hook in empty pail on the stunt arranged by Johnny Hart, Hal Ralston's assistant, for "That Man's Here Again," at the Ritz, San Bernardino, Cal. Copy at bottom of stool announced "you don't have to fish for laughs, see," etc.

"Time" Cover

Photostat blowups and main picture review from recent issue of Time magazine on "The Prince and the Pauper" were utilized by C. T. Spencer, Capitol Theatre, Hamilton, Ont., Can., for his lobby setpiece. Entire display was done in coronation colors and included cast and other credits.

TOP STUNTS OF LATE CAMPAIGNS

Scholarship

Reported by MGM exploiteer Louie Orlove via Billy Ferguson's bulletin service is campaign inaugurated by Jim Keefe, publicity director Fox Milwaukee Theatres who has arranged with the local Marquette University School of Journalism for a scholarship to one of the students in a contest on MGM pressbooks. Object will be to have students prepare trailer copy and newspaper ads and Keefe has gotten out a manual on this with complete details for interested students.

"Town" Section

Special eight-page edition of the Kilgore Daily News, said to be the largest newspaper section ever published in Texas on a single picture was issued with the contents entirely devoted to Knox Lamb's "Top of the Town" date at the Strand, Kilgore, Tex. Big front page headlines announced the coming attraction and as crowning touch, center spread of paper was given over to giant two-page co-op spread.

Representative

For the purpose of choosing a "personal representative" for Janet Gaynor during the run of "Star Is Born" at the Rivoli, Muncie, Ind., Leonard Sowar, city manager, Theatrical Managers circuit, and publicist Vic Sicilia tied in with morning paper on seven-day contest. Winner was local college co-ed and paper ran cut of girl posed against picture 24-sheet lobby display. Plane towing 90-foot banner was also used for further publicity.

For "Prince and Pauper," the theatremen hooked the paper to a twin-party at the opening night's show, daily running stories and shot of the guests, some 20 pairs of twins being registered.

Dog House Copy

All of the males on B. E. Garner's mailing list at the Arcadia, Ranger, Tex., were mailed postcards carrying cut of Wallace Beery and "The Old Soak" plug. Copy read "Dear Pal: Knowing you as I do, I know that you spend more time in the dog house than you do out. Something really should be done about this and if you will come down to my Opera House Friday or Saturday you will see how Wallace Beery, an 'Old Soak' like yourself, puts the deal over."

JUNE DEADLINE
MIDNIGHT, JULY 7

From date of this issue, exactly eleven days remain for entries in the Quigley Awards for the month of June. Deadline has been set for midnight of Wednesday, July 7, at which time all campaigns must be at Committee Headquarters.

The following have been asked to serve as judges: E. L. Alperson, Grand National; S. Charles Einfeld, Warner Bros. Pictures, and Robert M. Gillham, Paramount Pictures Corp.

Prize Trips

Patterned on the background of "Romeo and Juliet" for the date at the Cameo in Brussels, Belgium, H. Poelmans, MGM publicist, put on a contest for the most beautiful love stories, similar to the one arranged in Paris by E. Lapinere, head of MGM's European publicity department. The prizes were eight one-week trips to the north of Italy given by the Compagnia Italiana de Turismo.

For street bally Poelmans also created a cortege composed of nine riders dressed in style of the picture, riders carrying theatre heralds and banners. This stunt was used for four days ahead, and interest was aroused by the fact that the riders were reported to be real Cossacks. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Historic Window

Celebrating an anniversary, long established Brooklyn department store was prevailed upon by manager Ben Simon, Loew's Metropolitan to include in the celebration a window display which traced the evolution of the motion picture. The exhibit featuring various types of projection machines and photographs secured through the cooperation of International Projector Corporation. Shown were early types of Edison kinetoscopes, handdriven machines and also latest model projectors. Scene stills of old-time stars were displayed.

The window is conceded to be one of the best ever obtained in Brooklyn to advertise a theatre and to take the fullest advantage of the tiein, in addition to two large courtesy cards on either side of the display mentioning the theatre name, Ben had a 16 mm. machine placed in the window and ran special trailers on his following week's attraction. (See photo in Round Table photo section.)

Key to the City

Parade of local fire and police department personnel was held in Brownwood, Texas, to herald Lew Bray's "Waikiki Wedding" opening at the Lyric. Currently booked for his stage show was "Bell's Hawaiians" and at the termination of the parade at City Hall Mr. Bell presented the Mayor with a lei while Hizzonner responded by giving the showman the key to the city. Papers ran story together with photos of the presentation.

"Treasure Hunt"

Various contests highlighted Lloyd Heldman's "Shall We Dance" date at the Burns Theatre, Newport, Vt., one of which was camera idea with cash award to person coming nearest in getting snapshots of every type of advertising used by the theatre to publicize the picture. Cooperating merchants contributed prizes.

Roller skate treasure hunt was held for children, each entrant wearing a back banner, and all starting from theatre through center of town on the search. For street bally boy and girl dressed as stars on roller skates distributed heralds and giant star cutouts were planted atop low buildings in prominent situations.

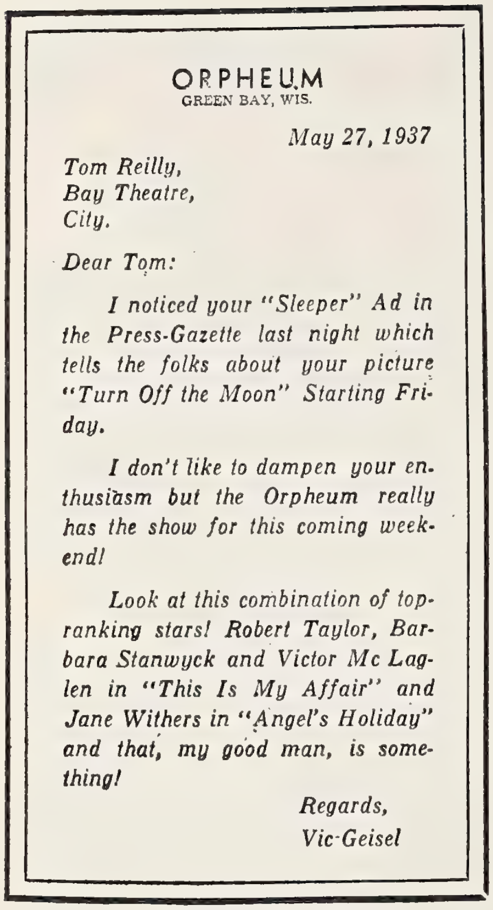
"Devil" Banner

Mammoth banner selling "The Devil Is Driving" on fence at local ball park was planted by Morris Rosenthal, Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., to plug his date. Midget auto and motorcycle races were in session at the Park and Moisha planted clown dressed as devil driving around the track. Announcements were also made over track's p. a. system.

Trade Week Tiein

Colorful was the lobby of the Capitol Theatre, North Bay, Ont., when Jack Nelson played "Silent Barriers" during Empire Trade Week with six booths sponsored by business firms set up in his lobby. Brilliantly decorated, displays backed the Empire Trade Week's slogan "Buy Empire Goods." Merchants in turn plugged the display, picture and playdates in their windows and ads.

Dodgers were printed and distributed by the Canadian Pacific Railroad, prominent railroader addressed Rotary and Lions clubs on early construction days of the C.P.R., as depicted in the picture, and the railroad built a float which was entered in local parade.



ORPHEUM
GREEN BAY, WIS.

May 27, 1937

Tom Reilly,
Bay Theatre,
City.

Dear Tom:

I noticed your "Sleeper" Ad in the Press-Gazette last night which tells the folks about your picture "Turn Off the Moon" Starting Friday.

I don't like to dampen your enthusiasm but the Orpheum really has the show for this coming week-end!

Look at this combination of top-ranking stars! Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck and Victor Mc Laglen in "This Is My Affair" and Jane Withers in "Angel's Holiday" and that, my good man, is something!

Regards,
Vic Geisel

Attractive Lobby Display Constructed for "Million"

An attractive lobby display for "One in a Million" was constructed by Harry Kriegsman, Oasis Theatre, Brooklyn, background of which was an outdoor winter scene with snowcapped mountains and trees. Entire display was shadow-boxed and bordered with cutout white metallic icicles.

In front of this was placed a cutout figure of Sonja Henie which was motivated from behind and rocked from side to side in skating fashion. Beneath this was placed a platform with a miniature white skating rink and star name in script figures, the sides were lined with cotton snow. To complete the display, cutout star heads and stills were used with blue spotlight over all.

Radio Contest Planted By Irwin on "Maytime"

Through the cooperation of a local Radio Shoppers' Guide, George Irwin, Lyceum Theatre, Duluth, Minn., planted a "Maytime" contest in which passes were given as prizes to listeners who called up and gave incorrect sentence used during the broadcast. Fan photos of MacDonald and Eddy were given to all patrons opening day, special front was built with lattice work and electrical transcription was used daily over Station KDAL.

Special stories were published in the Duluth Herald and Duluth News-Tribune with photos of MacDonald in the rotogravure section with cut lines that after the reviewers had seen the picture they unanimously voted her the most outstanding singer of the year.

Managers Combine to Plug Pictures

Reported to have attracted the attention anticipated was the novel newspaper campaign put over by three Standard-Fox circuit theatremen in Green Bay, Wis., to give an unusual twist to their coming attractions at different houses. In on the deal were Tom Reilly, at the Bay, who started the argument; Vic Geisel, at the Orpheum, and Donn Borrer, at the Strand.

It seems that Reilly advertised "Turn Off the Moon" as a "sleeper" and decidedly worthwhile seeing. Geisel started the ball rolling by a two-column type letter-ad addressed to Tom (see cut, left) in which Vic referred to the "sleeper" attraction but reserved his enthusiasm for his combination show. Reilly came back the next day in answer with a similar display (see cut, right) and in which he spoke further about his show.

Borrer joined the party on the following day with another of the two-column type letter-ads, addressed both to Geisel and Reilly, and in which he praised his picture "Waikiki Wedding" detailing the cast and hit songs. In addition Donn put in a word for the next program following at the Strand.

The tip-off on the strength of the entire campaign is the mention in every ad of the opposition's attractions and while the boys appeared to be arguing about their own shows, they all took pains to plug what the other houses were showing.

Paper Ties In With Arkin On "Mother's Day" Program

Local paper cooperated with Eli H. Arkin, Lexington Theatre, Chicago, Ill., for his "Mothers' Day" program. Paper ran application coupons in which readers were asked to fill in their mothers' names and addresses. To the first 50 applications received by the paper guest tickets were mailed. Paper also ran names and addresses of the winners.

Week ahead Eli ran trailer "Next Sunday is Mothers' Day," also stressing the fact that children should bring their mothers to the movies on that day, promoted flowers were presented to the honored guests and stories run in paper.

Store Employees Enter "Star" Contest for Perry

Charlie Perry of the Aldine, Philadelphia, gave an old stunt a new twist in his campaign on "A Star Is Born." Large Department Store employing 3,500 people holds good-will meetings every morning before the opening of the store. For a week in advance of the picture, Perry arranged to have the management offer daily prizes to the employees in a song guessing contest. The announcer described the film and gave credit to Selznick, United Artists and Technicolor. Compulsory attendance guaranteed the listeners.

Store distributed 50,000 photos of Gaynor and March to the customers and the contest gave the employees added incentive to plug the picture as they circulated the gift photos.

Vic Geisel,
Orpheum Theatre,
City.

Dear Vic:

It was so nice to hear from you-especially through the pages of the public press-about your week-end holiday program, "This Is My Affair" and "Angel's Holiday," which starts tomorrow.

We started our week-end Holiday show today and for your information "Turn Off The Moon" is a picture that can't be topped for real all-around entertainment! It has a score of new faces and new personalities in the cast that can't be beat! It is one of the most entertaining pictures I've ever seen--even you would like it!

Love and Kisses,
Tom Reilly

P.S.'Song of The City' is also the tops!

Sophomore Goes On Strike For Shepherd on "Live"

Gwen Williams, 19-year-old University of Miami sophomore, went on a sitdown strike in the Lincoln Theatre there for Sonny Shepherd's "Wake Up and Live" date. Papers carried stories together with art work.

Cash prizes were offered in tieup with the Miami Tribune to contestants submitting best gag lines in connection with cuts of Bernie and Winchell run in the paper. Prize winners' names and addresses were later listed. Blimp made announcements from air about the opening during the day at the beach and at night used four-foot neon letters.

Bustin's "Maxims" Tieup

Interest was stimulated by Aubrey L. Bustin, Coliseum, London, England on his "Three Maxims" date. Through cooperation of leading merchants, Aubrey disguised himself and at specified times visited the stores tied in on the stunt. Women were invited to identify the manager and promoted prizes from the merchants were awarded winners, presentation of which took place on stage of the Coliseum.

QUIGLEY PLAQUE WINNERS FOR MAY CREATE EFFECTIVE EXPLOITATIONS

Burhorn and Binstock Secure Cooperation of Merchants, Civic Bodies, Schools and Churches in Ace Campaigns

With the announcement that a new street car line was to be opened in the section of Chicago where the Gayety Theatre is situated, Manager John Burhorn, being a director of the local Chamber of Commerce, had himself appointed assistant marshal of the street parade to celebrate the occasion. Serving in this capacity he was able to publicize his picture, "You Only Live Once," to the thousands who turned out to witness the ceremonies, the importance of which was indicated by the presence of Mayor Kelly of Chicago and other prominent citizens. The highlight of the parade as far as the theatre was concerned was a group of boys carrying posters, each one containing one letter of the title.

Also featured in the Silver Plaque winner's campaign was a tiein which the theatreman termed "taking over" one of the oldest department stores in his section of the city. Burhorn proposed to the management that they put on a storewide sale, giving the sale a name that would tie in with the picture. Theatre would be advertised in store circulars, in windows and through the various departments. The general idea that was conveyed that since folks only live once why should they not avail themselves of the many bargains the store advertised.

Banners Store and Front

To aid the tiein thousands of circulars stressing the picture title as well as merchandise were distributed throughout the entire area and paper pennants containing only the title were pasted on the windows covering a 200-foot frontage and hung throughout the store. Counter and display cards on all floors carried tiein copy. To attract additional interest one of the theatre's ushers who did clever sketch work was placed in the window and made up cards calling attention to the occasion. All in all, the cooperation proved to be very successful, Burhorn forwarding a letter from the head of the store expressing complete satisfaction with the results.

For the purpose of obtaining a buildup through contacts with leading civic figures, Burhorn addressed a letter to these leaders telling them about the picture and asking for personal opinions on what the title suggested, based on the personal experiences of the persons addressed. Letter stated the opinion would be displayed in the theatre lobby and also published in the local paper. Replies were received from such personages as aldermen, editors, clergymen, business leaders, etc., who forwarded very interesting replies. They also were attentively read by patrons when posted in the lobby and run in the daily.

The next important item in Burhorn's campaign was a tiein with the paper's cooking school wherein John agreed to run a short trailer if the paper cooperated in advertising the picture. Other advertising was secured by displaying a cutout in the lobby of the local Masonic Temple where the school was conducted. The theatreman did further good work for his date by offering to distribute the prizes at the opening of the session, at which time he took occasion to plug the picture.

The new layout of the Round Table inaugurated in last week's issue also has to do with a bit of revamping of the monthly Quigley Plaque campaigns, so that photos of the winners and illustrations of various exploitations can be carried on one page in the Round Table picture section. The story content of the Silver and Bronze entries' highlights are treated in detail as usual.

Church cooperation was also obtained by Burhorn by interesting a local minister in using the title of the picture as a subject for a sermon. This was advertised on the church page, reprints of which were distributed by the theatre personnel. A local civic cleanup campaign was found to be another means of publicity whereby the theatreman offered guest tickets for prizes during the "week" which was mentioned in all the publicity and on posters carried by the children in a specially arranged parade.

In addition to these outstanding exploitations Burhorn sold co-op page, promoted merchants to use the title generally in advertising, placed a display in vacant store in a safety campaign on a tiein with local insurance agency, planted the photo serial strip in the local sheet, effected a tiein with a trailer manufacturer to use one of the models around town, among other good things done to publicize the picture.

Burhorn generously credits members of his staff for helpful cooperation in putting over the campaign, mentioning especially William Palmer, F. Schaefer, J. McCrea and J. Penland, who John says worked out the impressive window display on the insurance tieup above mentioned.

Also underscored by the Round Tabler was an appearance before the weekly meeting of the South Chicago Lions Club with the resultant publicity appearing in the local paper story mentioning the title. Helpful too was tiein with leading laundry in which all delivery trucks carried specially built panels and inserts placed in all outgoing packages. Further attention was called to the date by a wrecking car towing a damaged auto upon which were placed banners stressing safe driving with the title tied in. A trick old model Ford proved also to be effective for a bally and a launch prominently bannered was piloted up and down the nearby harbor.

Located in a section of Brooklyn, New York, where his patrons are hardly familiar with the works of Shakespeare and without the facilities of newspaper advertising, Paul Binstock, manager of the subsequent-run Republic Theatre, obtained wide results by working with schools, making tieups with merchants and staging a number of contests on his date for "Romeo and Juliet" at the Randforce circuit house.

To encourage graduating classes in six neighborhood schools to have their class photos taken, Paul arranged with leading photographer to distribute various cooperative advertisings such as blotters, etc., which informed the students of a special price for group photos. A large part of the ads were given over to announcements on the picture with distribution of these being arranged for by the principals of the schools concerned. To stress the entertainment value of the picture directly to his audiences, the manager also arranged to speak from the stage at various times, calling attention to the dramatic highlights of the picture in addition to its classical background.

The essay contest open to school children for the free trips to Shakespeare's birthplace was arranged for in a number of public, junior and high schools. In addition to prizes promoted from neighborhood merchants for best winning essays, Binstock also gave guest tickets. Another angle that proved effective was a tieup made with the Brooklyn Children's Museum which provided a number of interesting photos for lobby display. Special discount tickets were disposed of in four public and high schools, students being dismissed early in the afternoon to attend the matinee. Bulletins on the contest were placed in all the schools, Y. M. C. A., etc., as were the miniature stills supplied by MGM.

Puts On Unusual Contest

Most unusual was Binstock's contest tied in with neighborhood photographer for which attractive prizes were given to local boys and girls voted to be the modern Romeos and Juliets in that locality. Those interested and considered eligible had their photos taken free of charge, photos being placed in the lobby of the theatre to be voted on by patrons supplied with ballots for this purpose. The winners were given free vacations at a popular resort and other worthwhile prizes. The neighborhood was thoroughly covered with various displays, prominent among which were windows in the better stores. Besides his regular program, Binstock also effected a tiein with a chain of house furnishing stores to imprint theatre ad on inserts distributed house-to-house by the merchant. Heart-shaped imprinted muslin signs were worn by clerks in five and ten-cent stores, heralds with cooperative copy used by the more popular merchandising establishments and a street ballyhoo with one of the ushers parading through the main sections of the neighborhood dressed as Romeo was another of the effective ideas that helped Binstock in winning the Bronze Plaque for May, incidentally, the first to be won by Ranforce theatremen.

THE PASS DISCUSSION CONTINUES

YES, THEY ARE; NO, THEY'RE NOT

In the Round Table editorial page issue of June 5 some queries were set down asking opinions on what the readers thought of giving money instead of passes for certain services and contest prizes. In succeeding issues theatremen have expressed themselves pro and con and have added other observations on the general pass system and its evils.

On this page are published further opinions from interested showmen who wish to be heard on the subject. And due to its importance the discussion will be continued with expressions from other men in the field.

LARKIN VOLUNTEERS TO AID "CRUSADE"

Dear Mike:

Thanks for calling to my attention your recent comments on passes. They were very interesting and call for thought even if it hurts to think a little in this day of so much superficial thinking.

Passes are a nuisance relic left over from the days of the showmen with the loud plaid suits, gay derby, black moustache (waxed), large horseshoe diamond stick pin, cane and a date book with street address numbers of every dame who wore a hat with over a 20-inch spread and enough silk petticoats to make enough party dresses for all the guests in an up-to-the-minute society drama featuring a Park Avenue social affair. The theatre managers of today discarded about all the regalia of the old type showmen except one thing, and that is freedom to make a great fellow of himself by handing out tickets which we try to condone in one manner or another.

I am just as bad as the next one. I do it, I do it when I know better; I do it when I know it will get me nothing. The urge to give passes is like strong drink, dope, the smoking habit and many other things we do which does us harm, but we do them. An old fetish is hard to throw off. Tradition is a mighty force, the past an unyielding guide post that we use even if we know we are on a detour. Passes are a detour that takes us no place.

I am sure that you are doing a great job. I cannot discard passes unless they are discarded everywhere. I can hold down the number, I can be very careful who gets them and for what. We have built up a class that knows how to crash. They will not surrender this right all at once, but we can in time whittle down the army that does. Publicity will do it, proper approach and thinking will assist. I will do my part to help you in this crusade.

The actual managers are not the only offenders; they come from the top down and from the bottom up to the top. Houses and shows are still being papered, but the number is diminishing.

The faster passes are eliminated the better for all.—Fred Larkin, Resident Manager, Minnesota Amuse. Co., St. Cloud, Minn.

"PASSES ARE HELPFUL IF HANDLED PROPERLY"

Dear Mike:

Passes?

"I've written a million of 'em," as Jimmy Durante would say.

Passes have their benefits and their curses. It all depends on how the exhibitor uses them. It's true that passes have been used to get plenty of additional advertising for little or nothing to a theatre and it is also true they have been used to such excess they have become the greatest curse of the theatre.

Usually in the case of annual passes they are given to officials and notables of a city of whom the theatre is required to ask many favors. These cannot be paid for in actual cash. Usually these officials are in the habit of receiving annual passes to other entertainments and expect it from the theatres. I'm not saying that even this is right, but is a practice that has been in existence long before the days of P. T. Barnum and God help the exhibitor who first tries to break it down.

Regarding trip passes, it is not the actual value of the admission that the pass carries, but the fact that persons receiving passes deem it an honor and love to boast of this fact to their friends. Invariably they will take friends along and pay for their extra admission to be in a position of boasting they have a pass presented to them by the manager of the theatre.

There are many attractions that come into a theatre that are not "naturals," by which I mean there are no outstanding stars to pull them in. But, the picture is one that if once seen the public will go out talking about it. In such a case it is wise to give passes good for one admission, fill the house and send out many boosting patrons. Single passes drag in a lot of paid admissions with them.

There was many a road show attraction of the speaking stage put over by papering the first night. Yes, sir! Passes are O. K. if they are properly handed out, but, like the little kid playing with matches, they sometimes burn down the house.—Vic Gauntlett, Advertising Director, Evergreen State for in cash.

COMPLIMENTS CLUB ON PASS DISCUSSION

Dear Mike:

Your article on theatre passes in the May 22nd issue of the Herald was a timely one for me, since I am trying to break down a system that has been in effect in this theatre for over 10 years. I think a free pass is an evil when it is done on a weekly basis. The hardest habit to break is the one which gives something of value for nothing regularly, no matter what the return. Window cards, three sheets, classified ads, political favors and all regular forms of purchase by pass, create a group of patrons who become a load that seems light in view of their return, but eventually result in a definite and insurmountable bulwark to maximum business. Yet in small operations these cannot be paid for in cash.

In my situation the answer is a half-price pass with the receiver paying the tax. These are made out for one particular day with a per cent distribution out of town. The result is to build up a weak day, and yet there is no cheapening of what we have to sell.

The occasional contest pass winner is not an evil providing the contest is run properly. If you have your pass situation under control these passes are more valuable to the winner than the same amount in cash, which is demonstrated by the return in a contest for two passes . . . would they be half as much for 60, 80 cents or $1.00, or are they ever unused, as habitual free passes are? If there is NO FREE LIST AT ALL, occasional passes for real value received will not tend to reduce the value of what we are selling.

To answer a possible argument against half price passes to the effect that the merchant will not accept them, I present my operation as an example. They are the only passes we issue and we put out 200 window cards, 500 hotel circulars, 2,000 heralds and with a new policy 25 one sheets. By building up the fact that there is no such thing as a free pass, we made these half price passes of value to the receiver.

It is remarkable to me that the Round Table's value is not only measured in terms of publicity and exploitation, but can hit a current topic such as passes are with me. May I add my thanks to the many others who have found this a help to them.—George Bannan, Manager, Edwards Theatre, East Hampton, N. Y.

SAYS SERVICE CHARGE CURBS PASS EVIL

Dear Mike:

Been very much interested in the various expressions of the boys over the pass abuse. The 10-cent service charge and paying for three and one sheet locations in cash on a yearly basis has long been the practice in this neck of the woods. We have no city officials to salve and this deep-rooted trade practice evil has to a great extent been cured of its worst effects. Conditions vary, but if you can make the theatre manager in general do something about it, restricting it as much as he can, in time, it can be greatly curbed if not eliminated. However, I know of some cities where the political aspect is very serious and as one of the boys mentioned, services can sometimes be obtained for a pass that dollars would not compensate and the recipient would go through with propositions which a monetary consideration could not buy and which would insult the receiver if offered. The 10-cent service charge on all passes with the charge going to the "Employees Benefit Fund" is widely prevalent with many circuits, and is a curb on the evil.—David F. Perkins, Manager, Calvin Theatre, Northampton, Mass.

UNITED ARTISTS AIDING MOVE TO COLOR FILMS

Goldwyn Announcement Followed by Disclosure of Other Producers' Technicolor Plans

Samuel Goldwyn's definite commitment to color—Technicolor—production has been followed by announcements similar in kind but less in degree from his fellow United Artists producers, David Selznick and Walter Wanger; by a statement from George Schaefer, United Artists general manager, that the swing to color "will revolutionize the industry"; by the news that Technicolor will double the capacity of its Hollywood laboratory, and by publicity releases from other process owners, one of which reported the return of William Fox to the industry as an executive of British Chemicolour.

The United Artists trend under which that company will release from nine to 12 color productions in the 1937-38 season has not been followed noticeably, however, in product announcements of other major companies. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal have no color features scheduled; Paramount will make "Ebb-tide" and possibly one other in that medium; RKO has not announced any although "Victoria the Great," Herbert Wilcox feature made in England for release through RKO in the United States will have a coronation pageant done in color, and Warner Brothers will make at least two, "Valley of the Giants" and "Gold Is Where You Find It."

Within a week after Mr. Goldwyn's statement a publicity release from the Walter Wanger offices noted the fact John Cromwell had been signed to direct "Arabian Nights" in Technicolor. The picture, to star Sylvia Sidney, Madeleine Carroll, Charles Boyer, Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett, is set for early production. Mr. Wanger recently completed his "Vogues of 1938," also in Technicolor.

A few days later Selznick International Pictures announced preparations for the filming of "Nothing Sacred" in Technicolor. A special effects crew this week was in New York shooting background scenes for the production. The color theme was stressed in the announcement which said, "They (the crew) will concentrate on all the nuances of shade and color hidden in the impressive skyline, catching all the chromatic moods of the city from morn to midnight."

Characterizing Mr. Goldwyn's announcement as a "clarion call to the rest of the industry," Mr. Schaefer said in a statement to the press:

"Motion pictures in natural color will inevitably have the same revolutionary effect in the amusement world as the introduction of sound pictures had some nine years ago. Furthermore, the wholehearted use of color is a logical step in a business which caters to world-wide audiences. . . . Just as sound lifted movies to a new high in the realm of entertainment, so will color enhance the inherent properties of motion pictures in the modern world."

Pictures of the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, to be released July 15th by Twentieth Century-Fox, are expected to mark a new point in the advancement of Technicolor. Critics and industry representatives who viewed the three-reel feature at a recent showing in New York said the fitness of the subject to the medium and popular interest in the event itself insured an excellent reception for the picture and predicted it would be a strong factor in securing public acceptance for color.

The pictures include shots of members of the royal family and of peers in their coronation robes and scenes of the procession. No Technicolor pictures of the actual ceremony in Westminster Abbey were taken, however.

Laboratory Expansion Set

Technicolor plans to spend $1,500,000 in an expansion program that will double its laboratory facilities, according to a company announcement. Work will start when Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus returns from London. The present Hollywood and London plants are said to be booked to capacity.

Results of a man-in-the-street-poll conducted in Providence, R. I., and Akron, O., as announced by the Samuel Goldwyn publicity office, were distinctly in favor of the color picture. Of 120 members of an audience in the Rhode Island city 86 expressed a definite preference for color and of the remaining 34 several admitted they had never seen one and others indicated that better color pictures might result in a change of heart.

"A more intimate poll conducted by a reporter on the Akron Times-Press among 17 citizens," the Goldwyn publicity continued, "brought 14 enthusiastic votes for color and the information that all had seen the recently released Selznick Technicolor picture, 'A Star Is Born,' and considered it the best color picture to date."

In an editorial which professed to see "dark clouds upon the horizon of Hollywood," the Kansas City Star predicted a production upheaval similar to that experienced with the advent of sound.

"While it is not probable that the motion picture industry will be as badly upset by color as it was by sound, it is already apparent that there will have to be some important readjustments," the paper said. "Some actors and actresses will fall by the wayside—unable to photograph well in color. New technique in makeup, lighting and staging will have to be evolved. New stars will arise.

"That is the history of all progress. There are always some who meet disaster with the changes. But out of it all usually comes something which is beneficial to the world as a whole."

Other Processes Active

Development of a mechanical, electrically-controlled optical printer capable of turning out 1,000,000 or more feet of color film a day has been claimed by the Telco Corporation, which recently announced a new color system. The machines are under construction at the Tickle Engineering Works, Brooklyn, N. Y., under the supervision of Robert Hoyt, president of Telco, who plans to install them in a Hollywood laboratory. E. T. Oakland, head of the production staff of the corporation, was in Hollywood this week completing arrangements for the plant.

William Fox, former motion picture executive, who has been inactive in the industry for several years, will develop a new English color process British Chemicolour, in the United States as an executive of that company, it was announced recently. Immediately after the news of his association with the British company was published Mr. Fox made a trip to Hollywood, where he conferred at length with several of his former associates.

Columbia to Have Courses on Films

Columbia University will establish a new academic unit devoted to the study of motion pictures as an important art form and as a growing social force.

The division, to be known as Film Study, will offer two courses on the motion picture industry and in addition will sponsor an amateur motion picture show. The first course, designed for laymen desiring to acquire information about the industry without serious study, will be entitled "Motion Picture Parade." It will be a series of twenty film showings and discussions in the McMillin Academic Theatre, Broadway at 116th Street, New York City. The series will be held on Wednesday evenings, starting October 27th, and the showings will be of old and new, domestic and foreign, fictional and documentary, and silent and sound films.

Speakers at the sessions will include Gilbert Seldes, Fritz Lang, William J. Fadiman, Paul Strand, Mark Van Doren, Captain John Lang, Julian Bryan, William de Mille, Terry Ramsaye and Morris Ernst.

The second course will be a twenty-eight-week series to be given in cooperation with the Museum of Modern Art Film Library at its headquarters Tuesday evenings. It will start in September and enrollment will be limited to 30 students.

The amateur motion picture show will be presented in April. Prize winning films taken in England, Scotland, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Australia, Holland, France, Canada and the United States will be shown.

Harlow Decision Pending

While Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is proceeding with the completion of "Saratoga," this decision does not make it necessarily conclusive that the final Jean Harlow picture will be released with the late star in it, it was said this week. Indications point toward this eventuality, however, as Metro reports the public, by hundreds of letters, feels identically about it.

Meanwhile, it was shown in Hollywood that Miss Harlow left her entire estate to her mother, Mrs. Jean Bello, as her will was filed for probate in Los Angeles. Her property was estimated to be worth between $100,000 and $1,000,000.

In both Canada and the United States, it is reported, pictures made by Miss Harlow as far back as "Hell's Angels," are being demanded by patrons, with her latest vehicles being booked for regular re-issue runs by MGM.

Now Want Filmland Name

The drive of Culver City, Cal., to capitalize on the name of Hollywood, which is not a town in itself but a part of Los Angeles, has turned away from the original selection which caused hundreds of protests of Hollywood citizens last week, and this week is asking its voters to approve "Filmland" as the new name of the town.

A filming tour of the country for historical, cultural and scenic scenes for a picture entitled "Symphony of the American Highways" has been completed. The trip was sponsored by Arthur Ziehm and Herbert von Schoellenbach headed the camera crew.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

IN COURTS

Chase Profited on Fox-GTE Investment

The Chase National Bank in New York actually made a profit of about $2,000,000 from its General Theatres Equipment and Fox Film investments, instead of the $55,000,000 loss figured in 1934, according to Supreme Court Justice Jeremiah T. Mahoney.

Judge Mahoney was named as a referee to decide whether a settlement of $2,500,000 should be accepted in a stockholders' suit against Albert H. Wiggin, former president, and the estates of two former directors.

Acceptance of the proposed settlement was recommended by Judge Mahoney.

Court Allows Fees in Fox Theatre Action

Federal Judge George H. Moore in St. Louis this week allowed the trustees for the Theatre Realty Company and their attorneys and other attorneys fees totaling 31 per cent on judgments for $773,000 which they obtained against the Fox Theatres Corporation last November. The judgments were for rent on the Fox Theatre between October, 1931, to February, 1933.

Warner Suit Date Set

Federal Judge John Knox in New York has restored to the calendar for trial the $500,000 copyright infringement action of Irving Gielow against Warners and M. Witmark and Sons. The suit was marked off the calendar in May, 1936, to allow dispositions of witnesses in California to be taken. Mr. Gielow charges that his three songs, "Flirtation Walk," "I Can't Believe" and "Mr. and Mrs. Is the Name" were infringed in the Warner picture, "Flirtation Walk."

Libel Suit Transferred

The "sawed house" libel suit, in and out of two courts for two years, has been returned to the district court at Oklahoma City by Mrs. Fern G. Chadwick, who is seeking $25,000 damages from Universal, Warners, Standard Theatres and Midwest Enterprises Company. She claimed newsreels gave the impression that she had been thrown out of her house.

Issues Chaplin Writ

Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell in New York has entered a final decree for an injunction and delivery of all catalogs and publicity matter relating to "The Kid" and "Shoulder Arms" to Charles Chaplin in his suit against Mogull Bros. Corporation, and Charles, Leo and Peter Mogull. He also perpetually enjoined the defendants from printing, copying or reproducing the two films. Mr. Chaplin brought the suit to prevent further alleged infringement of sales of prints of the pictures.

Vocafilm Suit Postponed

Trial of the $65,000,000 Sherman antitrust suit of the Vocafilm Corporation of America against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., has been postponed by Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell in New York to October 4.

Al Boasberg, Gag Writer, Is Dead

Al Boasberg, who for more than 25 years wrote jokes for leading comedians of the stage and radio and more recently the motion picture, died in Hollywood last Friday as he was chuckling over one of his "laughs." He was stricken with a heart attack as he recounted the startled look friends gave him the night before when he told them he was going to the opening of one of Hollywood's "newest epics to get some sleep."

Born at Buffalo, N. Y., December 5, 1892, Mr. Boasberg entered the industry in 1925 as a title writer. Later he wrote gags for Buster Keaton and after that directed comedies and wrote screen stories until joining RKO, where he remained on the writing staff until 1930. He later worked for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal among others and then returned to RKO, where he concentrated on short product.

Mr. Boasberg wrote many of the lines in the latest picture of the Marx Brothers, MGM's "A Day at the Races," and for a year had been writing the script for Jack Benny's radio programs. Earlier in his career he wrote sketches for Broadway revues and musical shows, including George White's "Scandals" and the "Ziegfeld Follies."

Retiring by nature, he seldom told jokes in public. He sometimes dictated comic ideas that occurred to him, but more frequently pecked them out with one finger on a typewriter. When a good idea struck him as it often did in the midst of lunch or dinner, he would jot it down on a menu or any handy piece of paper, and stuff it in his pocket.

Surviving are his widow, a brother, Nate Boasberg of Los Angeles, and two sisters, Mrs. Dewey Michaels and Mrs. Sam Cohen, both of Buffalo.

Upholds Columbia Dismissal

The appellate division of the New York supreme court last Friday upheld unanimously Justice Richard P. Lydon's dismissal of a $200,000 suit brought by John L. Loeb against Columbia Pictures, Harry Cohn and other company executives. The suit involved an option to buy voting trust certificates, which the plaintiff failed to exercise because of a decline in the value of the stock. He claimed the decline was due to "wrongful acts" on the part of company executives.

RCA Wins Injunction

Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell in New York this week granted RCA and General Electric a permanent injunction by consent restraining Eli Dane, Oscar Dane, Paul R. Nachemson, Majestic Radio Corporation, Danlico Radio and Television Corporation, Webster Stores and Avon Stores from further alleged infringement on patents covering radio receiving sets. A judgment for $6,335 was also granted against Eli and Oscar Dane for profits, damages and costs arising out of the alleged infringement.

William H. Stefes of the DeLuxe theatre in Detroit has filed suit in the circuit court there to force Columbia Pictures to deliver "Lost Horizon" as part of its 1936-'37 contract.

OBITUARIES

Sir James Barrie, Playwright, Dies

Sir James M. Barrie, noted author and playwright, died last Saturday in London of pneumonia in a nursing home. He was 77 years old. His condition had been serious for several days, and he lost consciousness early Saturday morning. He had been suffering for many years from neuritis, which paralyzed his right arm. He is survived by his adopted son, Peter Llewellyn Davies, who as a child had inspired "Peter Pan;" his brother, Nicholas Davies, and Lady Cynthia Asquith.

Barrie's first book, "Better Dead," was published in 1887, three years after he came to London as a free-lance newspaper writer from his birthplace, Kirriemuir, small village in eastern Scotland. His first play, "Becky Sharp," was produced in London in 1891. Meanwhile, he had written the novel, "The Little Minister," which he turned into a play in 1896 to start his career as a successful playwright. Other successes followed, including "Peter Pan," "The Admirable Crichton" and "Little Mary."

"The Little Minister," produced by Radio with sound, was by far the most popular motion picture version of any of Sir James' works. The same company followed that success with "Quality Street." The "Little Minister" first reached the screen in silent form about 1919 through Paramount, which later produced "Peter Pan."

Paul Burger

Funeral services for Paul Burger, late writer for Twentieth Century-Fox, were held in Hollywood last Friday with interment at Forest Lawn Memorial Park Cemetery, Glendale.

Federal Theatre School Opened at Vassar College

The Vassar College experimental theatre at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., opened this week as 44 members of the Federal Theatre, including actors, writers, directors, designers and supervisors, arrived at the college for six weeks of training. The group represents all parts of the country, including Seattle, Los Angeles, Portland, Boston, New Orleans, Chicago, Newark, Miami, Tampa, Atlanta and other principal cities. About 20 of the members are from New York.

With the Works Progress Administration providing labor costs, Vassar donating the use of the theatre and living quarters and Rockefeller Foundation taking care of production costs and any additional expenses, the project will present three productions.

Rogers Sculptor Chosen

Mrs. Will Rogers has selected Jo Davidson, New York and Paris sculptor, to make a statue of her late husband, the humorist and film actor. The statue, to be paid for out of a $35,000 appropriation voted by the Oklahoma legislature, will be placed in the National Statuary Hall in Washington, D. C. Meanwhile, the first session of the Will Rogers Memorial committee has been called for next Sunday in Oklahoma City, Okla.

PERFORMANCE

Smooth, silky, almost silent action is the heritage of every Motiograph. Years of experience coupled with modern engineering endows the Model "K" with every essential requisite to securing "the utmost in screen performance."

OPERATION

The same engineering skill responsible for the new standard of excellence simultaneously provides those features which made the projectionist's job far easier and more gratifying . . . easier threading . . . framing and focusing from either side are only a few of the conveniences that make it a pleasure to operate the Model "K."

MAINTENANCE

Motiograph is designed and built for performance . . . not constant maintenance. Every bearing is provided with a removable bronze bushing . . . gears, star, cam, sprockets, shoes, shafts, and tracks are of hardened steel and ground. Consequently, Motiograph's maintenance costs are unbelievably low.

ADAPTABILITY

Correct design assures exhibitors Motiograph's complete adaptability to any standard sound system without the use of shims or makeshift accessories.

AVAILABILITY

Wherever you find "Film Row" you'll find Motiograph ably represented by the outstanding business supply house. Motiograph dealers are competent and able to serve their customers to the best advantage. Make it a point to visit your Motiograph distributor and become acquainted with the Model "K" first hand.

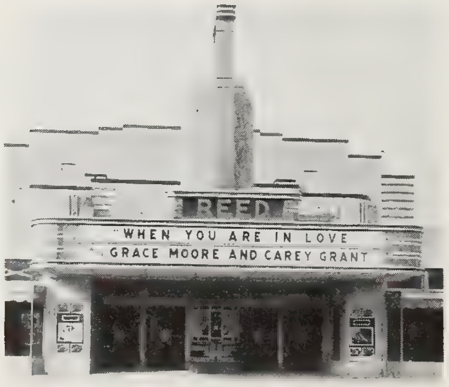
THE REED IN ALEXANDRIA, VA.



■ The Reed theatre is located on King street in historic Alexandria, Va., a short distance from the George Washington Memorial Temple. The construction is of skeleton steel frame, brick walls, poured-in-place gypsum roof slab and finished with built-up slag. The front is of Indiana limestone. Marquee and vertical sign are trimmed in neon, and the attraction boards are Adler silhouette type. The name of the theatre spelled over the marquee is formed by free-standing letters with a background on which colored light is reflected. The auditorium, which seats 1,400, has walls with two types of treatment. The rear two-thirds of them are finished with Acousti-Celotex, the remainder bears murals, one interpreting life at Mt. Vernon, the other at Jefferson's Monticello. The floor is of the "reversed" type. Chairs, which are by the American Seating Company, are of spring-edge and padded-back type and are spaced 34 inches back to back. Auditorium lighting is principally from built-out ceiling troughs of decorative character. Fixtures (by Voigt) are also used here and in other sections of the theatre. Projection equipment includes Simplex projectors and RCA Photophone sound system. The Reed theatre is operated by the Alexandria Amusement Corporation, of which W. Harmon Reed is president. John J. Zink, of Baltimore, was the architect. The building and its equipment represents an investment of $165,000.

VOLUME 127 JUNE 26, 1937 NUMBER THIRTEEN

Three Equipment Groups Emerge From Hectic Dealer Convention

CONTINUANCE OF THE Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association was effected at the annual convention of the organization in Chicago, running through its scheduled three days beginning on June 18, but out of the conclave of dealers and manufacturers, the latter attending in connection with equipment exhibits, came three organizations, resulting from a split in the ranks of the dealers themselves, and from the decision of the manufacturers to form an association of their own.

One of the important aims of the manufacturers' association, which has been named the Theatre Equipment Supply Manufacturers' Association, is to conduct an equipment exhibit every year, with the dealers as guests. Both dealer groups announced they would support these trade showings of equipment.

A committee consisting of Joseph B. Kleckner, head of Motiograph, Inc., chairman; Oscar Neu of Neumade Products; William Geddris of the Ideal Seating Company; H. C. Hecht of Dalite Screen; Harry Strong, C. H. Ashcraft and Joe Robin, the latter of the Imperial Electric Company, was appointed to make plans and preparations for the first event, which is planned for sometime in June 1938, in Chicago.

The reason the manufacturers' organization was developed was largely the result of the situation that existed as the convention opened. With two groups battling for the leadership of the dealers' association, the first two days of the meeting found all the dealers in conference both day and night and little if any attention paid to the manufacturers who had brought exhibits. To forestall such an event again, the manufacturers decided to form a group of their own and to invite the dealers, and also film producers, manufacturers of all allied lines of motion picture materials, and theatre architects, to attend an annual theatre equipment and materials exposition.

The manufacturers, it was said, have discovered that the foreign market, especially the Far East, South and Central America, is a very lucrative one for them and that an International Trade Show would be the ideal thing for bringing the buyers of anything pertaining to motion pictures to this country for one convention, which would supersede many other such exhibitions.

Manufacturers voiced the opinion that if producers, manufacturers, distributors and dealers all co-operated, this plan for a huge International Trade Show could easily succeed and be staged in a manner that would attract world-wide interest. All representative companies that have anything to offer in the motion picture field would be invited to attend and take part in the show.

According to Mr. Kleckner, the time is now here for the establishment of such a trade show, and he expressed himself as being confident that the show would attract universal consideration. The supply dealers association would hold their meetings at the same time as the show was held, Mr. Kleckner pointed out, and this, he said, would be of great value to all concerned.

The committee appointed will hold a number of meetings during the next few months and work out the plans for the trade show. Major and independent film producers will be approached regarding their lending some support to the plan, and the commercial and educational film concerns will also be asked to join in the scheme. The 1939 meeting will probably be held in New York, partly because of the world's fair there.

Better Theatres is published by the Quigley Publishing Company, Inc., Rockefeller Center, New York, every fourth week as Section Two of Motion Picture Herald. Martin Quigley, publisher and editor-in-chief. George Schutz, editor. Colvin Brown, general manager. Ray Gallo, advertising manager. C. B. O'Neill, Western advertising manager, 624 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago. Contributing consultants: J. T. Knight, Jr., physical operation; Ben Schlanger, architectural form.

The group of dealers retaining membership in the Independent Theatre Supply Dealers Association elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

H. W. Graham of Graham Brothers, Denver, president (re-elected); and Joe Goldberg of Joe Goldberg, Inc., Chicago, secretary and treasurer.

The new dealers' organization, which organized under the name of Theatre Equipment Distributors of America, chose Art Morrone of the Superior Motion Picture Supply Company, Pittsburgh, president; Miss E. L. Hurley of Clem's Motion Picture Supplies, Philadelphia, secretary; and I. Perse of the Capital Motion Picture Supply Company, New York City, treasurer.

Over 35 Exhibits At Dealers' Meeting

The Imperial Room of the Medinah Club was the setting for more than 35 exhibits at the dealers' convention in Chicago. Other manufacturers represented at the convention were forced to cancel plans for exhibits when the meeting was delayed and not enough space allotted for the exhibitions.

Operadio Manufacturing Company, of St. Charles, Ill., had a large display. Prominent among the things offered was a new dual channel amplifier, and exciter lamp power supply rectifier. A number of speakers were also displayed, as well as public address systems and inter-communication systems. H. A. Wilson, Paul R. Fernald and L. A. King represented the company.

The newer models of Gold Seal ticket registers were shown by the General Register Company of New York. The LaVezzi Manufacturing Company of Chicago, displayed a number of projection replacement parts. The GoldE Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, had a large display of products, which included rewinders, rewind tables, film magazines, roto-chrome spotlights and a new baby spot. Roy Bedore was in charge.

Universal Reels, Inc., of Long Island City, was represented by Mrs. Lachman, who demonstrated the new cast aluminum reel which Universal has just put on the market. The Wagner Sign Company was another concern which had a display. A large sign was set up inside the hall to demonstrate the various types of lighting effects and letters.

Motors made by the Century Electric Company of St. Louis were shown, and the Continental Electric Company, of St. Charles, Ill., had on display its Cetron photocells and rectifiers. The United Optical Corporation, of New York, displayed its latest types of reflector lens.

The Ruby Lamp Manufacturing Company and Lighting Distributors, Inc., both firms under the presidency of Louis Phillips, had a brilliant display of lighting fixtures. Special sketches are made up by the company's own artists and submitted free of charge during the convention.

The Ideal Seating Company, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was represented by William Geddris, president of the company, and its showing of modern theatre chairs was one of the more prominent displays at the exhibit.

Goldberg Brothers, of Denver, had a display of reels, rewinds and spotlights while Albert Sprincin of Chicago, exhibited a twin clock device for the box office. The Wenzel Company of Chicago, with Mr. Wenzel and L. J. Peterson, sales manager, in charge, had one of the largest displays at the show. Four projectors and a projector base were displayed. Also on display were soundheads, amplifiers, rewinds and sound equipment manufactured by the Wenzel company.

Motiograph displayed three projectors, one with a Brenkert lamp, one a Strong lamp, and the other an Ashcraft lamp. Messrs. Kleckner, Nuber and Abbott represented the company, which had perhaps the largest space of all.

Dalite Screen was represented by H. C. Hecht. The Hurley Screen Co., Inc., of Long Island City, was another screen company with a display.

Summerour and Devine, Inc., of Kansas City, Mo., exhibited lighting fixtures.

Other companies represented with displays were the Essanay Electric Company, changeovers; the Baldor Electric Company, of St. Louis, rectifiers; the Forest Manufacturing Company, of Belleville, N. J., rectifiers; Metallic Arts Corporation, lighting fixtures.

The National Carbon Company had representatives at the convention, as did the Brenkert Light Projection Company and the Strong Electric Company, respectively represented by Karl Brenkert and Harry Strong.

The Peabody Seating Company, of North Manchester, Ind., and the Vallen Company, of Akron, makers of stage equipment, were represented.

Test Mirror Shield Pigment for L. I. Light

EXPERIMENTS with pigmentation in the manufacture of mirror guards, or shields, for the protection of projection lamp mirrors, points to the practicability of the method for the purpose of attaining a white light with low-intensity projection arcs, according to S. Nickelsburg of the Morelight Company, manufacturers of projection lamps and mirror guards.

Final patent papers, he announced, have now been obtained on the mirror shields, which have come into extensive use since the introduction of suprex carbons as a guard placed over the mirror to eliminate pitting of the more costly mirror itself.

$500,000 in Remodeling In 3 Southern States

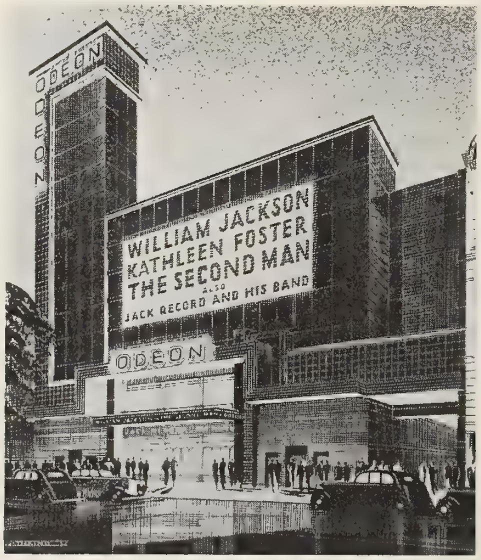
RURAL THEATRES in Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi have become vastly different during the last 18 months as a result of remodeling. Approximately all of the 292 rural theatres in these three states have been improved, at a cost estimated at $500,000. Thirty-four new houses have been opened at a cost of approximately $432,000, bringing the total spent for remodeling and new houses to nearly $950,000, according to a survey of that area.

And leaders in the theatre supply business and the film exchanges report that all of this has been done with no increases generally in admission prices.

Cash registers jingled merry tunes of prosperity last year and the theatre owners and operators put their profits back in the business, giving their patrons more comfortable seats, more attractive lounges and fronts, and modern equipment.

General trend in the style of the new houses is decidedly modern. Most of the houses have seating capacities of between 400 and 900.

Rural theatre owners are building miniature metropolitan theatres, giving their patrons the best in comfort and equipment. Many of the theatres are air-conditioned, while all have modern ventilating systems, which were not so numerous a few years ago.



Architect's perspective rendering of the design for a new British theatre, which will be an addition to the rapidly extending Odeon circuit operated by Oscar Deutsch. This Odeon will be erected on the site of the famous Alhambra in Leicester Square, London, and will have a policy of extended runs, chiefly of United Artists product, it is announced. The architects are Andrew Mather and Harry W. Weedon.

Arkansas leads the list in both modernization and in the class of new theatres. Twelve new theatres have been opened in that state during the last 18 months. These theatres cost from $12,000 to $20,000 generally, with two Malco theatres running as high as $40,000.

Film exchange officials report that nearly all of the 149 houses in Arkansas have spent large sums for improving the houses. The largest portion of the expenditures has gone for better equipment and seats.

Outstanding in the theatre business in Arkansas during the last 18 months has been the swift rise of G. W. Haynes, former Ridgely, Tenn., farmer, who started with one house about 18 months ago and now has 21. Further expansion is planned this fall.

Fifteen new theatres have been opened in Mississippi. They range from $5,000 to $30,000 in cost. In Mississippi, as well as in Arkansas and Tennessee, practically, all of the houses have balconies for the negroes, and these balconies are proving real assets.

A large portion of the theatres have been remodeled in Mississippi, but the remodeling has not been quite as extensive as in Arkansas.

Seven new theatres costing from $5,000 to $10,000 have been opened in Tennessee. Owners in Tennessee have modernized their houses, but not as extensively as in the two other states.

Drastic Changes in Projection Requirements

A NEW ordinance passed by the St. Louis city council and signed by Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann on June 8, relating to motion picture projection and nitro-cellulose film, may mean a substantial increase in operating and construction costs if strict compliance is insisted upon.

The measure, which has had the backing of the IATSE, provides for the employment of a projectionist for each projector, while one section reads, "No person shall be allowed within the projection booth except the owner, manager, business manager of the local union, operators or apprentices as authorized by the local union and agreeable to the management."

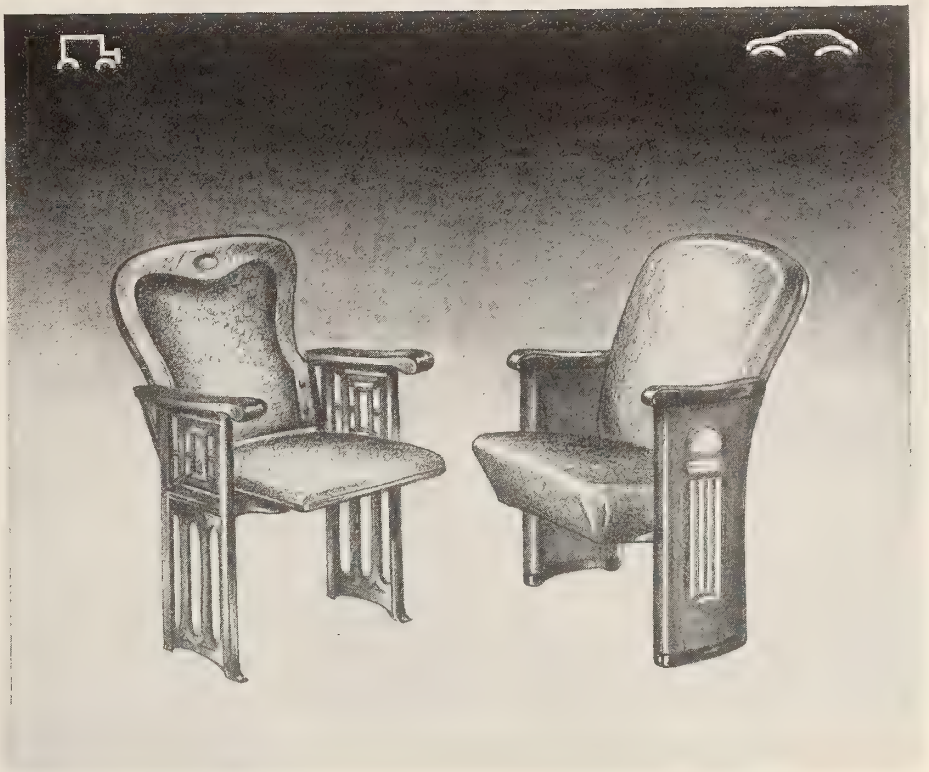
Other notable requirements are that the theatre must have stairways, instead of ladders, leading to the projection room; two-way ventilating systems, including large exhaust fans must be provided; there must be two exits for each projection room, an extra room for rewinding, hot and cold running water and toilet facilities adjoining the projection room.

It is also provided that no projection room may be less than 12 feet long, 12 feet deep, and 8½ feet high, and other minimum dimensions are stipulated.

It has been remarked in St. Louis theatre circles that hardly a single house exists in that city which meets all the requirements of the ordinance.

Should Your Theatre Be Reseated?

• It's a fair question, with the answer lying in the changes through modern engineering and design that have come into the theatre chair itself



The old (but still widely in use!) and the new in theatre chairs. These sketches are based on models typical of the not-so-long-ago, and on types representative of theatre seating today.

ONE OF the approaches to the question of reseating is well illustrated in the attitude of a certain circuit in the South. Two houses had been taken over, in one of which the auditorium seating, while not extremely old in point of years, had received particularly hard usage and apparently had not had the benefit of methodical maintenance. While extensive remodeling, particularly at the front, was contemplated, this was not to be done until the following summer. It was decided, however, to replace the seating immediately, section by section, without suspending operation. The chair selected was of course one of the modern types. And a few weeks later the general manager of the circuit volunteered this comment:

"I've been in show business a long time and I thought I knew all the answers. We reseated this house right away principally because in the long run that would be cheaper than trying to get the old chairs in good enough condition to be used, since we probably would have to replace them in a year or so anyway. We certainly didn't expect to get any reaction from the new chairs at the box office. But that is what happened. The effect was almost immediate. Installation of new chairs was the only change made at the time the increased patronage began to set in, so they must have been the cause."

The writer has heard similar comment by quite a number of theatre operators during the past year or two, and one is unquestionably justified in saying that reseating at the proper time—which is when the existing chairs do not conform adequately to established standards—is a sound investment, rather than merely the gratification of pride in one's property.

The reaction of the public, as in the instance just cited, is derived from the change in theatre chair construction and design during the last few years. Without becoming technical, let us examine representative characteristics of the modern theatre chair which demonstrates the difference between it and its predecessors.

To consider the backs: These are, almost without exception, unholstered today, and for the protection of the upholstery, a metallic band, either cylindrical or with rounded edges, now extends along the edges. The wood veneer over the rear of the back has been replaced by a steel plate, ending the problem of slivers. The entire back assembly, which includes the steel plate, is secured to the standards by means of bolts and lock nuts, eliminating screws. This change in construction naturally contributes to a design in keeping with modern styles, but its significance is more than one of appearance. Primarily its purpose is to increase durability, to reduce maintenance costs, and to eliminate hazards to the clothing and even the person of patrons.

The seat of the modern theatre is hardly to be compared with that representing former standards of comfort. The "squab" seat, with its cotton and tow padding, the "slip" seat with its "skin-upholstered" panel and solid wood or steel frame, have been discarded. The theatre chair capable

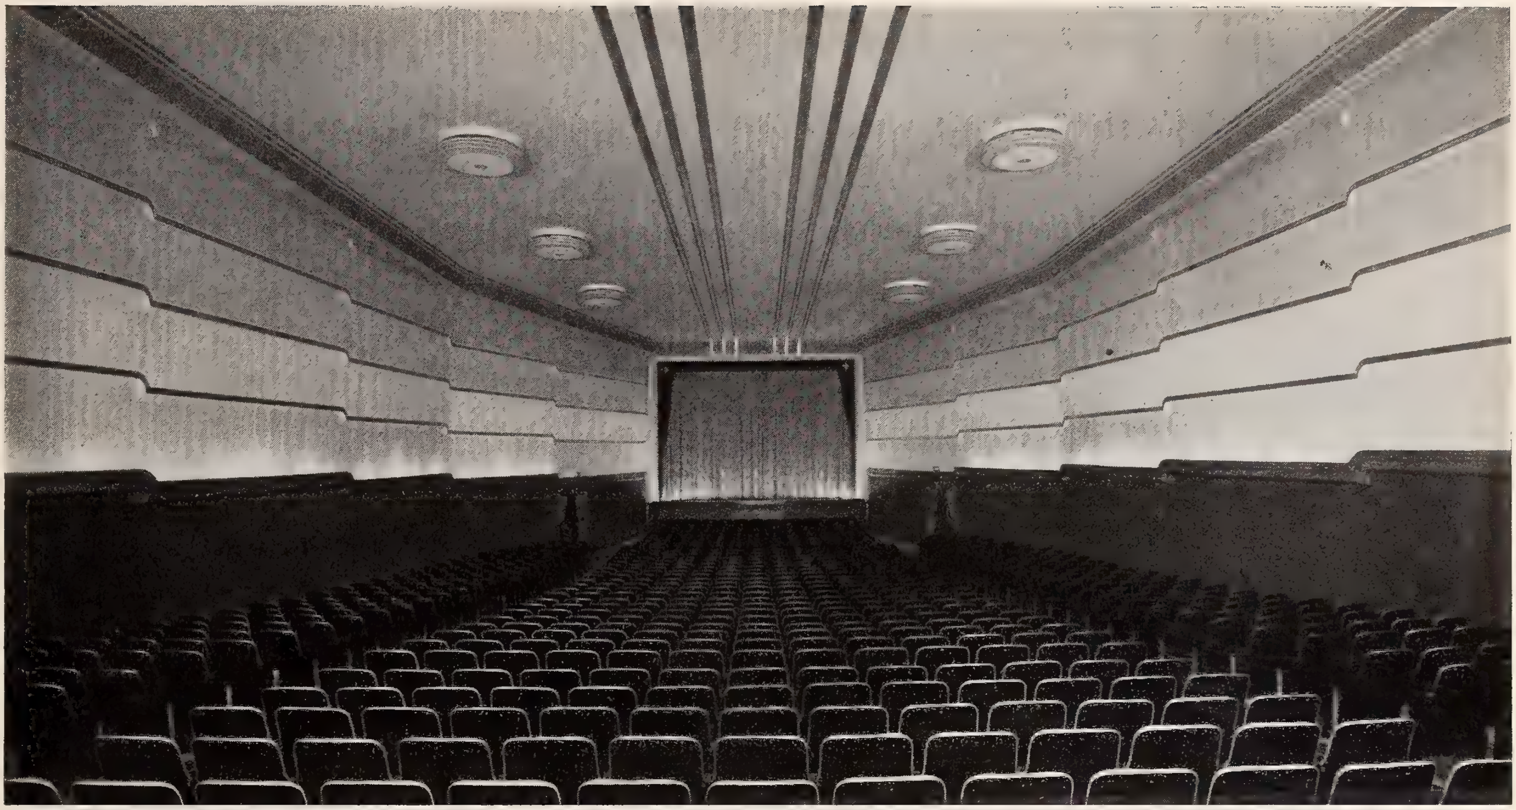
FLOOR PLANS, WESTMONT THEATRE, COLUMBUS, OHIO

Architectural design and engineering by the F & Y Construction Company



Forward view of the auditorium showing the broken-area walls gradually converging toward the screen platform and reflecting the light of trough sources.

THE WESTMONT theatre, a suburban house recently opened in Columbus, Ohio, by Clarence A. McDonald as the fourth theatre in a circuit, is one of the most modern of the outlying theatres in southern Ohio. The other MacDonald units are the Southland, Thurmania and Arlington, all Columbus neighborhood or suburban houses.

The Westmont was designed and erected by the F. & Y. Construction Company of Columbus, which handled all the architectural and engineering details and supervised the construction. The front elevation is in black glass to the height of the marquee, above which buff terra cotta is employed. At this upper area the facade design is vertically divided by a series of fins in terra cotta, and these are illuminated at night with floodlighting which traces the fin pattern in light and shadow.

The marquee (by the Gustave Hirsch Organization) is in blue porcelain enamel with blue and gold tube lighting around the edge. The name, Westmont, spelled in 5-foot outlined letters across the front, is illuminated in gold neon.

A smokestack located at one side of the front is incorporated in the architectural scheme by treatment as an ornamental tower, the lower part of which carries a vertical theatre name sign.

The box office is centrally located at the sidewalk line, and doors leading to the lobby adjoin it but placed slightly back from the sidewalk. The ceiling of this recessed entrance area is ornamented with blue mirror glass set in stainless steel moulds. The box office and front display frames are framed in marble set in stainless steel. Across the fascia of the building, above this entrance area, extends a two-line attraction board with silhouette letters. The shallow lobby has additional display frames with carved circular glass mirror trim.

FOYER AND LOUNGE

The Westmont has no foyer proper, traffic area being severely restricted in the interests of seating capacity (see floor plan), but a relatively deep promenade extends almost across the rear of the auditorium giving access to mezzanine stairs as well as to the two aisles. This promenade area has an interesting functional lighting scheme in which trough lighting is combined with exit panels to produce ornamental exit lights. The standee rail is of plaster with concealed light recesses and an ornamental chromium-plated top rail.

The single stairway to the mezzanine level, where a women's lounge and toilet facilities, and the projection room is located, is off the left side (upon entering) of the promenade.

The women's lounge and toilet facilities, a manager's office, and the projection room are located on a mezzanine level above the lobby and promenade, reached by a single stairway (see floor plan). The women's lounge has walls with horizontal bands painted in shades of rose and coral; carpeting (which is the same on the stairs and in the promenade area) of Mohawk Velvet with a brown background and orchid figure; and modern steel furniture. Men's toilet facilities are located in a sublevel.

THE AUDITORIUM

The auditorium has a relatively narrow plan with seating arranged in three banks. The floor slope is of the "reversed" type, rising slightly at the forward section.

The auditorium is given a more or less illusory convergent shape, proceeding toward the screen platform. This is affected by the use of horizontal ribs along the walls with intermittent bends spaced to create vertical areas that seem to lie in different planes. These panels are in plaster (the two upper ones in acoustic plaster) and are painted in gradations of color from light buff at the lowest one to orchid at the cornice.

Illumination is from light troughs concealed behind the wainscots. They are wired in four color circuits with which many shades may be created by means of individual rheostats. The basic colors are red, green, blue and amber. Control of this entire color lighting system is from the projection room.

The ceiling is finished in acoustic plaster painted a light buff. The screen opening extends to the ceiling, measuring 25 x 18 feet.

Auditorium chairs (by the American Seating Company) are of modern pattern and fully upholstered, with backs covered in solid dark red mohair and seats in black leather. End standards are trimmed in red and silver.

PROJECTION

The projection room (see floor plan) measures 16 x 8 feet. Equipment includes two Gardner projectors, Brenkert Enarc projection lamps, a Roth motor-generator and RCA sound system. The screen image is 20 feet wide.

The Westmont is completely air-conditioned, employing well water for cooling. The auditorium distribution system is of the downward type, with circular diffusers of ornamental character.

Here's how to Widen the Area you Draw from

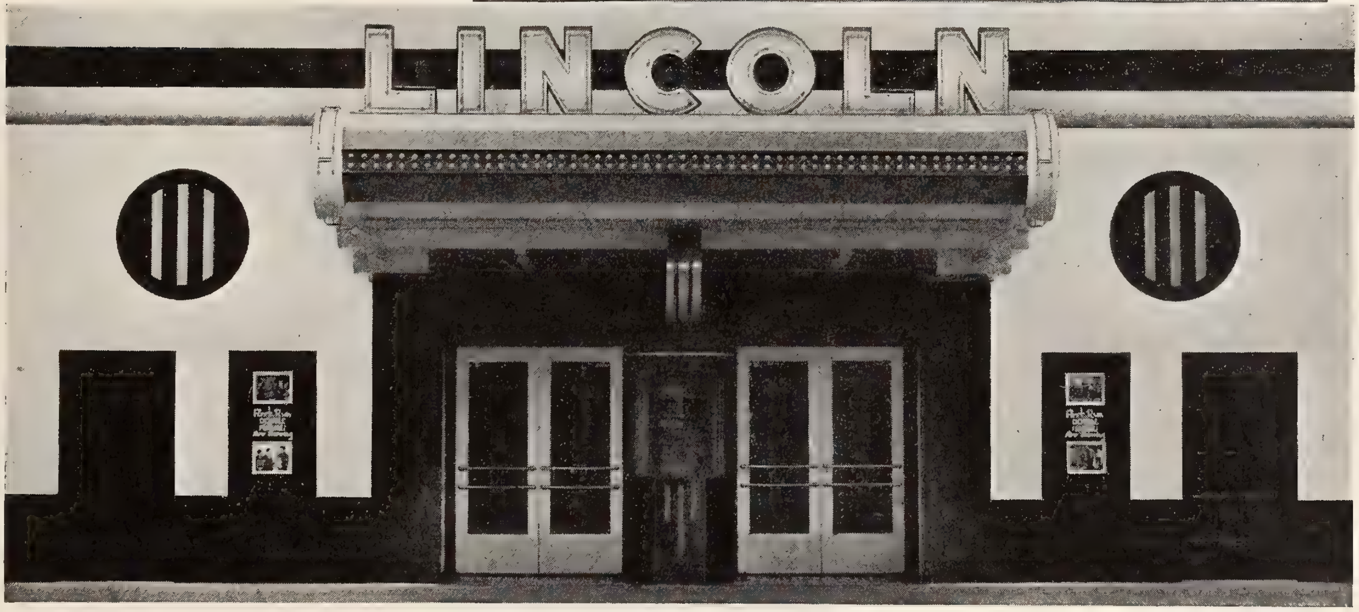
Here's a theatre in Danville, Ill., that presents a modern, inviting face to potential patrons, thanks to a new Pittco Theatre Front. And what a difference the new front makes! Remodel your theatre in the Pittco way . . . and build a bigger box office.



A NEW Pittco Theatre Front . . . modern, inviting and progressive-looking . . . catches the eye of potential patrons. Not just the potential movie-goers in a limited area in your immediate vicinity. But prospective patrons from all over town. They say "There's a theatre I'd like to patronize." And they do . . . even if it means coming out of their way.

The result is a wider area from which you draw business. More patrons. Better box office. Bigger profits.

Air-conditioning equipment has been installed in the Victory and Majestic theatres, and the equipment in the Gloria and Garden theatres has been improved and modernized.

Clinton Pollock has been promoted to the position of assistant manager of the Paramount in Salem, Mass. James Fields is manager.

Chester Sawin has resigned as Boston RCA salesman. Herbert Elives has replaced him.

Morrie Cohn has installed 998 new American Seating Company chairs in his Strand in Council Bluffs, Ia., while John C. Eding has installed 250 American Seating Company chairs in the Community theatre, Aurelia, Ia.

Frederick Greenway has replaced Stan Gosnell as manager of Loew's State in Boston. Mr. Greenway was manager of the Century in Baltimore. Mr. Gosnell left for Baltimore to enter another business.

American Federation of labor organizers have added a theatre employes' union in Springfield, Mass. Myles Gibbon won the election for the initial presidency of the group. Julius Addison is business manager.

Harvey Smith of the Strand theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., has been transferred to Winston-Salem, N. C., as manager of the Colonial.

Dan Austell, who has been manager of the Criterion theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., is the new manager of the Strand there.

Fred Bearden, who has been manager of the Wilby-Kincey Opera House in Abbeville, S. C., has been transferred to Greenwood, S. C.

Joseph Abercrombie is the new manager of the Rex theatre in Miami, Fla. He was formerly manager of the Flagler theatre in Miami and has had wide experience in the theatrical business as manager of Loew's State, United Artists and Grauman's Chinese theatres in Hollywood.

Dave O. Goyen has been named manager of the Hialeah theatre in Miami, Fla. He was formerly assistant manager of the Regent theatre there. C. H. Mott, new manager of the Flagler theatre in Miami, Fla., was formerly the manager of the Hialeah.

Miss Addis Brown, wealthy young theatre enthusiast of Prescott, Ark., is erecting a 375-seat house in Prescott at a cost estimated at $30,000.

The RKO Palace, managed by C. Harry Schreiber, who is also city manager in Columbus, Ohio, has completed installation of a $10,000 cooling system.

Max Stearn, operator of the Southern, downtown subsequent-run house, has installed a new ventilating system, while the Uptown, likewise a subsequent-run in the business sector of that city, and piloted by Virgil A. MY LITTLE GAMBLE IN A

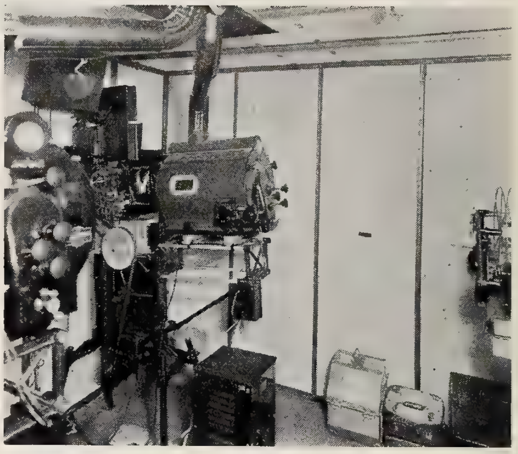
[Mr. Albert Hefferan responds with some snapshots and a few words, to our inquiry about his Lynx theatre in skeptical Coopperstown, Mich.—THE EDITOR.



Projection room, of angle-iron and asbestos.

AFTER operating the Owl theatre upstairs over a garage in Grand Rapids [Mich.] for six years, featuring chiefly foreign films, I decided last summer, upon finishing Junior college, to see what I could do with a larger theatre. The small town of Coopersville, which has a population of about 1,000, had come to my notice before. It is located only 20 miles from Grand Rapids. It had never had a motion picture theatre—some of its people had never seen a motion picture! But the people, who largely are Dutch, are quite prosperous. I finally determined to give it a try.

I found a building formerly used as a restaurant. It measured 22 x 40 feet, and, by adding 24 feet at the rear, I could get in at least 150 seats with a center aisle and five seats on each side. I took over the property and began the remodeling of it at once.

I put the entrance and lobby on one side, with the box office under the projection rom. By placing three steps in the small lobby, I managed to get enough slope to the auditorium floor to give the screen good visibility. I put in a small stage, with an exit at one side. On the other side I installed an oil heater.

Outer wall construction is of cement blocks (the front wall is in the original brick). Inside walls are of rough stucco laid over celotex and painted a cream color. The acoustics are fine (probably due a great deal to luck). With lumiline lamps on the walls and ceiling and colored footlights at the stage, all on rheostats controlled in the projection room, and with a home-made red velvet traveller curtain, the effect is pleasing.

The projection room is constructed of asbestos with an angle-iron frame. It has a 4-inch concrete floor. The equipment is what I had in the Owl theatre, but thoroughly reconditioned. I have two Powers 6b projectors, Syn-crofilm soundheads and Morelight hilo lamps. I now have plans for an electric curtain control, so everything can be controlled from the projection room.

Now that the theatre, which I named the Lynx, seems to be a permanent addition to the town and not the gamble it was, I hope to install a modern front.

I operate only on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights, with a complete change of program each Tuesday and Friday. My admission prices are ten and twenty cents.

I have trained a local young man, Donald Stores, to help me in the projection, and I have a cashier (Miss Virginia Laug) and a floor man (Robert Wilcox). Donald Blietz, who was with me at the Owl, assists me in managing.

I have tried to give my patrons the highest type of pictures and I believe they appreciate it. I have won over many of the more religious groups who at first were somewhat opposed to "movies."—Albert Hefferan.

A DEPARTMENT OF PRACTICAL COUNSEL AND TIMELY INFORMATION

Selecting Grilles to Assure Air-Conditioning Efficiency

● Installation of incorrect grilles is a common cause of ineffective operation of air-conditioning systems. Here is guidance in choosing them

RECENTLY a rather peculiar condition was brought to my attention. I had occasion to inspect the air-conditioning installation in a theatre. The entire job had cost better than $20,000. I was absolutely astounded to note that the grilles used under the balcony were home-made grilles! Part of the grilles were properly selected and designed "bought" grilles, but those in the most conspicuous locations had been home-made.

The saving at top was not in excess of $400, and the efficiency at best was not in excess of 40% of properly designed and manufactured grilles. What is the quality of reasoning that will permit such a thing to happen? In my opinion it can only be accounted for by lack of knowledge.

In another instance I was called in because of a bad condition existing in the foyer of a theatre. After careful investigation it was found that there was nothing wrong with the plant, while all the dampers were set correctly. The grilles for the foyer outlets were "bought" grilles, but they had been improperly selected. A new and different type of grille was the answer, and the condition in the foyer thereupon became satisfactory.

The above-mentioned instances are but two of a great many which would seem to indicate that there is a need for greater understanding of grilles, especially as to their selection and use.

AIR FLOW AND ITS CONTROL

IN ORDER to understand the functioning of grilles it is necessary to know something about air flow. Generally speaking, air flow may be of two classes—the first might be called streamline or straight-line flow; the second is best described as turbulent flow.

STRAIGHT LINE

The streamline or straight-line flow exists only at relatively very low velocities. It consists in the movement of layers of air over each other in parallel formation. Within an enclosing duct, and at very low velocities, the straight-line flow velocity is zero at the duct surface and increases gradually to a maximum at the central point of the duct.

If we can visualize a length of straight duct, to one end of which a fan or blower is connected, and that fan or blower so designed as to deliver air at a constant velocity for any given speed, then if we had a variable speed motor connected to the fan we could so regulate the speed as to give us an approximation of straight-line air flow.

If we gradually increased the speed of the fan we would discover that at a given velocity we no longer had straight-line flow, but turbulent air flow.

TURBULENT FLOW

Expressed in more technical terms, turbulent flow begins at that point in which the velocity of the layers of air exceeds the resistance of the air itself or the friction against the inner surfaces of the duct. Such an increase in velocity causes high- and low-pressure areas within the duct.

It is this difference in pressure that causes ducts made of too thin sheet metal to vibrate or "breath" and give to the air stream a roaring sound.

This difference in velocity (or pressure) will cause the air to travel in waves; such air waves have a tendency to increase in amplitude to such a point as to cause complete confusion within the duct; and if the duct is of sufficient length, the entire wave formation is completely disrupted and we have a condition that may be described as a continuous series of eddies, like rapids in a mountain stream.

DUCT CONDITIONS

To start with, there are no fans or blowers on the market that are so designed that they can deliver into a duct a perfect straight-line flow of air. All air streams from blowers now available may approximate a straight-line flow, but it definitely has a pulsating characteristic at its source. Such pulsations travel at high velocity and have very similar characteristics to those of a sound wave. They consist in alternate layers of compressed and expanded air, resulting in motion of the air along a straight line from the source of of the impulses. The pulsations from the blades of a blower tend to add to the eddies in the duct and to the general confusion of the air passing through the ducts.

. . . and in the July 24th issue, Mr. Knight will offer practical guidance to those who are thinking of modernizing the illumination of their theatres, or planning a lighting scheme for a new theatre. To the July 24th issue, in which special attention will be given to modern type lighting fixtures, marquees and signs, Mr. Knight will contribute a discussion of wiring layouts, color circuits, flashers and other phases of the mechanical arrangements, all from the point of view of good practice today.

The foregoing discussion represents an effort to show the absolute confusion within an air duct, and it should help one to

MAINTENANCE Tabs

By

CLEANLINESS is the first requisite of any equipment maintenance program. When machines are cleaned at regular intervals conditions which might have led to failure are prevented from arising, and little faults that might cause serious trouble are detected and repaired before shutdowns occur.

A portable motor-driven blower is mighty convenient and helpful for blowing the dirt out of motors, windings, generators, fans and grilles. When motors and fans are being cleaned the lubrication of the bearings should be checked. More attention has to be given to open-sleeve bearings than to those that are closed, or to anti-friction types.

At least once each year the oil from all bearings should be drained, after which the bearing and oil wells should be flushed clean with kerosene and filled to the proper level with new oil. In lubricating motors care must be exercised to fill the bearings to the proper level. It is stated by an engineer connected with one of the large maintenance companies in New York that 90% of the motor winding failures are caused by excess oil in the motor bearings.

COLOR: Color, as one perceives it when looking at a painted surface or a painted object, is simply a psychological or optical sensation. We say that lampblack is black. The sensation is due to the fact that the structure of the pigment has caused the absorption of nearly all of the visible rays of the light that falls upon it. When the same light falls upon white zinc or white lead, they are practically all reflected, and we immediately say that the paint is white.

We see red when we look at a surface painted with red lead because the pigment in the paint absorbs all the visible rays of the light except the red rays which it reflects to the eye. And so with all other colors, the surface absorbing all other colors except the color which we see.

This leads us to this conclusion: Our color sensations from the decorations within a theatre are dependent upon the composition of the artificial light used in the theatre, and a theatre should be decorated always with this point prominently in mind.

POSTER PAINT: Most of the artist paints which we use in theatre display work are nothing but casein paints. Casein is the name applied to a group of related compounds found in cow's milk. The exact structural composition of these compounds has not been determined.

Cold-water paints may consist merely of water and the pigment, as for example, whitewash; or of water, a pigment and a binder. Most cold-water paints must not be subjected to water or moisture; however, cold-water paints, with a lime-casein binder, dry with a smooth egg-shell like coat which is practically water-resistant and can be very satisfactorily used for certain interior work. Casein paints come in various colors depending upon the pigment used in them.

Where posters are exposed with no glass protection, the best grade of casein paint is recommended.

Casein paints have other uses in theatres, especially in the small houses for treatment of side walls above the wainscoting.

appreciate to some extent the difficulty of tapping into that duct for a grille and controlling the quantity of air that passes through the grille, as well as the direction and velocity of the air leaving the grille. Every time an opening is made into a duct, or the size or shape or the direction of the duct is altered, the characteristics of the air flowing through that duct are altered, either in quantity or velocity or pressure, in any one of these three characteristics or all three of them. This fact should indicate the importance of exact sizing of ducts and all branch ducts and grille openings.

Any obstacles placed inside a duct offer or add resistance to the flow of air and, in addition, create additional eddies. The installation of dampers, splitters or volume controls complicates the flow of air. In the final analysis, even in the simplest duct layouts, there exists a compound set of conditions that makes it difficult to estimate the resistance from drawings; frequently it is not until the completion of the duct installation that an engineer with instruments can really know exactly just what is occurring within the various trunk ducts and branch ducts. Again, there are few, if any, duct jobs that can be, or are, installed exactly as drawn; consequently, every duct installation must be carefully checked after completion.

GRILLE TYPES AND THEIR SELECTION

IF WE FOLLOWED this line of reasoning we would select our grilles after the duct work had been completed and the fan connected. In this way, with the whole market of manufactured grilles available, we could certainly produce the best possible results. However, the reverse is usually true, and the grilles are ordered when the contract is signed along with the other items of equipment. And should the grilles prove to be the wrong type, the contractor is very reluctant to make any exchanges, so an expensive air-conditioning job suffers because of an extra charge of a few dollars.

The perfect grille is one which keeps constant the required volume of air, the velocity of the air, and the direction of the discharge of the air. There are several manufacturers who are approaching the solution of this three-way problem, and it justifies very serious consideration on the part of the designing engineer to select and use the ever-improving quality products of such manufacturers.

Efforts to solve the grille problem have included the use of splitter plates or dampers in the duct intended to divide the air and to direct the desired proportion to each outlet. Existing installations in many instances have proved the need for a more positive and a more effective means of accomplishing results.

SPLITTER PLATES

Splitter plates installed in the duct system ahead of an outlet create a high-pressure area within the duct toward the supply fan, and a low-pressure area at the outlet. This system results in part or all of the outlet area falling in the low pressure area, which inturn means that the grille surface is only partially effective. If the splitter plates are installed behind the outlet location, the grille then comes in the high-pressure area toward the fan, and the velocity characteristic of the grille is ineffectually controlled. Also, as mentioned earlier, the installation of splitter plates adds to the eddying or turbulent flow of the air in the duct and may cause disturbing noises.

DAMPERS AND DEFLECTORS

Realizing all of these disturbing conditions caused by dampering and deflecting the air in the duct, the progressive grille manufacturers are aware of the fact that the proper location of a device for controlling the air volume, velocity and direction of air discharge is in a throat piece to the grille, and they have such grilles available.

Such a device of one manufacturer has a series of openings that can be individually spaced on the job, so that the desired distribution, expansion and direction of the air can be obtained. When once set, such devices should be locked or fixed in position so that uninformed persons cannot alter the adjustment.

ASPERATING EFFECT

In refrigerated air-conditioning, it is of importance that the cold air being supplied through the duct system be rather quickly mixed with the air in the conditioned space. This characteristic of some grilles is referred to as the asperating effect of the grille. Some grilles are so designed that they will pick up and entrain as much air from within the conditioned space as the cold air being delivered into the space through the grille.

The asperating feature of grilles is especially important for low ceilings, under balconies, standee spaces, and low foyers and lobbies, or for side wall horizontal delivery points that are 7 or 8 feet above the floor. The old-style, large-sized ceiling outlets employing the conventional plaques underneath them, have been outmoded by the newer types of ceiling outlets which distribute the air evenly around their entire perimeter and have the ability to create asperation of the air within the conditioned space.

ASSURING RIGHT TYPE

It is perfectly good engineering to use the grilles of two or three manufacturers on the same job, and yet I find engineers for some reason adhering to the grilles of but one manufacturer throughout for no particular reason, other than that they had but one catalog before them when they were selecting grilles. There are some manufacturers that have excellently designed ceiling outlet grilles; on the other hand, their side wall grilles are not so good. Then there are others who have very fine side wall grilles for both short and long throws but whose ceiling outlet grilles are not so good. The percentage of the total cost of air-conditioning for grilles is so small, and yet they are so vitally important that it certainly is penny wise and pound foolish to economize on this item.

The average air-conditioning proposal skims over the question of grilles very lightly, seldom giving more than one sentence to this part. For instance, it usually appears like this:

"Grilles—At locations as indicated on the plans, will be provided and installed as a part of this contract."

In such a case insist that the wording at least be changed to this:

"Grilles—Adequate grilles, at locations as indicated on the plans, will be provided and installed as a part of this contract."

The word adequate will place the responsibility right back on the contractor to provide the proper grilles, and should any of them have been selected wrongly, it will be up to the contractor to make the necessary changes at his expense.

In many of the obsolete but still existing "atmospheric" theatres, commonly of Spanish or Moorish decoration, the engineer designing the air-conditioning is greatly handicapped because the owner, operator or manager does not want the heavy ornamental plaster grilles altered or disturbed. This is a very grave mistake and a great handicap to any air-conditioning system. Such heavy plaster grilles are inefficient, adding greatly to the resistance of the system; they give no direction to the air and have no asperating characteristics. The air just pours through them without any real control. According to my experience, in every instance where such grilles have been replaced by modern, well designed grilles, the results have been almost astounding, and after a few weeks the managers or owners have become accustomed to the changed appearance of the grille and are satisfied.

There are grille manufacturers today who will provide charts on their various types of grilles which show exactly what the grilles will do to air when they are installed. It is an excellent practice to obtain such charts and literature from the manufacturers and study it. The most practical field test to determine just what a grille is performing consists in releasing a chemical smoke bomb in the duct system and observe the results in the theatre. The somke test provides a visible demonstration for any manager from it he can observe exactly what takes place in the theatre as to supply, circulation and return air. Especially from this test, "dead spots" in the auditorium can be located. After observing such a test check of the air handling equipment, the manager should insist that the contractor rectify the faults.

To design and install a good air-conditioning system and then to top it off with improper grilles is like paying a fine cabinet maker to build a beautiful piece of furniture, then painting it with red lead.

As the distribution of the conditioned air is of prime importance to the success of the system, so the proper grilles are the backbone of a well-designed and effective distribution system.—J.T.K.

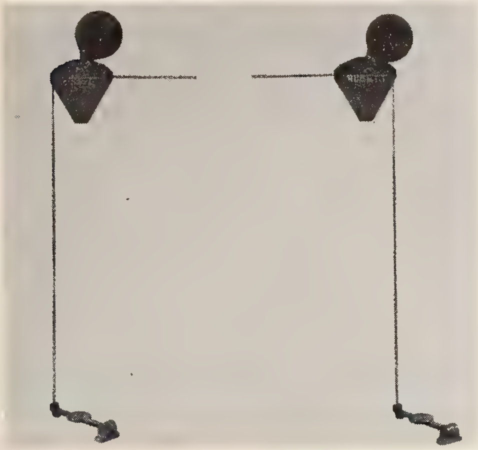
Changeover with Shutter Action Cutting Off Light

A MECHANICAL changeover cutting off the projection light, based on a combination of leverage and spring action and operated by a foot pedal, has been developed by the E. W. Hulett Manufacturing Company of Chicago.



As indicated in the accompanying photograph, shutters for the light beam of two projectors are actuated through corresponding high-speed transmission mechanisms responding as a unit to throw the shutters in the following manner:

As the incoming picture is exposed to the screen by the shutter, the picture comes upon the screen from the side, and at the same time the outgoing picture is cut off by the other shutter from the same side of the screen.

Contracts have also been signed for the installation of Photophone sound systems in Loew's and the Metro theatres in Johannesburg and Durban, South Africa, and a new Metro theatre in Brisbane, Australia. Other installations of Photophone systems recently contracted for include seventeen to be made in Ohio. The theatres are the Manhattan, Homestead, Dennison Square, Capitol, Imperial, Garden and Royal in Cleveland; Highland in Akron, Temple in Medina, and Ohio in Galion, all Associated Theatres houses. Others are Community circuit theatres—Commodore and Century, Cleveland, Strand and Lyric in Toledo; Lake in Barberton, New Lex in New Lexington, and the Beach Cliff theatre located in Rock River.

- Thirty-three theatres in thirteen States added National Super Service Company vacuum cleaners to their cleaning equipment during April and May, according to a check of a recent report from that manufacturer.

News Notes on the • THEATRE EQUIPMENT MARKET •

• A type of ozone generating machine employing vacuum tubes partially refilled with certain gasses has been developed and installed in a number of theatres by the Atmozone Company, Inc., of Oregon City, Ore. According to a statement of the company, the gasses selected are those containing "antagonistic atoms when placed under the stress of a high-frequency current." The tubes are are equipped with anode and cathode terminals, but they do not develop either a spark or electric circuit or arc. Recommended for theatres is a standardized machine of twelve tubes, which is adapted to a theatres of capacities up to 3000. The tubes and related apparatus may be under a variety of spatial conditions and applied to any type of air distribution system.

• The United States Air Conditioning Corporation of Minneapolis, is celebrating its twelfth year in the theatre ventilation field. In 1925 the company made its first installation, and today reports that there are over 6000 of its air supply and conditioning systems operating in theatres and other buildings throughout the United States.

• For those instances in which suitable resistors might not be available for sound system amplifiers, voltage divider units are available as the result of a development announced by the Clarostat Manufacturing Company of Brooklyn. Each sectional unit is a complete moulded metal-clad resistor with two terminals of the required ohmage for that section, and with these it is said to be possible to assemble one's own voltage divider according to individual requirements.

• Acousticon hearing aids for theatres and other auditoriums are now available through the RCA photophone, according to an arrangement between that organization and the manufacturers, Dictograph Products, Inc. The arrangement, which was announced by Dan D. Halpin, vice president of the latter company, became effective June 1.

• Business for the National Theatre Supply Company in the Kansas City area is about 40% ahead of a year ago for the same period, reports Walter Shreve, manager of the Kansas City branch. Most of this has come from modernization in the direction of greater comfort for the patron—new seats and ventilating equipment, although many exhibitors also have modernized their projection equipment.

Should Your Theatre Be Reseated?

of meeting today's standards of comfort has a full-spring assembly with springs spaced and tied so as to provide even tension and support over the entire surface—that is to say, to permit consistent softness without gradual loss of shape. The assembly may have a hardwood frame, or the springs may come to the edge of the cushion on all sides. The front side, of course, is bevelled, eliminating annoying interference at the calves of the leg at all times (a factor especially important with respect to women), conveniently permitting the withdrawing of feet without rising when a patron is entering or leaving the row.

The padding of the cushion has also undergone important change. The material which contributes most to the even softness of the cushion is a vegetable fibre. This formerly was likely to "powder" in time, whereas today it has become available in a form giving it the strength and durability of hair, eliminating the tendency of the cushion gradually to become bumpy and that of the springs to "cut" the covering.

Today's seat cushion has also lost practically all of its whistle upon being depressed. When fine-screen ventilator filters are employed, it scarcely has a wheeze.

Another and more disturbing noise produced by old type chairs is a "knock" when the seat is flung up or allowed to drop. There have been radical changes in hinge construction during the last few years, and one of the effects is the reduction of this type of noise, which naturally assumes greater significance as a result of sound.

As readily apparent to the patron as the difference in appearance between the modern and the older chairs is the difference in dimensions that modern seating engineering has brought about, partly as a result of posture studies. The seat of the auditorium chair today is lower than it was, while the back has been more scientifically titlted and curved. The aggregate effect of these changes is to give the body comfortable support without annoying pressure and rigid confinement. The patron who attends a theatre with modern seating cannot help being immediately conscious of a great difference in comfort and convenience upon attending a theatre with old-type seating.

In considering the effect of style—that is, the general pattern and decorative elements—one must bear in mind the significance of seating as a part of the entire auditorium treatment. Indeed, in large measure, the pattern and coloring of the chair characterizes the auditorium, decoratively. This is inevitable, since the seating is by far the great single element in the room. During the last few years design in every field has established a definite approach to the problem of form and coloration which is identified as modern. Its essential aim is to provide an aesthetic quality closely related to function, and in its effort to rule out all irrelevancies, modern design is guided by an ideal of simplicity. The change from the past thus wrought is striking; hence, a theatre with seating representative in style of ideas of beauty held prior, say, to 1930, is an old-fashioned—an obsolete—theatre in the eyes of the public, no matter how modern it may be in, for example, its front, or its mechanical facilities.

Thus it is that the question of reseating is to be approached from several directions, each of which represents a point at which the modern chair is fundamentally different from the chair of the past. First come today's standards of comfort, which the modern theatre chair has helped to create as well as to satisfy. Another factor, as we have seen, is maintenance; yet another is safety (hazard to clothing, especially). And added to these is the factor of modern design, which has revolutionized all of our notions of good appearance.—George Schutz.

Portable "Mike", Amplifier and Speaker Unit

A PORTABLE, self-contained microphone amplifying system, designed for stage, orchestra and exploitation work of all kinds, has been developed by the Sundt Engineering Company of Chicago. With 12 watts maximum output power, the amplifier unit, with speaker, is compact, measuring only 13½ by 13½ by 9 inches. It operates from 110-volt, 50-60 cycle lines. Converters for battery operation—as for example on a ballyhoo truck—are available at an additional charge.

A 12-inch loud speaker is used, and volume is found ample for announcing purposes in any theatre of average size. Outdoor coverage would vary to some extent, depending on the presence of traffic and other competing noises, but would be adequate to a city street for the length of one block, and under more favorable conditions, coverage would probably be greater.

Reducing the Hazards in Electrical Equipment Operation

[The extent of the electrical plant of a theatre, in both illumination and equipment, represents an ever-present hazard to the health and lives of employes and to the bank account of the exhibitor. The following is the larger part of discussion of such hazards by J. Rosevear, Westinghouse engineer, prepared as an address before the New Jersey chapter of the American Society of Safety Engineers.—THE EDITOR.]

THE AVERAGE individual forgets the danger of lighting equipment and electrical appliances, because of their widespread use in the home. Nearly everyone at some time has received a slight shock without any ill effects. Under some conditions these shocks become extremely dangerous, and death has occurred in many instances. The amount of shock received is dependent on the contact made and through what part of the body the current has to travel. Contacts between the hand and the arm are not as dangerous as between both hands as then the current must pass through body in the region of the heart. Contacts at both wrists instead of both hands are even more dangerous as the callous skin of the hands has more resistance than the wrists. A person who is perspiring and skin is somewhat damp, will receive a much more severe shock than if his skin is dry. Individual persons react differently to shock; what might give you or me a nasty shock might kill another person. Low voltage shock produces a muscular spasm, and if enough current flows it will cause coagulation of the blood and resultant death.

Let us first classify the types of hazards there are. I believe we may divide these into two distinct classes, the visible hazards or those hazards that may be seen at a glance and the invisible hazards or those that may be present but cannot be seen.

The visible hazards are found in exposed wiring, portable cords, broken lighting sockets, untaped terminals on motors and transformers, open knife switches and portable lamp equipment without lamp guards. . . .

EXPOSED TERMINALS

Another hazard of considerable importance is the exposed terminals on transformers, motors and rheostats, especially in apparatus of less recent manufacture but still in service. It seems that the manufacturers at that time did not consider it important, but have realized the importance in recent years and have provided suitable protection. How easy it is for a workman to touch these exposed terminals, and receive a severe shock or drop a metal tool on these terminals causing short circuit and damage the apparatus or completely shut it down as in the following case.

A painter was working in a power house, painting the wall back of the switchboard. There was at least eight feet clearance between the wall and the 200 volt copper busses. He had been cautioned to stay away from the bus and not touch it under any circumstances. The bus ran parallel to the wall at a height of about four feet. He had almost completed this area when he decided he wanted to put the gallon can of paint down, which was about one third full. Without thinking he put the can on top of both busses, which were capable of carrying 1,000 KVA at 220 volts, and many times that for a short circuit period. You can imagine the results. There was a flash, a report like an explosion, the paint disappeared, the can melted. Miraculously nobody was hurt. . . .

OPEN KNIFE SWITCHES

Open knife switches used to make and break circuits, unless in a power house under a competent operator, should be enclosed in a protecting cabinet. However, today there are so many good safety switches on the market that are totally enclosed and operated from the outside by a handle, that there should be no excuse for the continued use of knife switches for this service.

Next let us consider the invisible hazards. They are electrical distribution systems that are not grounded; balance coil circuits obtaining 110-volt lighting from 220-volt power circuits; overfusing of circuits; improper grounding of both permanent equipment and electric tools and portable lamps for specially hazardous locations.

GROUNDED SYSTEM BEST

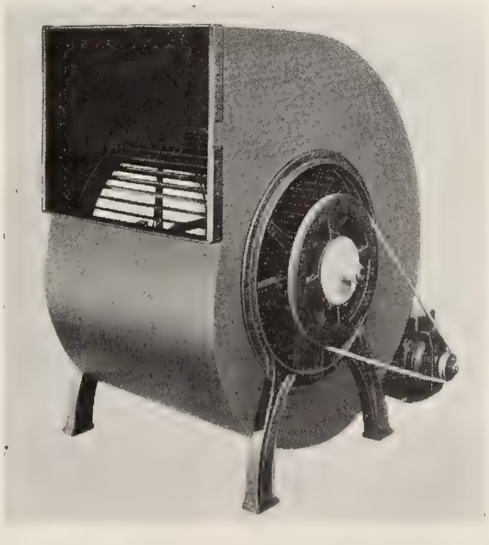
The electrical distribution system, or network systems as they are called, are of two classes, those that are grounded on the secondary 220-110 volt side and those that are not so grounded. Neither one of these systems is infallible; the grounded system with a grounded neutral wire is preferred. This system reduces the voltage strain between the conductors and ground nearly in half, depending on whether it is a two phase or three phase system. All lighting circuits may then be polarized so that the shell of the socket is at ground potential and any one touching this part of the circuit would not receive a shock. This type of wiring must use as the neutral conductor a wire having a white covering to be used for identification. Otherwise the advantages gained would be lost. Another characteristic of this network is that when a wire is grounded it immediately blows a fuse on the branch circuit; the ground must be cleared or the fuses will blow as fast as they are put in.

Many of the older types of distribution systems do not have a grounded secondary neutral. Let us see what would happen if a ground should develop on one side of the 220-volt line. Nothing as far as anybody could see, probably nobody would know it unless they should check the line for grounds. Should anyone accidentally touch the other side of the line he would receive a shock of 220 volts instead of 110 volts; there is quite a difference. On this type of distribution system if no grounds are present, one may touch either conductor separately and receive no shock. This breeds contempt for the danger or shock, and when a ground does occur a serious accident may develop. You may say, find the groun dat once and clear it; that is not as easy as it sounds, as the ground may be reflected throughout the entire distribution system.

It is necessary to mention the grounding of permanent and portable equipment, in distinction to the electrical distribution system. All equipment, such as motors, starters, machine shop equipment or any other equipment that is connected to or attached to an electrical device should be grounded. This applies to any metallic equipment that would conduct electricity, and of course does not apply to any material that would not, as an insulator, such as wood, rubber and glass. The frame of all such equipment should be connected with a suitable ground wire to a permanent ground. This protects the operator as the machine is then at ground potential.

Overfusing of lighting or power circuits is a common practice even among qualified electricians. A fuse is the safety valve in an electrical circuit and opens the circuit whenever an overload or short circuit occurs. Three types of fuses are used in low voltage circuits, the plug fuse, cartridge fuse and knife blade type. The plug fuse is used in circuits up to 30 amperes, the cartridge fuse up to 60 amperes and the knife blade type above the 60 ampere fuses. At times when circuits become overloaded and blow the fuse, instead of removing the trouble, the electrician will reinforce the fuse, with the intention of fixing it at a later date. Most of the time his memory is short and it remains as it was. How can these fuses be reinforced? Very easily. Pennies, washers, etc., are placed under plug fuses, pieces of brass turbine are substituted for cartridge fuses and pieces of flat copper for knife fuses. These fuses are generally contained in a cabinet with a door to prevent entrance to the workman and are very well concealed from the average individual. A careful inspection of the power panels and lighting cabinets will reveal these violations.

Modern, tamper proof automatic circuit breakers for distribution circuits avoid many of the hazards common to fused circuits.



Variable speed blower developed by the Wolverine Blower Works of Grand Rapids, Mich., in capacities suitable to theatres. It is driven with a V-belt silent drive and is provided with dampening means to prevent transmission of mechanical noise. Blades are concave, and direction may be reversed to provide air exhaust as desired. The capacities of theatre models vary from 5,100 to 10,000 cubic feet per minute, employing from 1/3-h.p. to 1-h.p. motors.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

Planning the Theatre Lounge

By BEN SCHLANGER

New York Theatre Architect

THE CONSIDERATION given to lounge room space and rest room facilities in a motion picture theatre is an indication to the patron of the thought given to insure his comfort. The existence or non-existence of the proper lounge and rest room facilities to a great degree "dates" the individual motion picture theatre structure. A theatre is not modern or up-to-date unless these comforts are afforded the patron to a proper degree.

Modern plumbing fixtures, wall finishes and furnishings available in the commercial field are highly satisfactory and well within the reach of the average exhibitor's budget, and so from the standpoint of availability of proper equipment, there exists no problem. The problem that does exist and one that is usually not satisfactorily solved is that of the space accommodation and proper placing and accessibility of lounge and rest rooms.

SPACE REQUIREMENTS

The space requirements for the toilet rooms proper are usually not difficult to find but adequate lounging space which should precede these rooms and act as a necessary transition between the auditorium proper and the toilet rooms usually presents a problem. Unless there is sufficient space available at the entrance end of the theatre on the main floor level for lounge and rest room use, there is usually faulty placing of these facilities. For example, it is absolutely wrong to have entrance to rest room spaces from any part of the auditorium walls which would be within the view of any of the seated patrons. Not only would such entrance positions be in poor taste, but also they are disturbing to the seated patron, due to the traffic and illuminated signs necessitated thereby.

Usually an upper or lower level is resorted to for placing rest room facilities. This scheme would be satisfactory except for the fact that in many instances these spaces are approached by a single stair leading to a small foyer space, thereby causing the entrance to the men's and women's rooms to be uncomfortably adjacent to each other. To begin with, it is not desirable to have both sexes use a common stair to such an upper or lower level unless the stair itself has a width of about at least 4 feet. Then, at the rest room level, there should be a lounge or foyer space of at least the average sized living room in the home. Such lounging space serves both to separate the entrance to the toilet rooms and to make for a comfortable waiting room.

The most desirable lounging space is a space from which a whole or partial view of the screen is possible, from at least a part of the total lounge area. This is desirable because it makes this space a place where a patron may be seated in comfort until such a time as a desirable seat is available or until the beginning of a feature. The view of the screen from this space makes the patron feel that he will not miscalculate as he easily may in a lounging space from which no idea of the seating availability or screen performance may be obtained.

It is possible, of course, to have such a lounging space as has just been described

Steel construction for a modern front and vestibule treatment, as illustrated in the Beverly theatre, Warner house in Chicago. This type of construction will also be used on a new Warner theatre in Chicago, the Rhodes, which will be constructed this summer. The box office, display frames, door handles and bars, marquee structure and attraction board frame is of Zouri stainless steel. The central panel of the front and the walls of the vestibule are in architectural glass, while the side areas of the front (also display window areas of the stores) and the base of the vestibule is in Macotta.

in addition to the lounge space mentioned as preceding the toilet rooms. Where space accommodation permits, such a provision is desirable.

A good compromise arrangement would be a lounging space from which a view of the screen may be obtained and from which either the men's or women's toilet rooms would be accessible. The other toilet room would then be placed on a different level, this level being reached, if necessary, by a fairly narrow stair. The single toilet room on a separate level would then require a minimum of anteroom space to precede the toilet room proper.

EFFECT OF CAPACITY

Theatres having a capacity of more than 600 seats should, if possible, have the two lounging spaces mentioned above—that is, a lounging space directly preceding the toilet rooms, and a lounging space having a view of the screen.

It is understood that it would be impracticable to provide enough lounging space to accommodate the amount of standees which may be in the theatre at any one popular performance; yet the presence of this lounging space, invitingly furnished, at least creates a feeling that the patron's comfort has been anticipated, and thus an impression is left with the patron which is sure to have a potential value in drawing him to the theatre on a subsequent occasion.

LOCATION

Another requisite of lounge room planning is to have the lounging space, or at least part of it, so placed that it may be viewed either directly or with a slight turn of the patron's head as he approaches the seating area from the outer lobby. This is necessary for two reasons. First, it reveals space to some patrons who otherwise may not have seen it at all, thereby encouraging its use; and secondly, it serves as a transition from the lobby to the seating area, creating a feeling of warmth and intimacy which is absent when the patron comes from the street almost directly to an auditorium seat.

The internal arrangement of the lounge, including the placing of furniture and location of openings and doors of lounging spaces, is of great importance. The locations of doors and openings will control the flow of traffic through such spaces and therefore dictate the amount of space which will be left available for the placing of the necessary furniture. In planning the lounge, care should be taken that openings and doors are so placed in relation to each other that they cause a minimum amount of the floor area to be used for traffic.

Seating arrangement in the lounge should be as informal as possible, using, preferably, fully upholstered furniture, varying the units by using pieces of single, double or triple capacity. Long benches should be avoided. Grouping should be very much the same as would be desirable in a living room in the home.

TOILET FACILITIES

Toilet rooms proper should be planned with the utmost efficiency so that a maximum space will be left available for the lounge area and also thereby keeping the cost of toilet room finish down to a minimum. Toilet room fixtures should be arranged compactly, leaving an absolute minimum of space necessary for the accessibility to the various fixtures.

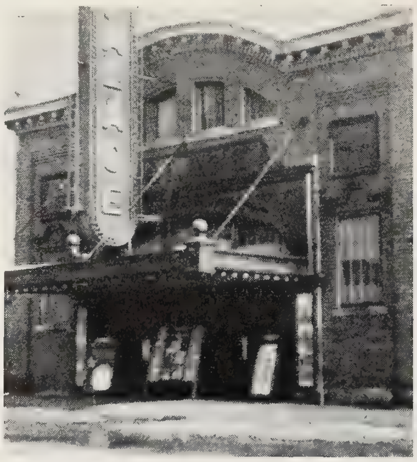
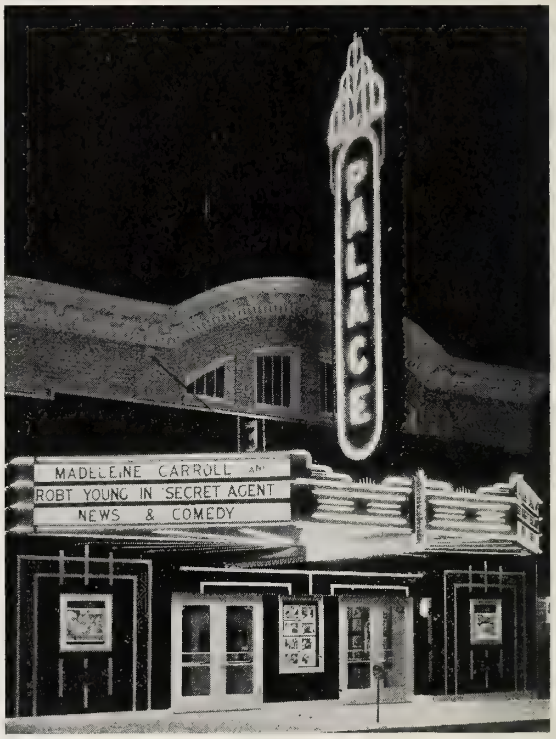
Since the cost of tiling floors and walls is high, surplus floor and wall areas are an absolute waste. It is also desirable not to have excess area in the toilet rooms proper, which would encourage loitering. Generally, it is a good policy to establish a minimum of one toilet room fixture for every 100 patrons of each sex. For theatres up to 400 seats, there should be at least one basin in each toilet room; from 400 to 600, at least two basins in each toilet room; and from 600 to 1,000 seats, at least three basins.

While maximum efficiency should be achieved in toilet room arrangement, the space devoted to each plumbing fixture should be ample, and in the case of the men's toilet room, urinals should be placed with at least 6 or 8 inches of separation between fixtures.

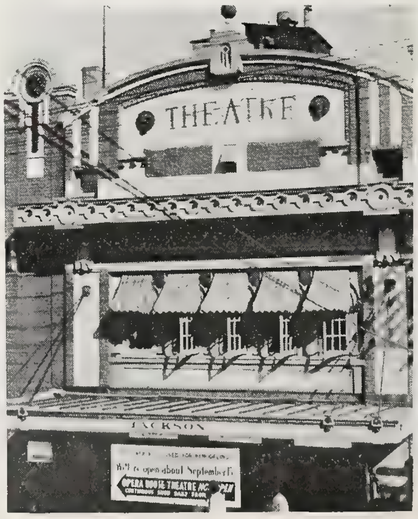
Decoration of lounging areas can be accomplished chiefly by proper lighting and well selected furnishings. Here an indirect lighting cove in the ceiling is desirable, using an occasional table lamp

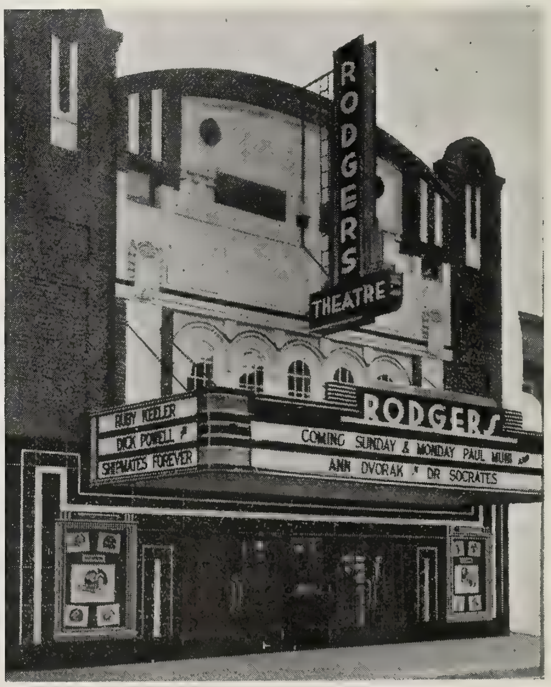
TRANSFORMED WITH GLASS





● Interesting examples of the use of architectural glass in creating modern theatre fronts in the place of obsolete treatments are shown in these pictures of recent installations of Pittco fronts. The upper views are of the Palace theatre in Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., before and after the remodeling, in which black Carrara glass with a sandblasted design rendered in painted aluminum was employed. The Palace is owned and operated by Frank Eckardt; Hogan & Henderson were the architects. The other views are of the Rodgers theatre in Cairo, Ill., owned and operated by R. W. Rodgers. Here black and ivory Carrara glass was used, with sandblasted lines in gold.





ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES

Prepared by PETER M. HULSKEN, A.I.A.

THE QUESTION:

WE HAVE a small lobby and foyer, each is about 8 x 15 feet. The lobby floor has quite a slope and I am afraid to put anything like rubber on it. What can you tell me about "Amhaco" broadfelt? I understand it is a rubberized carpet. If okay where can I get it? Will it be okay to use in both the lobby and foyer. We are subject to a lot of dampness and sand.

Lobby walls will be Celotex, mottled brown. I would like to use blue carpet if possible. The base of the foyer will be Celotex "hardboard." The openings and trim will be wood. What color should we paint that?

Doors between foyer and lobby are solid. What color would you suggest, and also the inside of the lobby, which will have one large round blue mirror on each end trimmed with a few modern strips of lath.—C. S. H.

THE ANSWER:

I REGRET that I am not familiar with the material called "Amhaco." I am, however, of the opinion that if rubber matting were recessed and metal strips employed to prevent creeping, it would be well adapted to your conditions.

If you are experiencing trouble with dampness in the walls, they should be waterproofed before such materials as Celotex are applied.

The use of blue carpet is very effective, but I am afraid that it soils too easily. Why not use a figured pattern with blue predominating as a base color! If blue is to be the base color for your decorative scheme, use this base color for the doors, and make the trim, such as casings and base, two shades darker. Paint the mouldings silver. If the doors are of a flush type, paint three silver vertical stripes about one inch wide and two inches apart in the center of each door. This will break the monotony of too large an area of color. Paint the walls in coral and the ceiling in ivory. This will give a very pleasant color combination.

THE QUESTION:

WE ARE contemplating the erection of a new theatre in the near future. Our lot is 150 x 130 feet, facing the main street in the downtown section, with a 16-foot alley in the rear and one alley to the left. We would like to have as close as possible to 1,000 seats on one floor. What size should the auditorium be? We do not require any stage, but would like to have a platform about 15 feet deep.

As the frontage of our lot is valuable, we would like to have a few store rooms, facing the main street, as they will bring good rentals, therefore give us a description of how the plan should be arranged.

We are confronted with a serious problem, the land is marsh land and the foundation walls will have to rest on piles. The high water mark is 2 feet above rear alley level; but unfortunately the sidewalk level on Main Street is 7 feet, 6 inches above rear alley level.

How do you suggest to take care of the boiler room, as it is impossible to have same under any part of the building? Could we arrange the heating plant so that it would take care of heating the stores also?—F. H. S.

THE ANSWER:

THE MOST economical seating arrangement for a 1,000-seat auditorium is a center bank of fourteen seats across with an aisle on each side, and two wall banks of seven seats each across. This will give 28 seats across the width of the auditorium, and will require 36 rows of seats. So the size of the auditorium will be 60 feet wide and 125 feet deep. This will leave sufficient space for a foyer.

The general layout of your building should be arranged, as follows: Plan for an entrance lobby 20 feet wide at the right of your lot, this lobby to extend to a foyer at rear of auditorium. The auditorium would be placed along the rear alley. This would leave for store rooms an area of 130 x 60 feet, after deduction has been made for an exit court between auditorium and rear of store rooms. You will be able to obtain six store rooms.

You are quite fortunate in that the entrance sidewalk level is 5 feet, 6 inches above the high water mark; by inclining the lobby floor slightly you will be able to have the lower part of the auditorium above the high water level.

The boiler room could be built at the rear or side of the auditorium platform with the floor level the same as the low part of the auditorium floor. You can easily arrange to heat the stores from this central heating plant.

For piling, I suggest that you use pile clusters. By this I mean to group the piles where the heaviest loads occur, such as under steel or concrete columns supporting roof trusses. Reinforced concrete beams can be built on top of these clusters to support the masonry walls and floors. Your architect should be able to work these suggestions out with satisfactory results.

As your aisles are 58 inches wide, I suggest that you use two widths of carpet. Carpet is 27 inches wide, so you will have only a small margin along the seats. I do not like the effect of single width carpet, showing a large margin of floor surface. In the majority of cases this is done for sake of economy only.

THEATRE ACOUSTICS TODAY:

2. Design and Construction

• The second article of a series comprehensively dealing with acoustical considerations in theatre planning, construction, remodeling and decoration

By C. C. POTWIN

IN THE preceding article we dealt with the general relationships between acoustics and auditorium form, discussing the long auditorium.

The second class of theatres having decidedly unfavorable proportions is the type with the floor plan approaching a square. There are two major acoustical defects presented by this shape; namely, a large rear-wall area in the path of the direct sound and an unfavorable floor plan relative to the best distribution of sound over the entire seating area. The provision of a balcony in a theatre of this shape helps to effect a partial "break-up" of the direct sound wave as it progresses toward the rear wall. In most cases the remaining part of the direct sound wave striking the exposed rear-wall areas may then be absorbed satisfactorily through the application of the proper acoustic treatment at these points.

In those cases where the upper rear-wall surface is to present an offset section well broken in contour and of moderate height and depth, and the lower rear wall behind this offset is either to be well broken or is located behind a heavily-draped standee rail, acoustic treatment of the proper type and amount applied to the major portion of the surface will generally be sufficient. When balconies or well-broken offsets and draped standee rails are not to be provided, and the entire area including both the upper and lower sections is to be practically flat in contour, there is no material change in the shape of the wave front striking the rear wall and, consequently, it is reflected back in substantially its true form and at almost undiminished power into the seating area. This creates a very serious echo condition throughout the major portion of the seating area.

With the use of acoustic treatment alone to offset the direct reflections which make up this return wave, it is frequently necessary to resort to the application of excessively absorbent materials. Here, as in the case of the long theatre, the danger lies in the fact that the proper reduction in the reverberation time, and the best distribution of treatment throughout the auditorium, may be altered by the large amount of sound absorbtion required on a specific surface.

If it is necessary to follow a square contour in theatre planning and the conventional methods of break-up cannot be applied, steps should then be taken to provide for irregularity in the design of the flat rear-wall surface. This may be accomplished by dividing this wall into angular sections designed to splay the sound at random from this surface instead of reflecting it directly back into the seating area. An angular rear wall of this type, used in conjunction with the proper acoustic treatment, will insure a better over-all condition throughout the auditorium than the flat rear wall excessively treated.

Here is a second consideration: A certain number of seats at each front side on the square floor plan will lie outside the limits of good vision as well as good sound coverage. The space normally occupied by these seats may be utilized to further improve the acoustic design. This may be accomplished by adopting a floor plan narrower at the front and gradually increasing in width toward the rear of the auditorium.

The several principles of surface design described herein have proved highly beneficial from an acoustic standpoint in every case where they have been utilized. It can be appreciated that steps taken in design and before treatment to more efficiently control sound reflections from and between surfaces, are contributing to a better over-all acoustic condition, particularly in those theatres which must necesarily have an unfavorable ratio of proportion.

CURVED SURFACES

Considerable material has been presented on previous occasions concerning the importance of eliminating curved surfaces from the design of new theatres. Although the acoustical defects introduced by such surfaces should by now be generally understood, new designs are not uncommon in which provision has been made for a curved rear wall or an arched ceiling. Even though the center of curvature may lie outside the limits of the seating area, these surfaces are very harmful and contribute in no small degree to inferior sound quality in theatres. If the architectural treatment of the ceiling presents a major problem, it is well to bear in mind that a very effective result may be accomplished both aesthetically and acoustically, by providing for a non-uniform triangular break-up in the design of this surface.

METHODS OF CONSTRUCTION

THE METHOD of construction is another important factor affecting the acoustic design of theatres. In the design of a strictly fireproof theatre, the basic wall structure generally will consist of either heavy brick or tile. For interior surface finishing, plaster will either be applied directly to this base wall or to metal lath furred out from this wall. The ceiling will usually be of the suspended type consisting of plaster on metal lath or its equivalent. It is the manner in which the interior surfaces are constructed and finished that also has a definite effect on the acoustic condition of theatres.

Experience has proved that furred walls and suspended ceiling surfaces, even those seemingly as rigid as plaster on metal lath, contribute a certain amount of sound absorption at the low frequencies. These surfaces, if properly designed, tend to ab-frequency sound waves by their diaphragmatic damping action. Surfaces of heavy solid construction, such as plaster applied directly to brick or tile, do not give this effect and tend to reflect all bua a minute part of the low-frequency sound waves.

ABSORPTION OF LOWS

As will be explained subsequently, one of the major problems in the acoustic treatment of theatres lies in providing for adequate low-frequency absorption. Furred walls and suspended ceilings used in fireproof construction will not fully compensate for the discrepancies encountered in the average theatre, and additional sound absorption in the form of acoustic treatment will also be required to reduce the reverberation time to the proper degree at these frequencies. However, it should be understood clearly that this method of construction, if properly applied, will contribute at least a limited amount of sound absorption at the low frequencies and will thus help to place less stringent requirements on the acoustic treatment.

The amount of low-frequency absorption provided by this form of construction is naturally dependent to a large extent upon the flexibility of the materials used. For this reason a proportionately greater degree of low-frequency absorption may be obtained in non-fireproof construction through the use of certain tiles and fibre boards for interior surface finishing, applied to suitable furring or studding over the base structure. The absorption characteristics and possible use of this type of material will be discussed later.

BRACING OF FURRING

In the design and application of all types of furred construction, it is of extreme importance to provide for the proper bracing of materials. If the distance between furring or studding is too great, or insufficient framing is used, pronounced surface resonance may result. Surface resonance produces one of two conditions: (1) either it tends to reinforce sound energy at certain frequencies; or (2) it effects an undue absorption of sound at these frequencies, depending upon the nature of the defects in construction and the geometrical relationship of the surfaces to the source of sound. If conditions such as these are introduced in design, an intricate acoustic problem is encountered in planning the final acoustic treatment.

Furred surfaces properly designed and securely braced may be incorporated very favorably in the plans for surface break-up previously suggested. Here, two functions are fulfilled by one method of surface design; namely, the introduction of a moderate degree of low-frequency absorption, together with an effective break-up of multiple or direct sound reflections.

ACOUSTIC FACTORS IN STAGE DESIGN

THE ACOUSTICS of the stage is another important consideration in the design of modern motion picture theatres. Since the advent of sound reproducing systems, the large legitimate stage has been reduced in size and in a manner consistent with the requirements for good vision and effective sound distribution. The space formerly occupied by the large stage in the vaudeville theatre has been utilized in present design to increase capacity.

In planning the stage design and determining the proper position of the screen relative to the seating area, it is very important that sufficient space be allowed between the screen and the rear wall of the stage for the subsequent installation of the horns and baffle associated with the sound system. From an acoustic standpoint, a spacing of 9 feet free and clear of any obstructions is preferred at this point, although a minimum tolerable limit of 5 feet is acceptable with the use of the very latest types of sound systems.

The walls of the stage should be of heavy, solid construction, and the floor should be well braced to prevent excessive resonance. It is highly advantageous to provide angular break-up within the section of the stage rear wall in line with the screen. Flat non-parallelism between the side walls and between the ceiling and floor is also a very desirable feature. This may be achieved by splaying the side walls to a limited degree from the rear to the front of the stage, and by slightly reducing the height at the rear to allow for a sloping ceiling surface.

Ventilating ducts should preferably be eliminated from the stage-proper. If the space limitations are such that ducts must be installed in this section of the theatre, they should be located at the extremities of the stage and not in the area behind the screen. Furthermore, outlets should be positioned in such a manner that air draughts do not enter or cross the direct sound beams at points directly in front of the stage. When metal ducts are used, they must be well "damped" acoustically, to prevent mechanical resonance.

A limited amount of stage treatment in the form of drapes or acoustic material will generally be required when the sound system is installed. The actual quantity and its proper positioning will be governed by the acoustic characteristics of the individual stage and the extent to which back-stage reflections from, and between, surfaces are controlled in the original design of this section of the theatre.

[In his next article, Mr. Potwin will deal with the requirements for surface acoustic treatment of theatres relative to new structures and modernization; particular stress will be placed on the importance of carefully selecting acoustic materials with respect to their sound absorption values at the low, middle and high frequencies, respectively. Mr. Potwin is a member of the technical consulting staff of Electrical Research Products, Inc., dealing with acoustical problems.—THE EDITOR.]

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

The Theatre's Right to Prints In Good Mechanical Condition

THE IATSE AND MPMO has done yeoman service in improving projectionists' conditions of work and remuneration, both in these United States and Canada. In view of the increasing complexity of the work, and patrons' intolerance of poor projection and sound reproduction, the demand for increases in wages and better working conditions was to be expected. True, some unions, in some instances have not acted wisely—nor too well, but viewed as a whole, considering the hundreds of local unions involved, it surely must be admitted that such instances have been few and far between. Also they are now very rare, indeed.

Today it may be justly said that the IA organization, viewed as a whole, under the able leadership of its International President, George E. Browne, is functioning efficiently and fairly. This is, I feel, only paying just tribute, not only to the organization itself, but to its leadership.

There is, however, one point to which I desire to direct attention. It is one that should have consideration, not only by the organization as a whole, but by its various local unions. It is the proud and justified boast of the IA that its members are competent projectionists, yet it is a fact that, with few, if any, adequate protests from local unions, and none at all from the organization as a whole, films are being delivered to theatres in such condition that good results cannot possibly be attained with them. As I see it, both the international organization and its individual local unions not only have the right, but the duty to enter most vigorous protest against this.

True, the unions have no available means for compelling the delivery of films in safe condition for projection. That is quite true, but the fact remains that in most, if not in all States and cities, there are safety regulations upon which protest could be effectively based.

Some States, Connecticut for one, and most Canadian provinces, already have such a department rule. In them projectionists are required to report receipt of such films to the department under penalty of license revocation upon failure. The guilty exchange is immediately warned.

In justice let me say that today many exchanges thoroughly inspect and repair prints, sending out none in poor condition as to mechanical faults. Many are also keeping the prints very reasonably clean. However, that does not by any manner of means apply to all film service. I present part of a letter received from a progressive projectionist who rightly regards the service received as an outrage to himself, his profession, the exhibitor, the public and the whole industry, in all of which, assuming his report to be correct, I agree. He says:

"This theatre is under a 'play or pay' contract. The films delivered to us are not only very old prints, but also are in such miserable condition that they are both unfit to show and unsafe to project. Last week we had a production, the films of which were very brittle, and the splices just would not hold. There was a fire at the last half of the second reel and during the first half of the fourth, probably caused by bits of the very brittle stuff breaking off and lodging in the aperture. By quick action I got by with nothing worse than a few burned frames and two show stoppages. But the screen image was just awful—splotches of dirt, rain, punch marks in every reel! Patrons walked out in disgust.

"What I want to know is, can we be forced to accept such terrible stuff as 'film service?' Has the theatre no protection at all against such things? Cannot exchanges be forced to deliver films in at least decent condition, regardless of class of service? Both myself and our manager will await your answer eagerly, and with some anxiety."

His is a small town. The theatre shows three evenings and one matinee a week. It probably has a restricted patronage and cannot pay high prices for film service. However, the fact that the service is of the cheaper grade does not give the exchange the right to endanger the lives of patrons, or to deliver a service that makes it impossible to put on an acceptable show.

ANOTHER TOUR AMONG PROJECTION FOLKS

I HAVE just returned from another tour of a large section of the country, making talks before meetings of projectionists and observing projection affairs in many cities. It was one of the most extensive trips I have made for that purpose, about 4,000 miles being recorded on the meter of my gas-buggy. And it was also one of the most enjoyable, since the meetings were well attended, the men attentive, and union officials most hospitable. There isn't the space necessary to tell everything that I found interesting, but I am going to make at least a general report.

TRENTON, N. J.

My first stop was at Trenton, N. J., which has thirteen theatres for approximately 150,000 people in the city and pos-

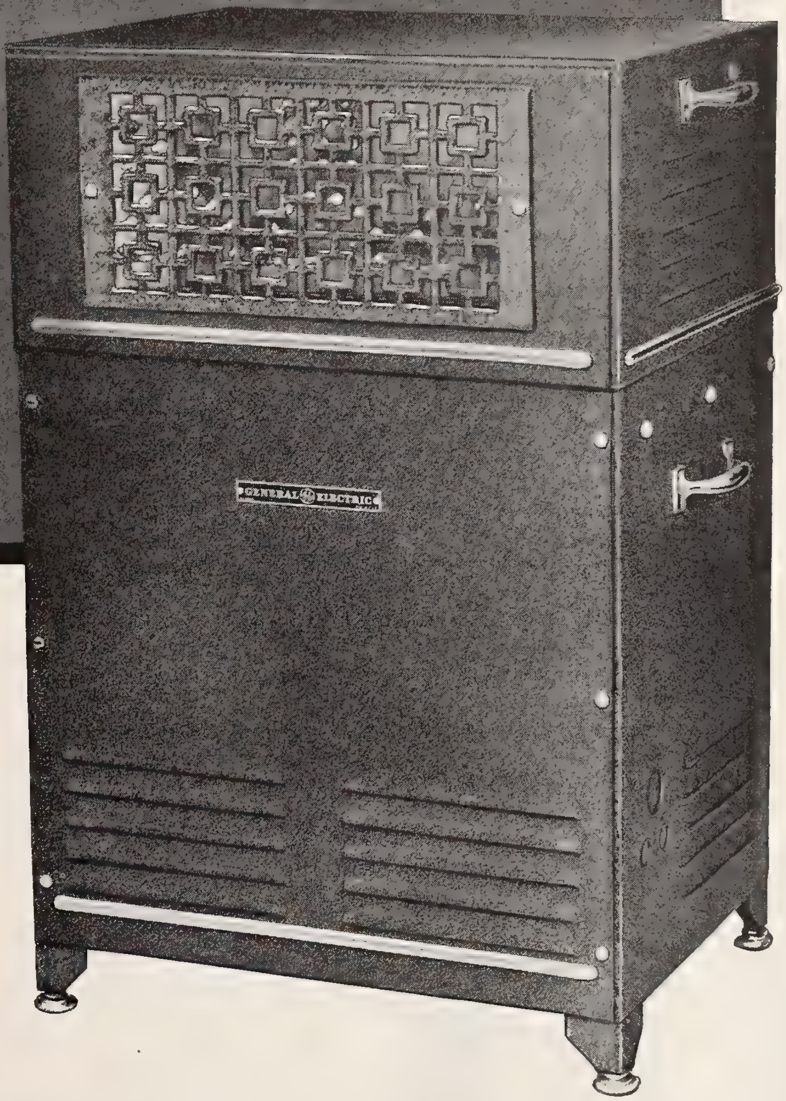
10 FEATURES

Found Only In G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers



Every feature of the new G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier for Projection Service contributes to its easy installation . . . low-cost operation . . . dependability. Study the features carefully. The superiority of this G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier is unmistakable.

- *1. Two-piece construction. Top section contains transformer and control panel. Base contains copper oxide elements, relays and blower. That makes for easy and speedy installation.
- 2. Multi-unit transformer for 3-phase, full-wave rectification, makes possible very smooth output.
- 3. Taps permit adjustments for any line voltage from 190 to 250 volts.
- 4. Secondary taps permit a wide range of adjustment in arc voltage and current to meet individual needs.
- *5. New method of mounting copper oxide units. Eliminates multiplicity of wires and soldered joints.
- 6. Copper Oxide Rectifier unit assembly is a permanent rectifying device of proven reliability. It operates indefinitely without attention or replacement.
- *7. Blower system (patented) for forced ventilation of copper oxide units. By this system, units are maintained at about room temperature.
- 8. Relays provide protection in event of line failure and permit operating the unit by remote control.
- 9. Substantial steel case with attractive crackle finish. Plain exterior, free from switches and controls.
- *10. Every part of the G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier is manufactured by General Electric. Each part is properly co-ordinated with every other part. The G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier is fully guaranteed by General Electric.

*This feature is exclusive with G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers.

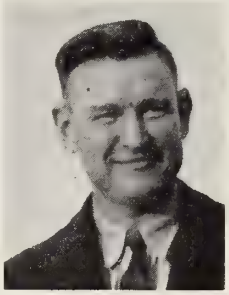
theatre; Leon Vogel, secretary of the union, and L. V. Bankford, a member thereof, took me out some 30 miles to partake of a Smithfield ham dinner, and the day's roadwork had surely put me in condition for it.

Later I observed projection at the Norfolk and found it most excellent. The staff is composed of T. Twiford, Arthur Garey, H. T. Wilkins and Mell Rose.



Frank Sutton

A. T. Sparrow

The Norva theatres is managed by Pierre Boulogne, with Floyd Stawls as assistant. The Norva seats 1,644.

After the shows closed, every projectionist in Norfolk, plus several managers, among them Mr. Sparrow, plus C. E. Riddle, Charles Buhhy, W. H. Whitman, J. W. Garrison, E. L. Saunders and W. E. Tench, projectionists from Local 264, Newport News, attended the meeting at union headquarters.

LYNCHBURG, VA.

Lynchburg is known locally as the "City of Hills," which is not a misnomer. I pointed my gas buggy at one of them and I thought she was going to bite me. On and among Lynchburg's ups and downs live some 45,000 people. Three of the theatres, Paramount, Isis and Trenton, do not admit colored people; the Academy has a balcony set apart for them and on the outskirts is a small theatre, the Harrison, devoted exclusively to colored patronage.

The Academy is managed and in part owned by J. F. Falls. At the time of my visit its projection room was presided over by L. J. Godsey, who is secretary of the local. The theatre is doing an excellent business. That is, in fact, the report I have had all along the line.

The Isis theatre is managed by A. C. Ball; H. G. Preas is his assistant. The projection room is spacious and intelligently lighted. C. J. Miles is the projectionist. The screen is at the entrance end of the auditorium. Inquiry as to that stunt elicited the reply, "Well, it has its advantages," but the tone of voice was not enthusiastic.

The Paramount is managed by Willis Grit, who also is city manager for the Paramount, Isis and Trenton. At the time of my visit to the theatre, M. J. Day, business representative of the union, was in charge of projection.

DURHAM, N. C.

From Lynchburg I sped down to Durham, where, because a letter had miscarried, they still did not know whether or when I was coming, but within a few minutes after I appeared at the Criterion theatre and contacted G. E. Hayes, Secretary of Local 417, things were humming, plans being made to notify the unions in other places as well. I was advised that the managers were just as deeply interested in the matter as were the men themselves. I was conducted to the best hotel in the city and advised that it was "on the local."

I had lunch at the home of C. M. Rumley, president of the union, and dinner at the home of Secretary Hayes, both of whom have beautiful homes.

On Sunday evenings theatres are obliged to shut down from 7 to 8:30 o'clock, so that people will not be attracted away from the churches, so at 7 o'clock I addressed a gathering of several managers and assistant managers, all Durham projectionists and the following members of other locals: Arthur Paluka and James Howell of Raleigh, N. C., and J. S. Saintsing and J. W. Thompson of Wilson-Goldsboro.

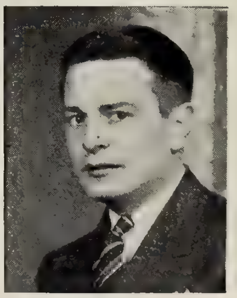
The Durham theatre people impressed me as forward-looking men who try earnestly to improve. They do not look along a level plain, but upward. It was stimulating to meet them.

C. M. Rumley and G. E. Hayes, Durham, N. C.

South of Durham I paused for lunch at Danville, and spying the Broadway theatre opposite, I sought out its manager, B. F. Smart, for a chat. The Broadway is in the center of the business section of that city of 37,000 population. It seats 700.

SPARTANBURG, S. C.

On my way to Greenville, S. C., where the next meeting was scheduled, I stopped at Spartanburg, and since the Greenville meeting was not to be held until the following night, I suggested to Ervine Stone, whom I called on at the State theatre, that we try to hold a meeting that night in Spartanburg. He approved the idea heartily and called up R. B. Talbert, city manager for the Wilby-Kincey circuit, who also liked the notion, and immediately the plans were set in motion for a gathering of the clan.



B. F. Smart, Danville

Mr. Talbert also manages the Carolina theatre, with Carol White as his assistant. I must compliment Mr. Talbert and Mr.

White, as well as the projectionists, Henry Childress and George Spillers, upon the excellence of the Carolina projection. If it is always as good as at the moment I stopped, looked and listened, then they have reason to be proud of themselves.

All Spartanburg theatres operate with one-man shifts.

At 11:30 p. m. all managers, assistant managers and projectionists met at the State theatre. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Talbert, who said that such talks could not help being beneficial to both management and projectionists.

GREENVILLE, S. C.

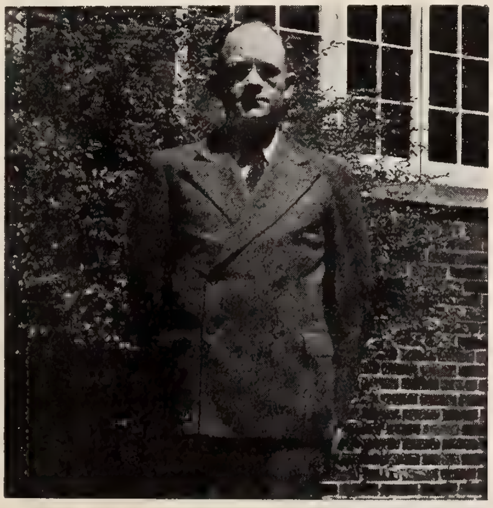
In Greenville I was greeted most cordially by the officers of Local 697 and H. T. Lashley, city manager for the Wilby-Kincey theatres, who joined with the local union officers in securing a full attendance of managers and assistant managers. Mr. Lashley manages the Carolina theatre in Greenville, the excellent projection room of which is presided over by Guy Bryson and Lewis Machen.

The Paris theatre in Greenville was also visited. It is managed by H. V. Wynne, who is assisted by Paul W. Childers. The seating capacity is 810. Projection is by John E. Moses, who is secretary of Local 697, and by J. Harold Austin. The meeting, at which Mr. Lashley presided, was attended by all projectionists, managers and assistant managers of the city.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.

I had addressed the men of this city twice before and this time they made plans for a meeting to include all projectionists, managers and assistant managers. I was too tired to get around to many theatres; also, it was necessary to worry the typewriter a bit.

The Chattanooga meeting was held at the Tivoli theatre, another Wilby-Kincey house, and one of the most charming theatres I have ever been in. It is managed by E. R. Rogers, who is also city manager for the circuit. The projection, which is handled by J. B. Lowry, A. C. Kamin and W. C. Belcher, with P. R. Neligan as relief man, is most excellent.



Chattanooga's Charles E. Curle.

While in Chattanooga I had lunch with

Projectionist George Overend at his beautiful home overlooking the valley. Brother Overend has been in projection for 30 years, and his stalwart son is following in his footsteps.

I was also the guest of Charles E. Curle, who is secretary of the Chattanooga local. Charlie has been my friend for many years. He's a projectionist by avocation as well as vocation, spending out of his own "kick" to get precision instruments for making tests, especially in sound.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

Leaving Chattanooga, I trekked northward through Nashville, Tenn. (where the local had reported current conditions which made a meeting impracticable) to Springfield, Ill. No meeting had been arranged there, but I immediately contacted C. E. Horn, president of Local 323, and he got busy at once to arrange one. I was privileged to address four managers and about a dozen projectionists that night.

I had chats with Thomas Finin at the beautiful Orpheum theatre, with Leo Bernstein, manager of the Capitol and Empress theatres, and also with Dominic Giachetto of the Roxy. All reported business excellent.

My next stop of any significance was at Unionville, Mo., where the Royal theatre, owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Summers, occupies land upon which my father had a furniture factory about 65 years ago. And I soon became interested in the Royal for other reasons.

That little 440-seat theatre was an eye-opener and surely demonstrated the high type of small town exhibitors that Mr. and Mrs. Summers are. It is air-conditioned and well equipped for a house of that size. The decorative treatment is in excellent taste.

My only criticism was of the screen illumination. It was not bright enough. I do not advocate more light on the screen than is necessary for a sharp image, but the Royal picture, which is 14 feet wide, was not bright enough. Arthur Turpen is in charge of projection and I found him to be well instructed in projection technique.

In the basement of the theatre Mr. Summers has a film developing plant, with about a dozen employes. He receives films, I learned, from all over the country for developing.

BURLINGTON, IA.

Burlington has a small local and three operating theatres, the Palace, Iowa and Avon.

L. J. Wagner manages the Palace, with Loyd Shannon as assistant. Projection is in charge of Harry Burke, financial secretary, and Joseph Harter, president, of Local 385, with Leo Burke, business representative, as relief.

H. B. Lyons manages the Iowa, with Robert Marsailes as assistant. Projection is handled by Ben Jacoby and Fred Krabbe, with William Moore as relief.

Ira Lee manages the Avon. William Tiemeir is his assistant, and William An-

Revised Sixth Edition

F. H. RICHARDSON'S BLUEBOOK OF PROJECTION

The sixth edition of F. H. Richardson's Bluebook is now in its second printing, for which it has been extensively revised. In addition to revisions in text, it contains a supplementary chapter devoted to developments which have become important in projection room technique and servicing methods since the first printing.

The revised edition includes 736 pages of up-to-the-minute text, charts and data with detailed description of assembly, wiring and functioning of all modern sound and projection apparatus. It is a practical "trouble shooter," cross indexed for immediate reference in any projection room emergency.

If you wish a copy of this essential book, it will be necessary that you fill in and mail the coupon without delay.

derson and Roy Standard the projectionists.

The Iowa local may be small, but it did itself proud. All members were present at the Palace theatre for the meeting and the managers as well. There were also men from Galesburg and Fort Madison.

AKRON, OHIO

It had been suggested that on my trip back East, I appear before the Peoria, Ill., local. Arriving there, I found L. C. Worley, city manager for the Great States circuit, and M. H. Eagle, manager of the Palace, highly in favor of a meeting, but the local officials did not want to call a meeting for that night because a union meeting had been held just the night before, so I went on to Akron.

No meeting had been scheduled for Akron, but after a chat with Harry Cocks, manager of the Strand theatre, who was very much in favor of one, and with one of his projectionists, Albert Wright, president of Local 364, who felt likewise, effective arrangements were made with the union business representative, John A. Shuff.

"On such short notice," he said, "we cannot get out all of our 60 members, but I can guarantee that you won't have to talk to empty chairs."

To make matters even less promising, it began to rain. Nevertheless, about 30 projectionists were present, and also a number of managers.

Akron was my last stop of any duration, except for Williamsport, Pa., where I paid a long-promised visit to W. K. Glodfelter, president of Local 411, and his charming family.

ODD CASE OF FILM DAMAGE

ALVIN E. WHEELER, projectionist of the Fairy theatre in Knox, Ind., who has served that theatre for twelve years, submits a sample of film with a defect that I located only with difficulty.

The fault is most peculiar, consisting in a thin, curved hair line close to the inner edge of each sprocket hole on the non-track side. It might or might not be visible upon the screen. On the inner edge of each sprocket hole on the sound track side is a bow-shaped, semi-transparent area impinging very slightly upon the edge of the sound track. It might or might not be picked up with the sound.

Careful examination under a powerful glass discloses no evidence of damage of any kind to the film stock. No evidence appears of any sprocket hole being in any degree strained or bent. So far as appearance goes the fault very likely is inherent in the print.

I have encountered nothing just like this in my long experience. I submitted the film sample to two expert film men, each of whom agreed that infliction of such marks by a projector without damage to the film stock itself seemed impossible, with which conclusion I must myself agree. I therefore am laying the matter before you other projectionists in the hope that some one of you may have had similar trouble and ascertained its cause.
